

$7.5 million budget OK'd by village

A $7.5 million budget was approved for 1977-78 Monday night by the Arlington Heights Village Board.

Most of the increase in the budget over the $6.8 million budget for 1976-77 is due to the hiring of 13 new employees, including five police officers and three paramedics.

No decisions were made by the board on a request from Omni-House: Youth Services Bureau for an appropriation of $43,500 or a recommendation from the village administration that a 10 per cent parking tax be applied at commercial parking lots.

FUNDING FOR Omni-House has been withheld because village officials have been denied information they requested to evaluate the counseling center's service.

The parking tax has been stalled by objections from Arlington Park Race Track officials who say collection of the tax would cause traffic to back up into streets and cause track patrons to park in residential neighborhoods.

The budget approved Monday will mean a municipal property tax rate for 1977 (which will be collected in August 1978) of about $1.27 per $100 of assessed valuation.

The tax rate would be much higher if the quadrennial reassessment for Wheeling Township had not been conducted this year, Finance Director Kenneth Bonder said. Current projections from the county assessor's office show the assessed valuation for the village will increase about 25 per cent, he said.

THE TAX RATE to cover the village's budget in 1975 (collected last August) was the $1.08 per $100 of assessed valuation. Because of the quadrennial reassessment estimates, the tax rate for 1976 (to be collected in August 1977) will drop to about 98 cents per $100 of assessed valuation.

The tax rate estimates, however, could change significantly, depending on final assessed valuation figures, the village board's decisions on the proposed parking tax and funding of Omni-House, and the Illinois General Assembly's decision on a bill to raise local admission taxes at racetracks.

The admission tax increase, if passed, would mean an additional $200,000 revenue for the village. Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson said last week he will withdraw his recommendation for the parking tax, which would produce about $100,000 a year, if the admissions tax increase is approved by the state legislature.

Violence in day of abductions

From Herald news services

A flurry of hostage-taking took place Monday in the United States and Canada. Three separate incidents occurred in Baltimore, Toronto, and Freeport, Ill. The Freeport case ended in death for the abductor.

Frank DeBoer, who held a Freeport policeman hostage and shot another one, died Monday of wounds sustained in a gun battle with state, county and local police.

DeBoer, 42, gave police 15 minutes to clear away from the home where he held Lt. Jack Munda hostage. He then raced from his home, shooting. DeBoer was shot in the head and chest. Munda was unharmed.

The gunman was admitted to Freeport Memorial Hospital, where he underwent surgery. He was later transferred to St. Anthony's Hospital in Rockford, where he died.

Kyle Kuhlmeier, the wounded policeman, was in good condition with wounds in the hand, foot and leg.

IN TORONTO, a self-described former mercenary in the Congo held three bank employees and a police sergeant hostage at gunpoint, demanding a C-130 Hercules to fly him to Uganda to meet his "pal" President Idi Amin.

The man, who identified himself as Bob McLagan, 38, of Vancouver, released 11 other hostages unharmed in the first few hours of the stand-off with police at the downtown Bank Canadian National. The gunman was holding employees Luc Loiselle, Pierre Chaisson, Michel Plouffe, and Police Sgt. Bill Donaldson at the point of a 12-gauge shotgun. The department of National Defense said there were Hercules C-130s at the Canadian Forces Base in suburban Downsview, but refused to say if the planes would be used. Police were continuing to negotiate with the gunman.

IN BALTIMORE, a security guard put down his two guns and machete three hours after taking his eight children, his wife, and about 35 others hostage in a city office. The man, identified as Anthony Griffin, released all but a few of the hostages shortly after the takeover of the Department of Social Services. He surrendered at 6 p.m.

Police said "no deals" were made with Griffin.

DOZENS OF CITIZENS had their say on critical energy issues at a town meeting Monday in Chicago. A panel of Federal

Energy Administration representatives listened to comments during the day-long meeting at the Illinois Institute of Technology campus on the city's South Side.

Satellites to windmills touted at energy forum

by LEA TONKIN

Ideas ranging from cosmic energy to satellites in outer space collecting the sun's rays were offered as solutions Monday to energy problems discussed at a Federal Energy Administration town meeting in Chicago.

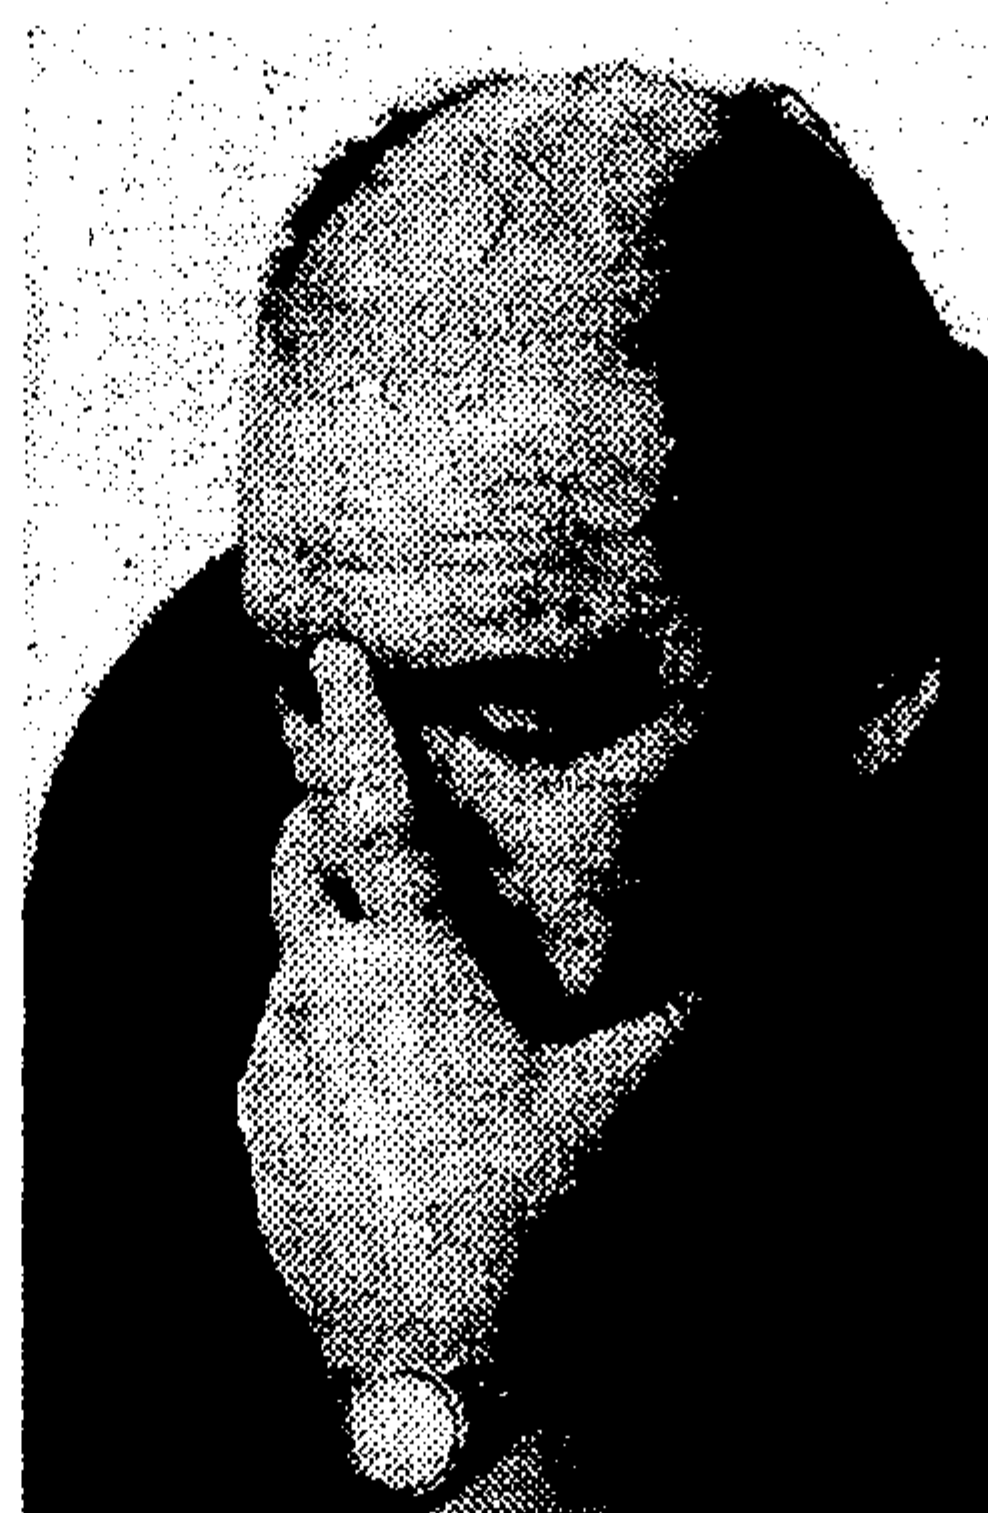

Callint for ideas from people who believe they can help solve the nation's energy problems, the agency invited the public to a forum at the Illinois Institute of Technology campus in Chicago. Residents from Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio and Wisconsin were invited to offer their views on energy issues.

Consumers, salesmen, industry executives and environmental activists took the opportunity to sound off about national energy policy.

LEADING OFF the discussion, William Reeve of Palatine called for long-term solutions to United States energy shortage problems and less government regulation of prices and supply. As vice president, secretary and general manager of Chemplex Co., Rolling Meadows, Reeve favors conservation programs and increased development of coal and nuclear energy.

Hefty consumer savings in home heating costs would be possible if the government stressed energy conservation in building materials, said Naperville resident John Orava. He criticized federal housing agencies, which he said seem to be unaware of energy efficient building materials and outdated building codes.

Cosmic energy was on Jerome Forneck's mind when he tried to sell the concept to the government. But "stupid procedures" make it difficult for creative people in the energy development field to make a buck, Forneck told the FEA panel. Cosmic rays are atomic particles from outer space which enter the earth's atmosphere at high speed.

Potential safety problems in a automatic furnace dampers should be overcome as one solution to home energy conservation problems, said Victor Algin, a Chicago resident. Algin also favors development of satellite solar systems which could capture the sun's rays as an energy resource.

Another self-proclaimed energy conservation specialist, Dave Hale of Hickory Hills offered a demonstration of fans that circulate warm air. The contraption included a fan attached to a long yellow flexible tube.

ENERGY RESEARCHER Ira Charak of Western Springs said the United States needs expansion of energy use to achieve an increased gross national product. Nuclear power is "clean, safe and cheap," he said.

"Massive social upheavals" can be expected if the United States fails to overcome energy problems, said engineer Robert Boyar of LaGrange. Boyar supported the nuclear breeder reactor for energy use.

Windmills and other "appropriate technology" should be considered as alternatives to conventional energy resources, said Roger Heimer, representing the Community Action against Poverty energy program in Indianapolis, Ind. He called for alleviation of energy cost burdens on the poor, and constraints on energy-wasteful buildings.

Results from the town hall meetings in Chicago and nine other United States cities will be forwarded to the White House Office of Energy and Planning, for consideration in President Jimmy Carter's national energy plan to be announced April 20, N. Allen Anderson, regional FEA administrator, Chicago, said.

Town hall meetings also were held in Boston, New York City, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Kansas City, Denver, Dallas, San Francisco and Seattle. Summaries of the Chicago meeting will be available on request from the Chicago regional FEA office, Room A333, 175 W. Jackson, Chicago.

Gas tax, drivers' fees hike urged

State officials Monday were urged to increase the state gas tax 4 cents a gallon, boost license plate fees an average of 58 per cent, nearly double the cost of driver's licenses and place a 1 per cent surcharge on new car purchases.

The recommendations, which could give the state more than $370 million in new revenue is needed to continue the state's road maintenance program, according to the Illinois Transportation Study Commission.

The panel's recommendations will increase the state gas tax from 7.5 cents a gallon to 11.5 cents. License plates for small cars would go from $18 to $30 and large car plates would jump from $30 to $45.

The commission also called for increasing the cost of driver's licenses from $8 to $15 and adding a 1 per cent surcharge to the purchase price of new cars.

THE COMMISSION'S report will be sent to Gov. James R. Thompson and the Illinois General Assembly for action. In the past, the commission's recommendations for tax increases and transportation plans have been adopted by the legislature.

Thompson for months has been talking publicly about an increase in the gas tax and license fees and has admitted his discussion of the subject represents a "trial balloon."

He also has urged the legislature to start talking about increases, but has stopped short of formally proposing them himself.

Fred A. Schoenfeld, executive director of the commission, said the increases are designed to produce only enough money to continue maintenance and resurfacing programs on existing roads during the next 20 years.

The commission also formally recommended a modified supplemental free way system be built and financed through the sale during the next 20 years of $4.4 billion worth of bonds.

The proposal calls for further increases in the gas tax — starting at half cent a gallon and climbing to at least 3 cents — to pay off the bonds.

U.S. troops to leave South Korea

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter told Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda Monday that United States ground troops will be withdrawn from South Korea, Japanese diplomatic sources said.

Carter said the United States still will honor its obligations to defend South Korea, the sources said, and he promised that the withdrawals will be worked out in close consultation with the Japanese and the South Korean governments without undermining security on the Korean peninsula.

The discussion came during the first of two days of talks between Carter and the Japanese leader, who received a warm welcome and a 19-gun salute on his arrival at the White House.

PRESIDENTIAL PRESS Sec. Jody Powell said the Korean situation was discussed between the two leaders, but he gave no details.

No timetable for withdrawal of U. S. forces from South Korea was discussed, the sources said. Fukuda stressed during the 90-minute session,

Japanese sources said, that the security of the Korean peninsula was vital to Japan and East Asia.

"The President also expressed a similar opinion," one source said.

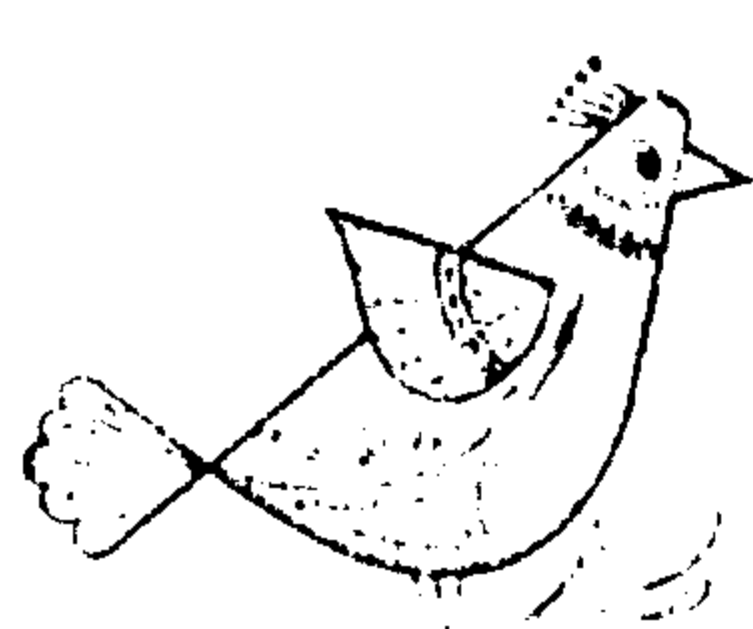

But, he added, "President Carter said, regarding the reduction of American troops in South Korea, that the United States would proceed with it without damaging peace in the Korean peninsula."

The United States has 40,000 servicemen in South Korea. Although ground troops will be removed, the sources said, about 7,000 Air Force personnel will remain.

Both Fukuda and Carter favored an early resumption of talks between South and North Korea, the sources said, and believed that "it is desirable that unification of South and North Korea be achieved through peaceful means."

Teamsters recruit try in Schaumburg

The International Brotherhood of Teamsters is trying to recruit members of the Schaumburg Police Dept., but a spokesman for the Fraternal Order of Police, who now represents the officers, said Monday he is confident of retaining 95 per cent membership in the 55-member department. William Hogan Jr., president of Teamsters Local 714 said he met with police representatives "at their request" Sunday. He said patrolmen "requested application cards" and said they wanted to "talk it over among themselves" before making a decision. The union also is seeking recognition as bargaining agent for Rolling Meadows police and firefighters and Palatine police and public works employees.

New parks chief vows openness

John Turausky, the new director of the Salt Creek Rural Park District, Monday said he knew he was stepping into a controversial situation when he accepted the post and pledged to restore an open administration to the district. Turausky, 37, of Northbrook, was named director last week after nearly a month of controversy prompted by the park board's one-day dismissal notice of former director James DeVos. Turausky takes over the director's post Monday at an annual salary of $15,000 a year. Turausky admitted that he was apprehensive about the job "until they (commissioners) answered the questions that had to be asked. They were very frank and honest with me. They did what they felt they had to do."

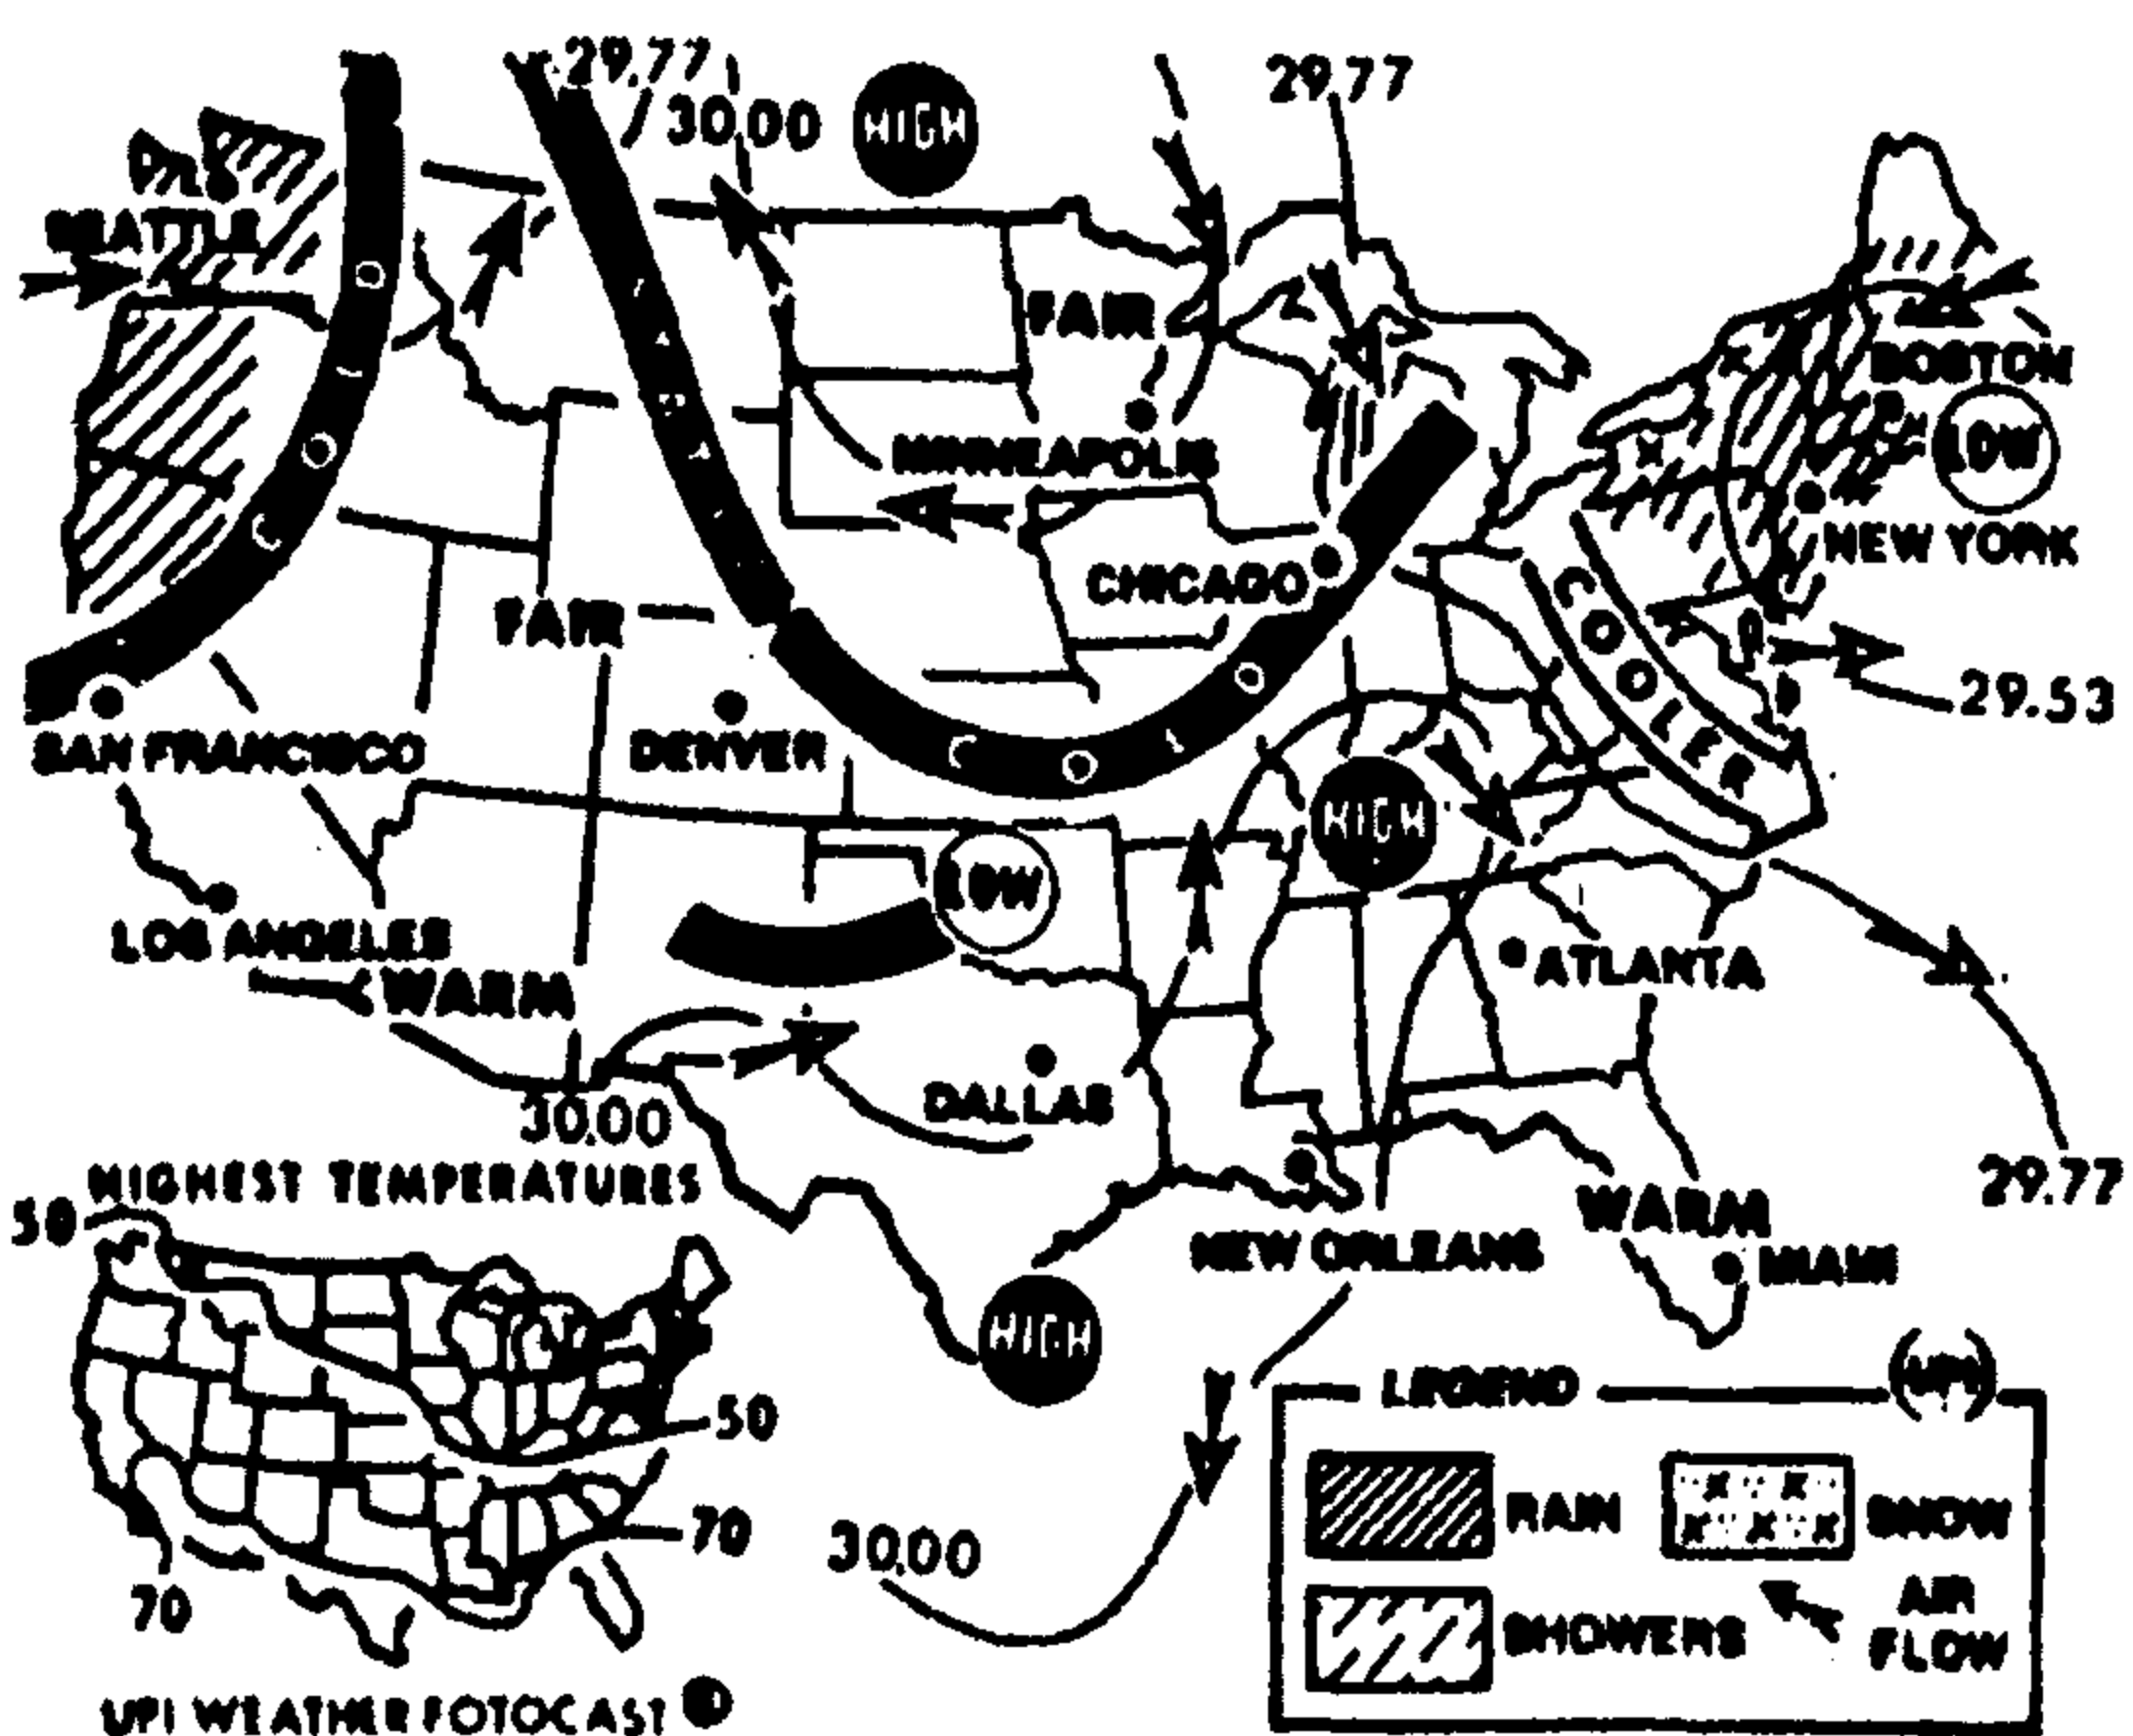

Breuer trial set April 18

Mark Breuer, 22, of Palatine, is scheduled to stand trial April 18 on charges that he tried to murder two policemen. The tentative trial date was set Monday at a pretrial hearing when defense and prosecution attorneys said they were ready for trial. The trial will be held in the Judge Frank Wilson's courtroom at the Cook County Criminal Courts building, 28th Street and California Avenue, Chicago. A spokesman said the volume of cases scheduled to be heard in Wilson's courtroom will determine whether the trial will begin as scheduled. Breuer, 915 Countryside Dr., Palatine, is charged with firing a shotgun and narrowly missing two Palatine policemen who knocked on the door of his apartment Oct. 20, 1976. Breuer is being held in lieu of $500,000 in Cook County Jail, Chicago.

Congress urged to crack down on baby peddlers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress was asked Monday to crack down on "flesh peddlers" who sell babies to couples willing to pay thousands of dollars rather than wait years to get a child through an adoption agency. A House judiciary subcommittee considering legislation outlawing black market baby sales heard testimony indicating it is a "slick business" crossing state lines and international borders.

One Chicago lawyer who sells babies uses front agencies in Chicago, the Netherlands and Mexico, said Pam Zekman, a reporter for the Chicago Sun-Times who investigated the racket by posing both as an expectant mother trying to sell her child and a woman trying to buy a baby.

BY WORKING through abortion clinics and pregnancy counseling agencies, she said, baby brokers get tremendous profits by finding pregnant young women — almost always unwed teen-agers — and enticing them to give up their babies.

In this way, she said, the brokers ensure "a steady supply of healthy white babies for couples who can pay the highest price."

Fees for lawyers who place babies, she said, range from $5,000 to $25,000. Among the promises, Ms. Zekman said, are fancy apartments in New York during the last few months of pregnancy, money for clothing and living expenses, good medical care and a better life for the babies.

ACTUALLY, she said, many girls receive inadequate care and less than the luxury they were promised. Also, she said, pressure is placed on any girl who tries to change her mind before her baby is born.

"This is a lawyers' crime," said Joseph Morello, assistant district attorney for Manhattan in New York.

He said state and local prosecutors have "tremendous difficulty" because the business involves "flesh peddlers" frightened young victims and couples who want a child at any price. He said the business often covers so many jurisdictions that police can't get a handle on it.

The business has grown, witnesses said, as a result of liberalized abortion laws and a growing social acceptance of unwed mothers, leaving legitimate adoption clinics with fewer infants to place. Waiting periods in adoption clinics often are one to four years.

Nicholas Iavarone, assistant state attorney for Cook County, said federal laws are needed to stop the "indiscriminate selling of defenseless infants." He said baby brokers don't screen unfit parents.

Quake hits Persian Gulf city; heavy damage told

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — A major earthquake struck the bustling Persian Gulf port and resort city of Bandar Abbas early Tuesday, causing heavy damage and chasing most of the residents into the streets. Initial casualty reports were slight.

Six hours after the quake struck, a spokesman for the Red Lion and Sun Society, Iran's Red Cross, said 18 persons received first aid treatment in a hospital, but later were released.

Hotel managers contacted by telephone from Tehran said all major downtown hotels had severely cracked walls and that all guests had fled into the streets.

THE FIRST OF four tremors hit the area at about 1:30 a.m. (2:30 p.m. Monday CST) and shook the ground for 20 seconds.

The seismological center in Tehran said the first shock registered 7 on the Richter scale. A spokesman estimated the epicenter probably lay some miles offshore in the narrow Straits of Hormuz between Iran and Oman.

Bandar Abbas is about 600 miles southeast of Tehran, a journey of about 1,000 miles by road.

A hotel manager said the first shock cut off electricity throughout the city. Power was restored about five hours later.

Bandar Abbas, a major cargo port with a population of about 100,000, also is a popular holiday resort. Hotels in the city were crowded with visitors celebrating the Iranian New Year holiday which began Monday.

IT IS THE YEAR of the Snake in Iran and was supposed to bring good fortune to the nation.

A duty officer for the Red Lion and Sun Society said he saw the balconies of two hotels crumble and people running in panic into the main street.

One hotel manager said there had been four tremors. Then the earth shook again as he spoke.

"I am very sorry I have to hang up now because there is another one coming and I am leaving the building," he said.

There were no early reports of damage from the residential suburbs or from surrounding villages.

COMMUNICATIONS WERE hampered by the holiday. Government offices, newspapers and other establishments are closed for the festival. Police did not comment on the situation.

Iran's seismological center said its charts indicated the towns of Minab and Jask, southeast of Bandar Abbas were closer to the quake's epicenter.

Communications in the area are poor and there was no immediate contact with the two towns. Rescue teams have been dispatched throughout the region but have not reported back, a Red Lion and Sun Society officer said.

Mystery animal bites ears off hogs, then disappears

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — There are some strange tales circulating in Jasper County about a mysterious animal raiding barnyards and eating the ears off hogs.

"You'd get about as many opinions as there are people," Gene Clark, editor of the Jasper County News, said about the stories.

Clark said the first victims were four hogs kept in a pen by a farmer near the Nazarine community about the second week in January.

"SOMETHING STARTED getting in there and catching the hogs behind the neck, but the only thing it would eat was the ears," Clark said. He said the animal invaded the hog pen on four successive nights, attacking one hog each time, until it had eaten the ears off all four hogs. He said three sows died but the "old male hog" survived.

Clark said in one of the raids a hog lost its whole head.

Some residents around the Bay Springs-Nazarine area think it may be a wolf or a panther. But at least one law enforcement officer is convinced it's a large dog — or a pack of wild dogs.

Jasper County Deputy Sheriff Dorsett Henry said he and some other men have killed a part-German shepherd mongrel and another animal that "had all the characteristics of a wolf."

"I HAVEN'T SEEN anything that would lead me to believe it was anything other than dogs, but I've had some pretty reliable sources tell me they've seen other things," Henry said.

Clark said one area resident — Joe McCollough — was trying to protect his cattle when he saw what appeared to be an animal entering his pasture late one night.

"He had his gun loaded with bird-shot and shot at the thing," Clark said. "He said he hit it and the thing just turned and came right at him. He said he figured he just made it mad." McCollough finally drove it away by jumping up and down and yelling.

"You can drive through the Nazarine community at night and the porch lights and back lights will be on," Henry said. "Some have lights on their barns and there's one light down there on a hog pen."

"That's one of the best lit places in Mississippi," he added.

Lawyers to assist elderly prepare wills

A senior citizen will program for suburban residents is being started by the Chicago Bar Assn. lawyer referral plan.

The plan is designed to aid persons 60 and older with incomes less than $10,000 and assets less than $10,000 in preparing wills.

The program is cosponsored by the Chicago Bar Assn., the Cook County Legal Assistance Foundation Senior Citizens Legal Services and the Suburban Cook County Area Agency on Aging.

Brezhnev attacks U.S. interference

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev denounced U. S. appeals for human rights Monday in a fistpounding speech warning the Carter administration its comments on Kremlin affairs will have an "unthinkable" effect on detente.

In his toughest speech since the pre-detente era of the Vietnam War, Brezhnev said he will not accept "Washington's claims to teach others how to live," and vowed the Soviet Union will continue its crackdown against dissidents.

Brezhnev also offered a new Soviet position on the Middle East — a peace plan calling for Israel's withdrawal in stages, rather than immediately, from occupied Arab territories and establishment of an internationally guaranteed demilitarized zone.

"WE WILL NOT TOLERATE interference in our internal affairs by anyone and under any pretext," the Communist party general secretary told more than 5,000 cheering delegates to a congress of Soviet national trade unions.

"A normal development of relations on such a basis is unthinkable," Brezhnev said, thumping the podium for emphasis.

Brezhnev noted Sec. of State Cyrus Vance will visit Moscow next week on a trip primarily aimed at securing a new strategic arms limitation agreement.

"We will see what he will bring with him," he said. "Everybody, of course, realizes the importance of how Soviet-American relations will develop further."

"We would like these relations to be good-neighborly ones. But this requires a definite level of mutual understanding and at least a minimum of mutual tact."

WESTERN DIPLOMATS said the speech was the toughest and most definitive Kremlin policy statement yet on the human rights issue.

Brezhnev said "big objective possibilities for further developing equal and mutually advantageous cooperation" between Moscow and Washington have been affected by a "certain state of stagnation."

"The American side explained it at first by the election campaign in the United States, but the first two months of the new administration's stay in power in Washington do not seem to show a striving to overcome this stagnation," he said.

Brezhnev accused Moscow's opponents of inventing "the semblance of internal opposition" in socialist countries, asserting that in reality none exists.

He said there are "renegades" who have broken the law by anti-Soviet activity and turn for support abroad.

"Our people demand such so-called public figures be treated as opponents of socialism, as persons acting against their own motherland, as accomplices, if not agents, of imperialism. Quite naturally we have taken and will take against them measures envisaged by law," Brezhnev said.

Japanese sources said.

Fukuda told Carter, the Japanese sources said, that leaders of many Southeast Asian nations have urged that the United States keep a military presence in the area.

Press Sec. Powell confirmed that the U. S. presence in South Korea was discussed. Powell said the President described U. S. treaty commitments with Japan as "permanent and unshakable."

Powell also said "the economic strength of Japan . . . in the opinion of this government, does entitle it to an expanding role" in international affairs.

Asked whether the conversation included proposals to increase tariffs on Japanese color televisions, Powell responded: "It is safe to assume . . . that something like that would be touched upon."

IN GREETING Fukuda on the White House South Lawn, Carter noted that cherry blossom trees donated by Japan generations ago were blooming along the Potomac.

"Every year at this time they are a reminder of the friendship that binds our two nations together," Carter said.

Carter did not mention the record $5.36 billion U. S. trade deficit with Japan in his welcome but did describe Japan as "an equal" and "one of the world's great economic powers."

"In world trade all the nations of the world recognize the almost pre-eminent position that has been carved out by the hard work of the Japanese people," Carter told several hundred guests on the South Lawn.

Fukuda smiled and nodded when Carter said he and Fukuda will go to the economic summit conference in London in May "to discuss mutual policies and hopes among the industrial nations of the world."

"We'll go there in the spirit of cooperation and partnership as equals," Carter said.

Fukuda recalled meeting Carter two years ago in Japan and talking with him after he became President.

"I feel as if I have known you for many years," Fukuda said.

"THE UNITED STATES is No. 1 as an industrial democracy," Fukuda said. "A little behind you is Japan. I believe that our two nations can cooperate for the benefit of mankind."

Some Japanese were upset by two full-page newspaper ads in the morning's Washington Post addressed to Fukuda, denouncing the killing of whales by Japanese whalers and criticizing Japanese trade policies.

"What kind of a welcome is this?" one member of the Japanese delegation asked a reporter.

One ad, by a labor-industry coalition known as the Committee to Preserve American Color Television, said imports from Japan have "virtually wiped out" the U. S. black-and-white TV industry and are wrecking the color TV trade.

The other ad, by the Center for Environmental Education, said Japan has ignored United Nations appeals that it quit killing whales.

State amendment asked

Coalition backs effort to boost referendum use

Illinois residents may be able to vote to ban no-deposit bottles and nuclear power plants, or approve a limit on state taxes if the Coalition for Political Honesty's campaign to expand an initiative process succeeds in the Illinois General Assembly.

Coalition leaders and several state lawmakers, including three area Republicans, Monday announced plans to introduce a resolution calling for a constitutional amendment to create the initiative process this week.

The initiative process will allow voters to enact laws through statewide referendums, a power almost exclusively reserved by the legislature.

Approval of the resolution requires a three-fifths vote in the Illinois General Assembly and approval in 1978 of a referendum by the voters.

THE PROPOSAL ALLOWS for amendment and repeal of the voter's decision by the legislature.

Patrick Quinn, a coalition spokesman, said the initiative effort will be the first since 1920. While the initial action must come from the legislature, Quinn insisted the 630,000 persons who backed the effort to strengthen state ethics laws will be asked to contact their legislators.

"We hope to make the Illinois initiative the most important issue in Illinois in the months and years ahead," Quinn said.

Local legislators supporting the effort — Illinois Representatives, John Friedland, R-South Elgin, Roger Keats, R-Wilmette, and Roger Stanley, R-Streamwood, each said they favored statewide referendum.

KEATS CITED A recent vote on right-to-work laws in Arkansas, which was opposed by labor unions. Voters were in favor of keeping the laws by a 2-1 margin.

"I think that is the best example of the initiative process I have ever seen," Keats said.

While some states allow unlimited initiatives on the ballot of each election, the Illinois proposal will require 375,000 signatures on petitions to qualify the initiative and no more than three proposals can be considered during an election.

"This is something that will give the electorate another opportunity to make decisions," Friedland said, adding the requirements for getting proposals on the ballot are strict enough to block frivolous or emotional issues.

SOME LEGISLATORS in the past have been opposed to an expanded initiative process in Illinois and neither Keats or Friedland could predict the possible success of the effort.

"I think it has a chance of passing in the House, but it will be tough in the Senate," Stanley said. He predicted possible opposition from some Chicago Democrats.

"Last year, the coalition tried to pass that ban on double-dipping (a legislator hold two public jobs) and there are Chicago Democrats involved in that, so I think they will be opposed," Stanley said.

He said he is supporting the proposal because the state initiative law needs to be better defined.

"This bill will help the process. There were 630,000 persons who signed petitions last year who were disenfranchised by the courts."

Oh, the weather outside is frightfully—not like spring

The second day of spring wreaked havoc on Northwest suburban drivers as two inches of wet snow made travel treacherous. State, county and local police logged the season's highest total fender-benders and ditched autos.

Travelers' advisories were issued by the National Weather Bureau Monday night when snow slowed traffic on all major roads and side roads, except for the tollways.

Illinois State Police said tollroads were clear, although several cars were found in ditches in the western part of Cook County.

COOK COUNTY Sheriff's police recorded about 40 accidents in an eight-hour period Monday night. State police indicated that accidents were occurring countywide at a rate of about three an hour.

There were so many accidents keeping state police busy Monday night that for a while troopers answered calls only when personal injuries were involved. Police recommended that minor accidents Monday be reported today.

Heavy accident areas included many side streets and major inter-sections, such as Higgins and Arlington Heights roads where several mishaps were reported.

The National Weather Bureau said motorists later this week can expect some relief from Monday's "spring-like weather." A warming trend is expected beginning Wednesday.

HIGHS FOR THE week should be in the mid-40s, with the high Friday and Saturday reaching into the 50s. This week's low temperatures are expected to be in the 30s.

There is a 50 per cent chance of snow this morning with today's high hitting the upper 30s. Tonight's low will be in the mid-or upper 20s. Wednesday will be warmer, with partly sunny skies and temperatures in the mid-40s.

The trend should be a welcome relief for motorists who risked damaging their autos to drive in the poor conditions Monday.

Local police departments said traffic accidents were up from normal as a result of the slick road conditions, but most said accidents were minor.

A Mount Prospect police spokesman said about 40 cars were in minor collisions during the evening hours.

HOFFMAN ESTATES recorded only three accidents, none of which involved injuries. A police spokesman said, "We're just lucky, I guess."

Buffalo Grove also joined the ranks of the lucky communities having a low number of accidents for the day.

Parts of the nation faced the same bad conditions. A dank mixture of rain and snow stretched from southern Wisconsin across Iowa into Missouri and eastern Arkansas. Temperatures in the 20s were expected as far south as Oklahoma.

Metropolitan briefs

Hanrahan comment on Nazis criticized

The American Civil Liberties Union criticized Democratic mayoral candidate Edward Hanrahan Monday for his statement he would not let members of the American Nazi party demonstrate on public property. David L. Hamlin, Illinois executive director of the ACLU, called Hanrahan's statement "irresponsible and shocking."

"It is not a crime to express political views in the city of Chicago, even if the majority of citizens do not agree with those views," Hamlin said. "The ACLU believes that the First Amendment still exists in Chicago. We are shocked to hear anyone suggest that it can be so readily suspended." Referring to fist fighting which broke out Friday in the Daley Central Plaza, Hanrahan said, "As mayor, I would never let a hate group use public property to spread their hate."

In related developments, Acting Mayor Michael Bilandic rejected an offer from the League of Women Voters to participate in a televised debate with five other Democratic mayoral candidates. A conflict in dates prevented Bilandic from participating in the debate scheduled for April 5, an aide said.

On the Republican side, Gov. James R. Thompson met with GOP candidate Ald. Dennis H. Block Monday to discuss strategy.

Freight trains collide head-on

Two freight trains collided head-on along Chicago and North Western Ry. tracks just east of Ill. 59 in West Chicago Monday, injuring two crewmen.

Terry Crighton, 23, Marengo, a brakeman, was admitted to Central DuPage Hospital with a bruised abdomen. Harry Best, 30, Batavia, an engineer, was treated for minor injuries and released.

County banking more in suburbs

The Cook County Treasurer's Office has more than doubled its deposits in suburban banks during the past two years in an effort to balance deposits between Chicago and the suburbs, Treasurer Edward J. Rosewell said Monday.

Rosewell said suburban deposits have increased from $11,397,000 to $25,182,000 since December 1974.

Couple rescued after sea crash

A Chicago area man and his wife were plucked out of rough seas 22 miles off the north coast of Haiti Sunday, following the crash of their Cessna 182 single-engine plane. Recovering in a Port-au-Prince hotel Monday, Mrs. Riva Williams of Brookfield, shuddered at the recollection. Her face was burned red by the five-hour exposure to the tropical sun while she and her pilot husband, Emmett, awaited rescue in a small, rubber raft.

"We did a lot of praying," said Mrs. Williams, speaking for her husband who suffered a broken nose. "We had the engine completely overhauled in Illinois, prior to the trip. But we were a half-hour out of Great Inagua island heading for Jamaica when the engine gave a great bang and stopped. We landed in 12-foot seas, the plane sank almost immediately." The Williams plane was one of a group of five small planes which left Florida last week to tour the Bahamas. The other planes witnessed the crash and radioed the location and a distress call which was intercepted by a passing airliner and relayed to the U.S. Coast Guard in San Juan.

'Orphaned' snakes get home

Serpent fanciers swamped the Anti-Cruelty Society Monday with offers to adopt three snakes abandoned in a Chicago tavern. Instead, the snakes found a new home at the Reptile House of the Lincoln Park Zoo. Police said a man walked into Meltzer's Bar on Chicago's North Side, deposited a screened box atop a juke box and walked out. Inside were a two-foot diamond back rattlesnake, a six-foot rat snake and a cottonmouth.

Police gave the snakes to the Anti-Cruelty Society Sunday. The society said it received 50 to 75 calls from callers who were either concerned about the safety of the snakes or wanted to adopt them. "With exotic animals, we prefer to turn them over to another agency with equipment to handle them," said Karen Brooks, secretary to the society director.

Truck spills acid on tollway

A tanker truck overturned Monday on the Tri-State Tollway, spilling acid and forcing authorities to close the tollway to traffic about a half-mile from the intersection of I-294 and the Calumet Expressway. A spokesman said the acid spilled onto the pavement. Chemical experts were called in to neutralize the spill which could not be cleaned up with water.

At least two other vehicles were reported involved in the accident. "There were injuries," the spokesman said. The tanker driver was treated for cuts and bruises at Ingalls Memorial Hospital.

Illinois briefs

Currency exchange revisions backed

Gov. James R. Thompson said Monday he will support a bipartisan effort to end the "traditional sweetheart relationship" between currency exchanges and state government. Thompson said his office will work for passage of legislation that would:

- Require establishment of uniform, maximum rates for check cashing and money order service.
- Permit an increase in the number of mobile currency exchanges serving factory and other workers and extend mobile service to the old and the poor.
- End fees to currency exchanges for handling utility bills.
- Expand the membership of the Currency Exchange Advisory Board from five to seven, with specific representation for Black, Latino and other minority groups.
- Stimulate competition between fixed exchanges and mobile ones for distribution of food stamps.

The governor also said the package would repeal the opening language of the Currency Exchange Act, "thereby destroying the foundation of the 'sweetheart' arrangement under which economic security was guaranteed to currency exchange operators."

Board of Elections expires today

The Illinois Board of Elections will pass out of existence today unless the state Supreme Court acts to keep it going. The court ruled last year that two key elements of the law establishing the board are unconstitutional. The justices delayed the effective date of their ruling until March 15, however, and that deadline later was extended until March 22. If a further extension is not granted, the board members will lose their authority to administer state and local elections and to rule on questions arising from the campaign disclosure act.

The board's staff, however, would not be directly affected by the order. Ron Michaelson, executive director of the board, said the next scheduled board meeting is April 14. But he said a failure by the court to extend the deadline or reassign the board's authority might have consequences well before that time.

If Hanrahan loses

Lawsuit could cost $47 million

by KURT BAER

Cook County taxpayers may wind up paying up to $47 million in damages if former Cook County State's Atty. Edward V. Hanrahan loses a civil rights lawsuit filed by the survivors of two men killed in the 1969 Black Panther raid.

County-paid-for legal fees to defend Hanrahan passed $800,000 Monday, when the county board approved a one-month bill of $31,129 submitted by attorney John P. Coghlan who is defending Hanrahan.

County Board Pres. George W. Dunne said he is unhappy with the legal fees and is just as worried that the county could wind up paying a very large judgment in the case.

THE SURVIVORS of Black Panther leaders Mark Clark and Fred Hampton, killed during a state's attorney's police raid on a Chicago apartment in 1969, have filed a $47.7 million suit against Hanrahan, the City of Chicago and the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The suit charges the defendants conspired to violate the Panthers' civil rights.

"If you think we've got a headache now, imagine if the taxpayers of Chicago and Cook County are stuck with $47 million in damages," Dunne told county commissioners who were complaining Monday about the mounting legal costs in the 13-month-long trial in U.S. District Court.

Later, Dunne told The Herald that the county does not have insurance to cover its potential loss in the case. If Hanrahan and the other defendants are found guilty, damages will be set by the court.

Asked how the county might pay a multi-million dollar judgment, Dunne said, "It's so far down the road I don't like to think about it."

WHATEVER THE verdict in the trial court, the case is almost certain to be appealed, probably all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court, Dunne said.

The county is obligated to pay Hanrahan's defense and any judgment against him because the raid occurred during Hanrahan's term as state's attorney.

The present state's attorney, Bernard Carey, who ordinarily would represent Hanrahan, took himself out of the case because the Black Panther raid was a campaign issue in 1972 when Carey defeated Hanrahan.

Coghlan was appointed by U.S. District Court Judge Joseph Sam Perry in April 1973, to represent Hanrahan, and the legal fees now stand at $608,749.

TWO COUNTY board members, Carl Hansen, Mount Prospect, and Harold L. Tyrrell, La Grange Park, objected to the latest $31,129 bill, saying they wanted more documentation of the 521 hours Coghlan says he and his associate spent on the defense in January.

Coghlan is charging the county $50 an hour for the Hanrahan defense. His normal rate is $125 an hour, he says.

The hours "don't make any sense," Tyrrell said. "I understand that Irishmen work hard, but this is ridiculous."

Hansen said Coghlan and his assistant, attorney Joseph S. Witkowski, would have had to work more than 15 hours a day each day that court was in session to total 502 hours. Even if they worked every workday in the month, it would take more than 12 hours a day to arrive at the total, he said.

Hansen said the legal fees are a "miscarriage of justice as far as the taxpayers are concerned."

"I really question whether some of these bills will withstand the test of close scrutiny," he said.

BUT JANUARY's fee already had been approved by Judge Perry. Other county commissioners said they had no choice but to approve it.

"I don't think it would happen, but the judge could hold us in contempt of court if we didn't pay this," Dunne said.

Hansen said it would not hurt to defer payment for two weeks so that a better accounting of the costs can be made.

"Mr Coghlan has plenty of money in the bank right now. I'm sure he can wait two weeks and it won't hurt him one bit," Hansen said.

Payment was approved by an 11-2 vote of the board. Hansen and Tyrrell voted no.

It'll cost you a buck more to play golf on links here

Area golfers are paying a premium price to play on the Cook County Forest Preserve District's Highland Woods course at Algonquin and Roselle roads, Schaumburg Township.

Greens fees at Highland Woods are $1 more than at any other 18-hole course in the forest preserve system.

The information came to light Monday when the Cook County Board raised greens fees for 1977.

It will cost $6 to play the Highland Woods course on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays compared to $5 at other district 18-hole courses.

County Board Pres. George W.

Dunne denied the higher fee has anything to do with the relative affluence of Northwest suburban golfers. Arthur L. Janura, forest preserve superintendent, said fees are higher at Highland Woods because costs there are higher.

"The fairways are watered at Highland Woods and not watered anywhere else. It is one of the finest courses in the Chicago metropolitan area," Janura said.

County Board member Carl Hansen, Mount Prospect, who raised the issue, said greens fees should be uniform.

"The very nature of public golf courses is that they should be available at the same cost to everyone," said Hansen, who passed on the vote establishing the 1977 fees.

Apartments charge parents extra for children

by PAUL GORES

A new rental policy at Twelve Oaks Apartments in Arlington Heights requires parents to pay $15 extra in monthly rent for each child living with them. But the new owner of the apartments says the surcharge is not meant to discriminate against families.

Michael Sparks of Sparks & Co., Des Plaines, confirmed Monday that in addition to the $315 rent for a two-bedroom apartment, couples will be charged $15 for every other person living in the apartment as they renew their lease. Sparks said the surcharge is to offset the increasing cost of utilities.

But some residents of the apartment complex, including Nancy Mannaberg, say they believe the surcharge is an attempt to drive families out of the complex.

"THEY'VE GOT TO find some way to get rid of at least most of us," Mrs. Mannaberg said.

Mrs. Mannaberg, a mother of two, said the new management is trying to drive families out by increasing the price because Sparks & Co. found that not renewing leases to persons with children is illegal.

Casey Warner, manager of the apartments, said the new management had hoped to convert Twelve Oaks, 1217 S. Wilke Rd., into an "adults only" complex. He said the firm gave up the idea when their attorney found an Illinois statute that prohibits discrimination against renters with children.

A woman with two children who asked not to be named said her lease expires this spring and said she is upset about the Twelve Oaks policy.

"THIS IS OUR fourth year and we fully expected to be here next year," she said. "This is really ridiculous. I think they are still discriminating against children."

"We didn't raise it to get the kids out," Sparks said. "It's because of the additional cost of utilities because of the additional people."

Sparks said he is worried about vandalism at the apartments.

"Whenever you have a significant number of young people you're going to have more vandalism than with all adults," Sparks said. He said he believes townhomes are more suited to families than the apartment complex.

HE CITED A lake on the grounds of the complex as a reason he believes the apartments are not safe for small children.

"I don't think any reasonable person would feel it (Twelve Oaks) was built to deal with kids," Sparks said.

Sparks said he has talked with some residents at the 468-unit complex about the $15 surcharge.

"I've just come to the conclusion they figure if they get enough publicity maybe they can get something for nothing," he said. "You can't please all of the people all of the time."

David Schucker of the Leadership Council of Metropolitan Chicago which deals with legalities in housing problems, said the $15 surcharge is not illegal, but it "violates the spirit of the law."

"BY CHARGING more, they are not refusing to rent," Schucker said. Schucker said a 1969 state law that says landlords cannot refuse to rent to persons with children is rarely enforced.

Sparks said he had not been aware of the law until he studied the possibility of turning Twelve Oaks into a complex for adults.

"It came as a surprise that it's something that's unlawful," Sparks said. "Most people in this business are not aware of that law."

Sparks and Co. has distributed notices to residents of Twelve Oaks explaining the change in ownership. The notice states Sparks' belief that the apartment complex was designed more for adults than families. It also asks for suggestions on rules "for the safety of children" and for "the peaceful enjoyment of those who do not have children."

Math scores below U.S. average

Standardized test scores in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 this year show students are slightly below the national average in math skills and reading but are at or above grade level in all the areas.

The testing report was presented Monday at a board of education workshop led by Marilyn Swanson, administrator of educational services, Bill Harner, testing coordinator, and Bob Bortnick, reading clinic director.

On the Iowa tests of basic skills, administered in October, students in sixth and eighth grade scored in the 47th percentile on over-all math skills which includes concepts and problem solving. In reading, sixth graders scored in the 42nd percentile and seventh and eighth graders placed in the 46th percentile. The national average is 50 per cent.

STUDENTS IN third through eighth grades were tested in five major areas — vocabulary, reading, language skills, work study skills and math.

The district's composite test scores by grade level ranged from a low of the 57th percentile for sixth graders to a high of the 67th percentile for third and fourth graders.

Students at every grade level placed in a lower percentile in math, work study and language skills than their counterparts did last year. The only exception was in language skills where this year's sixth graders placed in the 62nd percentile as did last year's sixth graders.

Vocabulary seems to be the students' strongest area with scores ranging from the 63rd percentile to the 77th percentile.

SCORES IN language skills, which includes spelling, capitalization, punctuation and usage, ranged from a low of the 57th percentile for third and seventh graders to a high of the 65th percentile.

In work study skills, scores ranged from a low of the 63rd percentile for eighth graders to a high of the 76th percentile for fourth graders.

Scores in math skills ranged from a low of the 47th percentile for sixth and eighth graders to a high of the 67th percentile for fourth graders.

Newsletter 'may aid incumbents'

Debate on whether to print a village newsletter before the April 5 municipal election became heated Monday night when village Trustee Madeline Schroeder warned the board may be accused of using village funds to help incumbents win reelection.

After about a half-hour debate, the board voted 7-1 to mail the newsletter to residents next week.

"I have compared this situation to that of an incumbent congressman who sends out a communication to his constituents before an election using his franking privilege. The board should be extremely careful to not allow itself to be charged with bias for or against any candidate," Mrs. Schroeder said.

SHE SAID SHE was surprised to receive a notice that a newsletter mailing was planned for this month because the last newsletter was sent about a month ago.

The explanation from the village administration was that the last newsletter was printed late and that the proposed newsletter should be paid for in this year's budget.

Mrs. Schroeder said she did not object to the "Mayor's Message" written by Village Pres. James T. Ryan for the newsletter, but she did ask for the deletion of a paragraph in another story which included Ryan's name.

Ryan is up for reelection in the April 5 election, and is running against Douglas Cannon of the Village Independent Coalition party.

Ryan called Mrs. Schroeder's objections to the newsletter "the most petty thing you have ever raised on this board."

Mrs. Schroeder also asked that Art Gollberg's name be removed from an article concerning the village's Zero Vandalism Committee because Gollberg is a candidate for village trustee. "We should be extra careful that no candidate be given more exposure than the others," she said.

Teen-agers' abduction called hoax by police

The abduction of two Arlington Heights girls March 5 has been labeled a hoax by Arlington Heights police.

The two girls, one 16 and one 17, told police they were walking along a road in the village at 6:30 p.m. when a car stopped and both girls were forced inside by two men in the vehicle. They were released unharmed, they said.

"The girls admitted to their parents shortly afterward that they made up the whole story. They were out late and they decided this made a good excuse," Capt. Paul Buckholz of the Arlington Heights Police Dept. said.

BUCKHOLZ SAID police suspected the girls' story was not true after "they kept changing their stories and none of it checked out."

Several investigators were assigned to the incident and "more time than we wanted" was spent on following the report, he said.

"We don't need this kind of thing" to waste police time, Buckholz said.

In Des Plaines, meanwhile, detectives still are seeking 27-year-old Gary Hanson of Chicago in connection with the abduction and rape Feb. 16 of a 13-year-old Iroquois Junior High School student.

Police said the 13-year-old was forced into a car and driven to an alley behind the 1300 block of Van Buren Street and raped. She was then released by her assailant.

A NATION-WIDE warrant has been issued for Hanson, who is known to use several aliases.

Des Plaines police also have classified a Feb. 18 aggravated assault of a 14-year-old local girl as a hoax.

The girl said she was threatened by a 17-year-old boy who pulled a knife on her, police said.

3 Hanafi Muslims are held on bond

A judge ordered three Hanafi Muslims, released on personal recognizance after a 39-hour takeover of three Washington buildings March 9, held on $50,000 bond each Monday. Superior Court Judge H. Carl Moultrie said that in view of testimony that the three willingly obeyed their leader, Hamaas Abdul Khaalis, he believed "they may flee the jurisdiction if called on to do so" by Khaalis.

The three, Abdul Rahman, 37, and Abdul Al Qawee, 22, both of Wheaton, Md.; and Abdul Rahim, 26, no address, surrendered at an Islamic mosque, the building where there was the least violence. They were taken to the D.C. City Jail. They were among nine Hanafis who had preliminary hearings Monday. All were ordered held over for grand jury action.

Two other Hanafis had preliminary hearings Friday and Khaalis faces a hearing March 31. Khaalis' release was part of the agreement negotiated to free 134 hostages the 12 Hanafis were holding at Washington's city hall, the international headquarters of B'nai B'rith and the Islamic Center.

S.E. Asia panel in happy mood

A White House commission to Hanoi and Vientiane returned to America Monday and immediately telephoned President Carter that it had accomplished its mission to seek information about U.S. servicemen missing in Indochina. Leonard Woodcock, president of the United Auto Workers and chairman of the five-member commission, called Carter shortly after the group's Air Force jet landed. It was barely dawn at the White House. Woodcock will give Carter a written report at a White House meeting Tuesday.

The four men and one woman on the eight-day journey to Southeast Asia did not discuss their report publicly on the return flight, but their mood was one of quiet joy. Carter sent the five to press for more data on the 2,550 Americans still listed as missing in Indochina. He also instructed them to listen — not reply — to what the communist governments of Vietnam and Laos had to say.

Mustard gas destruction urged

Two members of Congress Monday urged destruction of mustard gas supplies in the U.S. arsenal and a three-year moratorium on producing lethal chemical weapons. They said it would be a "tangible first step" in outlawing chemical warfare. Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., and Rep. Richard Schulze, R-Pa., told a news conference their proposal was "a positive step and one that does not endanger the security of the United States."

"We don't want to use our (U.S.) genius to create further insanity," Weicker said. The two proposed a resolution by both houses of Congress. It would not have the force of law but would urge the administration to adopt a three-year moratorium on the production of new weapons, including a nerve gas bomb now being developed by the Navy and "binary" nerve gas weapons sought by the Army.

Assassination unit cuts budget

The House assassination committee chopped more than half its budget Monday in hopes of persuading the House to let it keep investigating the murders of John F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King Jr. House Speaker Thomas O'Neill gave the troubled committee an important pledge of support after it cut its budget request from $6.5 million a year down to $2.5 million.

"I feel definitely that there is something there to warrant continuing the committee," O'Neill said after meeting with committee leaders. The House must decide soon whether to finance the special committee's operations past March 31. Internal committee bickering and an initial budget request for $13 million for a two-year period had touched off heavy opposition to continuing the probes. There has been talk of the committee dropping its Kennedy investigation and concentrating on the King murder, but O'Neill said he hopes "they can keep both cases alive."

Committee OKs $50 tax rebate

The Senate Finance Committee Monday grudgingly approved President Carter's $50 per person tax rebate, but the plan faces an uncertain future in a floor challenge next week. The panel also approved a small permanent tax cut for most people using the standard deduction, along with a major simplification of tax forms which would allow an estimated 75 per cent of Americans to figure their tax with a glance at one table. The provisions are part of an economic stimulus package requested by President Carter. The House has passed a bill similar to the one approved by the Senate committee on a straight party line vote of 9 to 7.

While the rebate has received most attention since Carter announced his tax plan, the change in the standard deduction will have a much longer-lasting effect on the average American. Unlike the rebate, it is supported by almost everyone. About 46 million couples and individuals using the standard deduction would get an average $110 tax cut under the new standard deduction, set at a flat $3,200 for couples and $2,200 for single persons instead of the current percentage calculation. The only losers under the plan would be about 2.1 million single persons making more than $13,750, who now get a maximum $2,400 deduction. They would pay an average $51 more in tax.

No soldiers in Zaire: Castro

Cuban leader Fidel Castro said in Maputo, Mozambique Monday none of his soldiers is involved in the invasion of Zaire and promised he will send no troops against the white-minority regimes in Rhodesia and South Africa. "I wish to assure you that there is not a single Cuban involved, we have nothing to do with it at all and we have not equipped or trained the forces that are fighting the ruling clique in Zaire," Castro said.

Zaire has said Cuban troops led the 5,000-man invading force that recently invaded the copper-rich province of Shaba from neighboring Angola. "We regard it (the fighting) as an internal problem of Zaire and we have nothing to do with it," Castro said. "Nor as far as we are aware is Angola involved." Castro said the situation in southern Zaire was a "product of the weakness of the regime there in dealing with a situation that is purely internal."

Panicky sales of Paris stocks

Victories by Communists and Socialists in municipal elections sparked panicky selling on the Paris stock market Monday. Brokers said market losses caused by fears of leftist gains in 1978 were the worst since 1974. "Orders to sell came largely from outside France," one stockbroker said, indicating that foreign owners were trying to get rid of French stocks. "We are facing a landslide of orders to sell, chiefly from small stockholders," another broker said.

Leftists won control of a majority of French cities as they captured 52 per cent of the vote in balloting during the past two Sundays. With control of 22 large cities, the gains were seen as a possible prelude to Communist-Socialist victory in March 1978 parliamentary elections.

INDIA'S PRIME Minister Indira Gandhi was ousted from power Sunday, and is expected to resign today. Opposition leaders said they will repeal emergency laws used by Indira to censor the press and detain thousands of political prisoners.

Victors vowing to repeal rules of Gandhi regime

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Jubilant opposition leaders, anticipating their first national victory since independence in 1947, Monday pledged to repeal the emergency laws used by defeated Prime Minister Indira Gandhi to censor the press and detain thousands of political prisoners.

Indian news reports said state governments already have begun releasing the political prisoners still in custody — 16,000 persons, according to opposition party officials.

A government official said Mrs. Gandhi will resign today. "It's a small, minor, routine formality, and that's all that is left," he said.

ELECTION RETURNS from 404 Parliament districts showed the opposition Janata (People's) party and its allies won 216 seats, against 157 for Mrs. Gandhi's Congress party and its allies.

The Janata Party needs more than one-third of the remaining undecided seats to gain a majority in the 542-seat Parliament. That seemed likely, since the areas where results still are outstanding are considered opposition strongholds.

"We will repeal all the repressive laws the Congress Party enacted during its emergency rule," Janata spokesman Surendra Mohan said at a press conference.

"WE WILL SCRAP the press laws that curb freedom of expression (and) cancel the law that empowers the government to jail a man up to two years without trial and without giving reasons," he said.

"This will be our first task as a government. We will release all political prisoners."

Mrs. Gandhi repealed the state of emergency hours after her own defeat was official, but the laws that permitted her to rule by emergency decree still are technically in effect. The emergency, which she imposed on June 26, 1975, was the main issue in the campaign.

Mohan said new Parliament members from the Janata and Congress for Democracy parties will meet Thursday "to elect our leader."

"THE JANATA PARTY and the Congress for Democracy have decided to act as a single parliamentary bloc," he said.

Mohan gave no names, but the two leading candidates apparently are Janata chairman Morarji Desai, 81, and CDF chairman Jagjivan Ram, 68 — Mrs. Gandhi's two most prominent opponents during the campaign.

Ram said, "The opposition leader will be selected by a consensus, and an effort will be made to avoid a contest."

"But if a contest takes place, that will be quite in order with democratic functioning of political parties," he said.

Mrs. Gandhi lost her home constituency of Rae Bareilly to rival Raj Narain of the Janata party by a margin of 55,000 votes. Six years ago she trounced Narain by a margin of more than 100,000 votes.

Political repression led to downfall of Gandhis

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi combined persuasion, force and superb political timing to rule this diverse and often discontented nation for 11 years.

But in the end her political instincts failed her.

The verdict of the Indian electorate that ousted Mrs. Gandhi can be read as a personal rejection for her and her son, Sanjay, rather than a repudiation of the Congress party, which has ruled India continuously since independence in 1947.

She brought her son into the center of the political arena, supported his every action, listened to the people around him and helped him drag her to defeat.

SANJAY GANDHI has been considered the adviser who most strongly urged the prime minister to impose a nationwide state of emergency 21 months ago, imprison her foes, censor the press and limit civil liberties.

Sanjay threw his support behind the intensive family planning program, which outraged villages who might not otherwise have grasped the extent of their loss of civil rights. They knew what it meant to be forcibly sterilized. They rioted against the compulsory sterilization, but the program continued.

Mrs. Gandhi, the daughter of Javaharlal Nehru, made India a nuclear power and a victor in war with Pakistan. She steered the country through eras of famine and heavy inflation and always stayed in touch with the mood of the people.

BUT DURING THE emergency the censored press could not tell her what the people were thinking. Her advisers and intelligence agents did not tell her, either.

She cut herself off and boosted her son in a way that made many think she was grooming him to follow her and her father to the post of prime minister.

In the end, they both lost, and the "house of Nehru and Gandhi" fell to pieces.

Anger at Sanjay sparked the rebellion within Mrs. Gandhi's Congress party that led to Agricultural Minister Jagjivan Ram's Feb. 2 resignation from the party and the cabinet.

The resignation of a widely respected leader, the foremost of India's 120 million downtrodden members of the untouchable caste, was the turning point in the campaign.

There were many who felt as Ram did, but they needed his example of active opposition to embolden them. They began to turn against the Congress party in large numbers, and support for the opposition became a tidal wave.

UNPROVEN PLAYERS, like 27-year-old Lamar Johnson who whiffs at a —batting practice pitch at spring training in Sarasota, Fla., are some of the question marks the White Sox must answer to have a successful season in 1977. The fear, though, is that the Sox will be hard pressed to repeat their 64-game victory total last year and may not be able to beat out the expansion entry Seattle Mariners.

Holes in Sox under repair

by BILL MADDEN

SARASOTA, Fla. (UPI) — There is a new attitude of optimism and determination among the White Sox this year which could very likely fade into resignation by mid-June.

Most White Sox players agree that new manager Bob Lemon got the team off in the right direction by stressing fundamentals and defense in the opening weeks of spring training.

It is generally conceded that Paul Richards, at 67, just didn't have his heart in managing last season and by September the White Sox players also gave up, as evidenced by their 15 losses in the final 16 games.

"LET'S FACE it," said Ken Brett, who after coming over from the New York Yankees in mid-May became the White Sox' best pitcher in '76, "this was a horrible ball club last year. We didn't stress any fundamentals in spring training and pretty much went through the motions. Most players will tell you it was the easiest camp they ever had."

Slugging outfielder Richie Zisk, who was acquired over the winter from the Pittsburgh Pirates, a perennial contender in the National League, agreed with Brett that this year's edition of the White Sox can only get better.

"You have a lot of kids on this team and guys who haven't had such big league experience," said Zisk. "But they can play. Guys like Brian Downing, who was hurt a lot last year, Alan Bannister, Kevin Bell and Chet Lemon. All they need is more experience and they'll have us winning."

True, there's a lot of merit to that old saying about there being no substitute for experience, but the cold hard facts are that the White Sox finished dead last in the American League in pitching with a 4.25 team earned run average and did nothing to improve their lot in that department over the winter.

AND ALTHOUGH Zisk, who hit 21 homers and drove in 89 runs for Pittsburgh last year, will aid the offense, he'll do nothing for the woefully weak outfield defense. Further, the infield defense is almost as uncertain.

STRENGTHS: Zisk, first baseman Jim Spencer and outfielder Jorge Orta are all proven hitters with adequate power. Bucky Dent is among the best shortstops in baseball. WEAKNESSES: A woeful pitching staff made up of castoffs, has-beens and unproven rookies; uncertain infield, especially if Dent is traded; weak defensive outfield.

NEW FACES: Besides Zisk, the most significant off-season acquisition, right-hander Steve Stone, returns via the free agent route and will join the starting rotation after a 4-3 record with the cross-town Cubs last year.

OTHER FREE agent signees included third baseman Eric Soderholm, utility infielder Tim Nordbrook and pinch hitter Royle Stillman — none of whom figure prominently in Lemon's early plans.

OUTLOOK: The White Sox should consider themselves lucky to beat out expansionist Seattle for sixth in the AL West in a year which will undoubtedly be highlighted by a lot more Bill Veeck gimmicks.

Girls basketball field narrows

by JEFF NORDLUND

The records would indicate Wheeling is the underdog, and Fremd, Forest View and Regina Dominican are the favorites at this week's Fremd Girls Basketball Sectional Tournament.

But records can be deceiving, especially in the realm of winner-take-all tournament play. One bad game and those rosy records will be just as meaningless as ones that are reversed.

That's why when Forest View (15-2) and Regina Dominican (17-11) take the floor tonight at 7:30 in the sectional's first contest those flashy records may mean very little. The teams have played entirely different opponents.

WHEELING (15-4) and Fremd (18-1) play the second game of the four-team tourney Wednesday at 7:30 p.m., and the winners meet Friday at 7:30 p.m. to decide which squad will be among the first-ever list of Sweet 16 girls teams.

Regina, though unknown to area squads and coaches, isn't a "sleeper" in any sense. Playing as part of the sprawling 31-team Girls Catholic Athletic Conference, the fast-breaking team is ranked as the favorite at Fremd by some.

"Every team before now I've been able to scout before the game," Forest View coach Al Beard said Monday. "But I know nothing about this team, except they're very good."

"I know Catholic schools have the feeder programs that help them along," he said. "But I don't know who Regina has played by comparison with our schedule."

"Each game presents a different situation," Beard explained. "Some games we've gone deliberately, and other times we've had to run."

FOREST VIEW, the Conant Regional winner, tried a deliberate approach against Fremd in the recent Mid-Suburban League championship game, but the Vikings won 49-42. Will the Falcons try and slow the pace down against faster Regina, too?

"Well, we plan something different every game," Beard said, making sure he wouldn't tip his hand.

Wednesday, Wheeling probably won't be trying to change a thing from the last time the Wildcats played Fremd. That game Wheeling won, after having lost to the Vikings twice before in the season.

"WE'VE BEEN playing the worst ball of the season lately," Wheeling coach Donna Dubbelde said. "Ever since we beat Fremd, everyone has let down. Beating Fremd was our big goal."

"It was a big psychological letdown afterward, and we still haven't come out of it," she added. "Fremd's a good team, but we'd like to be the ones that knock them out of the tournament."

Wheeling, the Highland Park Regional winner, had to beat Libertyville in the finals there to advance to Fremd. That victory was the first of the season against Libertyville in three tries.

Dubbelde said she planned to keep her Wildcats running in order to neutralize Fremd's size advantage.

"We have to run them ragged," she explained, "because if you let them work the ball in, they'll beat you."

FREMD COACH Carol Plodzien is also interested in controlling the tempo of her team's match with Wheeling.

"When we meet it isn't usually a good game," Plodzien explained of her Buffalo Grove Regional champs. "There's a lot of running around and turnovers. We're going to play our kind of basketball this time."

"We're going to have a lot of teamwork," she explained. "We won't change very much — not this late in the season. We'll stay with our 2-3 zone. That gives us most of our size under the boards."

The winner of the Fremd Sectional will advance to the Barrington Super-Sectional Tuesday, March 29, at 7:30 p.m. After that, winners head downstate to Bloomington-Normal's Illinois State University where the eight finalists will vie for the state title.

MORE MARCH MADNESS. Now that the boys have stepped aside, it's time for the girls to take center court, as their state tournament enters sectional play. Fremd coach Carol Plodzien is hoping her team will survive at the Fremd Sectional, which starts tonight.

Bulls' playoff drive resumes against L.A.

The Bulls playoff drive continues tonight as the Los Angeles Lakers come in for a 7:30 date in the Stadium.

Another large crowd is expected as the streaking Bulls try to catch the Kansas City Kings for the final playoff berth in the NBA.

The Bulls, who have won 12 of their last 13 games, gained ground Sunday by doing nothing as the Kings lost to Boston while Chicago had the day off. Kansas City leads the Bulls by 1½ games.

The Bulls play seven of their remaining 11 regular season games on the Stadium floor, where they are 25-9 this year. The Kings, meanwhile, must play nine of their remaining 12 on the road.

But Kings' Jim Eakins has confidence his team can hold off the Bulls late season charge.

"I like the cohesiveness here," said the King's back-up center. "Everyone gets along with each other. There's no stabbing in the back or slamming one another."

"The championship teams that I played on (in the ABA) had talent and they weren't mad at each other or pointing fingers. Everyone shouldered the burden themselves and that's what it's like here. No one is ever off in a corner... no one is ever alone."

The Kings host the Golden State Warriors tonight to begin a string of five games in six nights, a stretch that will very likely determine if Kansas City goes to the playoffs or sits them out for the second straight year.

"We've put the losses to Chicago and Boston over the weekend out of our minds. We have 12 games left this year and we're pointing towards them. We aren't looking back. The attitude is, 'Let's swing things around and get going again.'"

After the Golden State game, the Kings hit the road to play the New York Nets Wednesday, New Orleans Friday, Houston Saturday and San Antonio Sunday.

Arlington ices badminton title

by KEITH REINHARD
Badminton Editor

Arlington's badminton team made it official Monday night, breezing past hosting Fremd 7-0 to virtually assure themselves of another dual meet Mid-Suburban League title.

Even if coach Mary Lou Hundt and her streaking Cardinals were to be shut out in their remaining two circuit bouts, Rolling Meadows could do no better than forge a tie at the finish line with three straight sweeps.

And Palatine has other ideas about a Mustang sweep.

THE PIRATES and Meadows pair off this evening to showcase a five-meet round of MSL action. And while coach Kathy Crandall and her Pirate band own a six-point edge over the hosting Mustangs (51-46), they have just two meets remaining.

The Mustangs meanwhile, piloted by Linda Guttman, have their trio of contests to go including tonight's big showdown.

Neither Prospect nor Schaumburg can be officially ruled out of the second-place hunt either. The Saxons trek to Wheeling today while the Knights host Buffalo Grove.

THE PALATINE-MEADOWS duel figures to go down to the wire. Mustangs Libby Iturralde, Dawn Wiebe and Karen Richards will probably go at first thru third singles respectively where the team has won 21 of 27 matches.

Pirates Mary Munson, Mary Vastine and Peggy Munson head up an equally impressive singles alignment that is 23-7 in league play.

Both sides also have exceptionally strong second, third and fourth doubles tandems. The Rolling Meadows third doubles position has lost only to Arlington in nine outings.

THE CARDINALS were pressed only at second singles while moving to their seventh straight 7-0 victory and it was the 81st win in a row for the badminton Redbirds.

Leslie Grabitz needed three sets to stop Viking Lisa Walz, 11-3, 6-11, 11-4 at second singles. At first singles Jody Lyon of the Cardinals held off Linda Warder 11-7 in the second set after easing out an 11-9 verdict in the opening round.

Marianne Hey turned back Fremd's Lisa Holbrook 11-8, 11-5 at third singles and none of the Vike twosomes could collect more than eight total points while dropping straight sets.

TUESDAY'S OTHER meets will see Hersey entertaining Forest View and Elk Grove dropping in on Hoffman Estates.

The standings after Monday had Arlington with 67 points pursued by Palatine and Rolling Meadows. Forest View is fourth at 43 but the Falcons have also finished ten of their 12 matches.

Schaumburg is fifth at 40 and Prospect sixth at 37. Rounding out the circuit are Wheeling (30), Hersey (30), Buffalo Grove (19), Fremd (19), Elk Grove (18), Hoffman Estates (15) and Conant (12).

Royals clobber Sox, 14-2

From Herald Wire Services

SARASOTA, Fla. — Steve Stone, who looks better every time out, stretched his spring scoreless inning streak to 19 Monday before shoulder stiffness forced him to retire early as the Sox fell to Kansas City by a lopsided margin of 14-2.

Stone left during a four-run Royals second inning and was followed by four more Sox hurlers who didn't have much success.

Kansas City pounded out a total of 17 hits as Al Cowens drove in three runs with a double and two singles for the defending American League West champs. Bob Heise also knocked in three runs with a pair of singles.

Jim Colborn, one-time Cub who came to the Royals over the winter from the Brewers, was the starting and winning pitcher. Colborn scattered six hits during his five inning mound tenure.

The Sox host Baltimore today in a 1:30 p.m. game at Sarasota.

SERVICE TIME. Darlene Ewald of Rolling Meadows readies a serve for her Forest View foes during a conference meet in the Mustang gym Saturday. She teamed with Barb Johnson to ring up a 15-8, 3-1 triumph over the Falcons at second doubles and will be involved in another key match Tuesday evening against Palatine.

NEW YORK YANKEE shortstop Fred Stanley leaps vainly into the air to retrieve an overthrown ball from first baseman Lou Piniella in a spring training game in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. against the Los Angeles Dodgers Monday. The error allowed Dusty Baker to reach second safely. The Yanks won 4-3.

'Questions' block Namath trade to L.A.

LOS ANGELES — The New York Jets Monday gave the Los Angeles Rams two more days to negotiate with Jets quarterback Joe Namath, but Rams' general manager Don Klosterman said several questions have to be solved before the veteran signal caller can be traded.

Klosterman said he plans future talks with the attorney, Jimmy Walsh, about the possibility of the 34-year-old veteran of 12 seasons with the Jets making the move to Southern California.

"Those talks were amicable and both parties had questions which would have to be resolved if a trade were to be made for Namath," Klosterman said.

"At the same time, if a trade cannot be consummated by April 1, there is a possibility that Namath could become a free agent if the Jets do not notify him by that date that they are picking up the option year on his contract."

Namath and Walsh were in Palm Springs, Calif., and not immediately available for comment.

Klosterman said Walsh would be returning to Los Angeles within a few days and talks would be resumed.

The Rams' general manager said he didn't want to talk about money terms at this time.

Polish soccer star signs with Sting

The Chicago Sting Monday announced the signing of Conrad Bigger, named 10 times to the Polish national team, to a 1977 contract.

Bigger, one of Europe's most versatile players, is a fullback but also has played internationally as a midfielder.

Lafleur ties mark as Canadiens romp

Top point getter Guy Lafleur tied an NHL consecutive game scoring record Monday night by potting a goal in the Montreal Canadiens' 5-1 rout of the host Boston Bruins.

The nationally televised victory was Montreal's fifth straight and marked the Canadiens' seventh game without a loss. The defeat snapped Boston's 11-game unbeaten streak, and kept them two points behind the front-running Buffalo Sabres in the NHL Adams Division.

Lafleur's 52nd goal, which gave the Canadiens a 4-1 lead at 13:40 of the second period, stretched his scoring string to 22 games. Lafleur, with 125 points, is knotted with Bronco Horvath, who set the record while with the Bruins in 1959-60.

In Toronto, center Dennis Maruk and right wing Al MacAdam each scored two goals as the Cleveland Barons humiliated their Adams Division Toronto Maple Leaf rivals 7-2.

In the opening period Cleveland peppered Toronto goalie Mike Palmateer with 15 shots and led 2-0 on MacAdams' power-play goal at 7:12 while Jim Neilson checked in a backhand shot at 18:45.

Baron center Dave Gardner notched his 12th goal of the season at 11:43 of the middle period before Toronto got on the board with Lanny McDonald's 43rd season goal at 19:03. Maruk struck for his first goal with eight seconds remaining in the period on a break-away for the 4-1 Cleveland lead.

Dave Williams scored Toronto's second goal 2:52 into the final period but Brent Meeke scored 49 seconds later. MacAdam and Maruk ended the Cleveland romp at 9:27 and 16:05, respectively, in the third period.

Skier, 18, awake after week in coma

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Skier Sheila McKinney, 18, seriously injured in a fall during competition at Heavenly Valley a week ago, was reported Monday to be regaining consciousness.

Her name was taken off the serious list, a spokesman at the Sacramento Medical Center said.

McKinney was competing in the World Cup races when she lost control and crashed into some hay bales at about 50 miles per hour. She was taken first to Bart'n-Memorial Hospital in the Tahoe area. The Milwaukee Brewers have purchased outfielder Steve Brye from the Minnesota Twins... Brye, a 28-year-old outfielder with a six year major league average of .261, was the subject of controversy in the last game of the 1976 season when he misplayed a George Brett fly ball into an inside the park home run, enabling Brett to win the American League batting title... Larry Motter, former star center at Western Illinois, was named Monday by head coach John Pent to the post of defensive backfield coach at Northwestern.

Sox' Monroe sent down to minors

by BOB GALLAS

Big Larry Monroe has yet to see his 21st birthday, but is already learning "you can't fight city hall."

Monroe, former pitching star at Forest View High School and Mount Prospect resident, spent the latter part of the 1976 baseball season as the youngest member of the White Sox pitching staff. And although he figured to spend this season in the minors again, he's hurt and upset after officially getting the news Sunday that the Sox have assigned him to Iowa of the American Assn.

"They (Sox) didn't want me to make the club," said the 20-year-old right hander by phone from his Sarasota, Fla. hotel room late Monday night. "They wanted me to pitch another year of Triple A."

MONROE AGREES that it's probably for the best that he pitches regularly in the minors for another year, but feels that after six weeks on the Sox roster last season, he could have at least gotten a chance to prove himself.

"All winter I worked harder than I ever had in my life to make this club. All I wanted was to get 10 innings in down here. I didn't get a chance."

Monroe's last outing in a Sox uniform — for now anyway — was a disaster. He went one inning against Detroit Saturday and gave up seven runs, six earned, in one inning. But he doesn't think that inning had anything to do with his ticket to the minors.

"From what I understand, I was going down before I even pitched Saturday," he said. "If I had done well and made the club, it only would have caused confusion in the front office. I thought if I could get some innings in, I could show them."

"I'M NOT MAD at anybody, and I'm not taking this personally. I'm still gung ho White Sox. I'm just disappointed. But I'm not going to brood about it long. I'm just going down there (Iowa) and do my best."

Monroe, who rewrote the record book at Forest View, has had his share of heartache in a brief career with the White Sox. Last year, he got his first major league start in a home game against the Kansas City Royals, only to be yanked after two innings in a "strategy" move by then manager Paul Richards, who brought in left-hander Terry Forster.

Trouble is, Richards never bothered to tell Monroe that he was going just two innings and Monroe was understandably upset and embarrassed as a large group of friends and relatives had turned out for his debut.

After joining the Sox August 22, he was 0-1 in eight appearances with an ERA of 4.09, but had several good efforts in relief. Before that he was 11-14 at Knoxville in Double A ball, but his ERA was 2.91 and he struck out 113 while walking only 75.

So it doesn't take much to figure that the personable Monroe has a bright future in the big leagues. But after spending six weeks "at the top," last summer, it's just as understandable that he'd like to stay on top.

Hassan wins decision in main event

13-year-old Hassan of Des Plaines, whose three-year record is 12-3, weighed in at 150 pounds, five heavier than Hatfield.

The main event capped off a night of bouts between Lions Park boxers and those from Rockford and Park Ridge clubs.

Danny Sloan of Mount Prospect and Tony Cipriani of Mount Prospect both fought in semi-final matches. Sloan won a decision from Paul South of

Hoffman Estates

The Hoffman Estates Boys' Clubs All-Star Floor Hockey team defeated a team from the Union League Boys' Club of Chicago in sudden death overtime, 3-7. The teams were made up of boys ages 6-9 years old.

Scoring for Hoffman Estates were Billy Nolan and Sammy Nirva (three goals each), and Tim Blinning, 2 goals. The Catholic League can do more than block and tackle

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Mid-state Illinois reclaimed its heritage as a talent-laden basketball hotbed Saturday but historians like Jim Enright (author of March Madness) may point to the 1977 Class AA tournament for quite another reason.

The Chicago Catholic League, a 14-team conference in just its third season under IHSA rule, shook off its football image and surged into a position of prominence that may not soon diminish.

League members, sprinkled far and wide over the Windy City, won six regional championships for the second year in a row, capping that accomplishment with four sectional titles.

ONE SEMI-FINALIST, De La Salle, charged out of the inner city to eliminate vaunted Proviso East, 68-66, and then threw the Elite Eight's lower bracket into a frenzy by shocking unbeaten Collinsville, 67-66.

The Catholic League champion, St. Laurence, upset No. 1-ranked Chicago Phillips and might have had an even greater tournament impact if 6-6 junior Jim Stack, an 18-point scorer, hadn't severely sprained his ankle.

So there they were, two Catholic squads grabbing half the spaces in Saturday's final day of competition. The only question is: What took them so long? Why didn't they join the IHSA prior to 1974-75?

"That's a complicated question," responds Bill Gleason, coach of Loyola's 1976 quarter-finalists.

"MUCH OF IT had to do with the fact that not all of our coaches in the Catholic League were full-time teachers. I recall De La Salle leaving the Catholic League for awhile in the 1960s and joining the IHSA, and the basketball coach at that time, Ed Riska, lost his job. He worked for the city of Chicago and coached part-time."

Numerous coaches, including successful Mendel football coach

Loren Tate

Lou Guida, became ineligible to continue when the conference joined the IHSA in 1974-75.

But the big hangup was football. The Catholic League coaches were adamant about spring football . . . that is, until the state began its football playoff.

"The football coaches didn't want to give up spring ball," said Gleason. "I recall that Gene Sullivan, the president of our association, went to see Harry Fitzhugh and asked for league autonomy, much like the Public League has. But Fitzhugh said no. He said we had to abide by IHSA rules."

"THOSE OF us in basketball, of course, were always favorable to joining the IHSA. We had terrible scheduling problems. I can recall playing the same opponent five times in one year. There were just three blocks from New Trier West and we couldn't play them."

"Now that has changed and we have some excellent neighborhood rivalries going."

De La Salle athletic director John Niemiera recalls that current Illini cager Tom Gerhardt graduated the year before the Catholic League joined the IHSA. As a result, Tom was something of an "unknown" when he was recruited by the Illini.

"It has been great for our teams to receive exposure throughout the state as they are now. We were just too Chicago-oriented before," said Niemiera Saturday.

"The league has always had good teams but the quality of play is just now being demonstrated for everyone to see. I agree that the start of IHSA football playoffs influenced the decision to join the state association."

THUS FITZHUGH and the IHSA opened the gates without bending the rules, and yet the rules are not the same. Catholic League members, for example, have no school boundaries and it is okay for a star player like St. Laurence's Kevin Boyle to reside with a teammate while his family lives in St. Louis.

And it is also permissible for Catholic League schools to offer tuition waivers, as long as they can demonstrate need and prove that athletes aren't the only students receiving such aid.

These advantages, coupled with the fact the schools don't have to share athletic facilities with girls, have caused some rival suburban coaches to express fear that aggressive Catholic League recruiting will lead to an era of dominance by these schools.

"Hey, they're already dominating me," grimaces East Leyden's Norm Goodman, incredibly successful except for his run-ins with parochial rivals.

"I don't think the public school coaches need to worry about that developing," counters Loyola's Gleason. "Sure, there are a lot of good young players on the rise but four teams in the final 16 isn't normal. Remember that teams like St. Laurence and De La Salle won some awfully close games to get to Champaign. The Catholic League will always be a top athletic conference but it won't always be as fortunate as it was this year."

Hundley home in Cub bullpen

by ARCH KERR

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — It's hard to tell who's happier, Randy or the fans.

The return to the Cubs last season of Randy Hundley as a player marked the end of more than a two-year absence from Chicago of the popular catcher who wore number nine for the Bruins from 1966 to 1973.

Born Cecil Randolph Hundley Jr. in Martinsville, Va., June 1, 1942, Randy is as popular as ever to the Cactus League followers. He was not at Scottsdale in 1976 as a Cub, because he was signed after spring training.

ALTHOUGH HIS 1976 Cubs' tour of duty was cut short with another knee injury, Hundley is now serving as the bullpen coach.

Randy is trying to stay in top physical shape, despite knee problems that have plagued him the last three years.

Maybe it was a hunch that kept Hundley, his wife Betty, two daughters and two sons in their Palatine home instead of on the move to other cities during the years he played with Minnesota and San Diego.

"I'm very excited about being back with the Cubs," Randy told The Herald last week. He is working out daily in addition to performing his coaching duties.

ASKED ABOUT THE possibility of active play in the regular season, Hundley said, "I'm keeping myself in shape. There's always the possibility of getting back into play in case of an accident or emergency. If the need arises, I hope to be ready."

The regular catchers in spring training have been George Mitterwald, who played six of the first eight games, and Steve Swisher, who now wears Hundley's old number.

Hundley, wearing No. 4 now as the bullpen coach, may be a candidate for manager some day. His name keeps popping up with that of Coach Alvin Dark as a logical successor to Herman Franks, 62.

Hundley, 36, spent nine of his 13 years in the majors as the Cubs' catcher. He was signed as a bullpen coach just before the 1977 season. His first professional contract was in 1960 with the San Francisco Giants. He played briefly in 1964 and 1965 with the Giants and then joined the Cubs for the 1966 season.

HE RATES AMONG all-time Cub greats in career grand slam home runs, tied with Rogers Hornsby with four. Others above Randy are Ernie Banks with 12, Bill Nicholson and Billy Williams with eight and Ron Santo, Gabby Hartnett and Andy Pafko with five.

Hundley caught the near-perfect game pitched by Milt Pappas against the San Diego Padres on Sept. 2, 1972. He earned the Golden Glove Award in 1967 and set major league records for: most home runs for a rookie catcher in 1966 with 19; most games as a catcher with 160 in 1968; highest fielding average of .996 in 1967 as a catcher in 150 or more games; fewest errors with four in 1967; and he led the National League catchers in doubleplays with 17 in 1967.

"RANDY'S accomplishments are well known," said Cactus League fan James (Jim) Bussone, 52, who with his wife June are from Roanoke, Ill., near Peoria.

They have followed the Cubs to Scottsdale for three years. "They first reason is for the chance to see the Cubs close up, and the second reason is the weather," said Bussone, a Cubs' fan since he was five.

He picks the Cubs to finish "about like they did in 1976." The Cubs were fourth, 28 games behind Philadelphia, last season.

But he likes to see Hundley in a Cubs' uniform again. "Hundley will be good for the Cubs. I'm glad he's back," said Bussone.

BUZZONE HAS BEEN in Scottsdale almost three weeks and saw all the exhibition workouts before regular play opened March 10.

Bussone's baseball interest has rubbed off on one of his sons, Larry who is the basketball coach and assistant baseball coach at Romeville High School. Buzzone played three years of college baseball as an outfielder for Western Illinois University in Macomb.

Jim Buzzone recalled the thrill of seeing the Cubs in the 1935 World Series, even though they lost the series in six games to Detroit, and he remembers the 10 good years of baseball which followed. Buzzone doubted he would see the Cubs in the World Series in the near future.

Still a loyal Cubs' fan, he gets discouraged at times.

"It looks dismal this year," he admitted.

'LeRoy captures soul, not image'

Neiman and sports are indivisible

You can tell right away LeRoy Neiman isn't an artist. An artist is a legless runt sketching the can-can in gaslight Paris. An artist lives in a garret, or paints chapel ceilings lying on his back. An artist should starve, not dine on caviar and champagne at cocktail parties. An artist should hang in the Prado not Madison Square Garden.

An artist paints Crucifixions, Mona Lisas, Madonnas — not Joe Namath. Artist paint The Last Supper, not The Last Inning. Artists should see the world through the bottom of an absynthe bottle, not Bushnell binoculars. Would Rembrandt do a portrait of the champion as a young man? Who cares for a landscape of the Yankee Stadium outfield?

Can an artist be considered successful who starts out in Playboy instead of Montmartre? An artist should eat seldom, die young, and show posthumously. Anything less and you are an illustrator, a sign painter. I mean, would Tintoretto waste oils on Arnold Palmer?

"THE ARTIST FROM Channel 7," his detractors sniffed. A painter is not a crook, they say. He should not paint to order. LeRoy on a sideline is, to some, like Dostoevsky covering the Dodgers. A profanation of a divine gift.

But the artist disagrees. An artist, LeRoy Neiman feels, paints the times in which he lives, the scenes which go through his world. He has thus, much more freedom than the Dutch masters, the Venetian Renaissance or even the impressionists. He does not have to paint for the pope, the king, the duke or the merchant prince. He paints for the artist.

He also, of course, paints for ABC, Sports Illustrated, Playboy and the fast-back galleries of La Cienega and Greenwich Village.

Sport as art has long been neglected by artists. A few horse race prints, a series of prizefight scenes by George Bellows comprise the catalog. Clowns have far outranked athletes as a subject for the painter's palette. Until LeRoy Neiman.

SPORTS WERE the most-photographed and least-painted of human enterprises prior to Neiman. They were considered a fit subject only for cartoonists, caricatures, the vulgar kindergarten of art. Neiman elevated them to a serious part of the human condition. LeRoy, with his long black cheroot, Panama hat, and Otto von Bismarck mustache is as familiar a sight at ringside or lockerroom, end zone or finish line as a camera crew. His sketchbook is far more accurate than zoom lenses or instant replay. "LeRoy captures the soul, not the image," a colleague, restricted to a three-color camera emulsion, confesses.

The world of sport, Neiman-style, is a kaleidoscope of stunning color, a rush of movement, a Lautrecian experience. You don't have to know who's-on-first to comprehend the extraordinary prism through which this artist views his world.

LeRoy Neiman cannot remember a time when he wasn't "drawing," whether it was tattoos on playmates, or comic strips on the back of school papers that the nuns thought were algebra equations. Neiman painted what he saw — the Indian whores who followed the railroad gang with whom he worked on the Mesabi Range, the handlers in the St. Paul pen where he went to box as an amateur, the roustabouts on the ore docks.

He painted the Normandy invasion, the Battle of the Bulge and the Ardennes from the inside. One of his jobs was painting swastikas, like notches, on the gun barrels of his anti-aircraft battalion, the 461st, as it shot down Nazi planes.

NEIMAN ADMITS most of his work concerns man at his leisure, man at his play. He is the foremost portrayer of what he calls "purchased entertainment" whether this be Joe Namath throwing a pass, Johnny Bench hitting a baseball or Joe Frazier catching a punch. Neiman does not concentrate on the fallen, the failing. Not for him are the defeated, the despairing, or the fearful. Part of that is a reaction to the gloomy art he was exposed to as a young student by the refugee artists flooding in from Europe.

"I deal in beauty and good. I look for the excellence in man, the triumph. That's my search. Art is, or should be, an elevating part of humanity." Thus, Neiman leaves the losers to Hogarth or Grant Wood. Neiman intends to hang on to both his ears, like Lautrec and the Boiles of Montmartre. Neiman and the playing field and arenas of America are indivisible. No sporting event is complete from the Olympics of Montreal to the training camps of Arizona without the presence of LeRoy Neiman and his sketch pad. You cannot be said to be a figure of prominence until he has captured you on canvas.

In town for an exhibition at the Upstairs Gallery in Beverly Hills, Neiman pondered his ultimate impact on Art. The moguls of sport, his patrons, are enthusiastic. His colleagues are less so. "They think I'm having too good a time," he admits. "My life is not enough like the second act of La Boheme." He paused. "But I'll hold up (through posterity). Because I care. I'll do what they want. I'll do it the way I want. I'll do it the way I want." Tintoretto could do no less. Or no more.

Olympic double

Finland's ace distance runner, Lasse Viren, is the only man ever to score two sweeps of the 5,000 and 10,000 meters at the Olympic Games. He won both events at Munich in 1972 and again at Montreal in 1976.

Bonham sharp as Cubs fall

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Gene Tenace's checked swing two-run single Monday climaxed a four-run eighth inning as the San Diego Padres defeated the Cubs 4-2.

Trailing 1-0 entering the inning, San Diego reached loser Steve Renko and reliever Bruce Sutter for four runs on a single by Jay Richards, a double by Mike Ivie, a fielder's choice grounder by Bill Almon, plus Tenace's hit.

Bill Bonham, making his first appearance of the spring, pitched five scoreless innings for the Cubs who took a 1-0 lead in the fifth inning on a double by Jerry Morales and a single by Manny Trillo.

The way we see it

Golf purchase deserves OK

Voters in the Wheeling Park District Saturday have the opportunity to preserve two valuable community assets.

The Wheeling Park District is asking voters to approve a referendum authorizing $3.7 million in bonds to purchase the 128-acre Chevy Chase Golf Course and the 9.5 acre site of the Childerley Retreat House.

The proposal is one of the most exciting referendums placed before voters in a Northwest suburban community in many years: its approval could spark a wide-ranging improvement not only in recreational facilities but in community life styles and esteem.

If the referendum succeeds, the park district will operate the golf course and will use the large Tudor-style clubhouse to house other park programs. The retreat house will be renovated by the Wheeling Historical Society and that site preserved as an historical park.

Cost of the purchase will be $12.60 a year to the average homeowner in increased park district taxes for the 20 year life of the bonds.

The cost of the purchase may seem high, but will, park officials note, amount to $1 a month, a price that is reasonable for the benefits the community stands to gain.

Failing now to buy and preserve Chevy Chase will open the way for the course's purchase by a developer. Once the land is developed either for housing or business, it will be lost forever as open space. The same fate could befall the retreat house.

By buying the two properties now, the park district will preserve the land for future use. In addition to benefiting golfers, the golf course purchase will benefit joggers, bike riders and everyone else who appreciates having green open space rather than paved parking lots in their vicinity.

To assure these benefits, voters Saturday should cast two "yes" votes. The first "yes" will approve the purchase of the properties. The second will increase the district's bonding limit to make the purchase possible.

He's still controversial

It would come as no surprise to officials of Imperial Rome to hear that Jesus of Nazareth is a controversial figure.

The Fellow was a constant source of trouble to the Romans. After He had wandered the countryside performing what some believed were miracles and preaching a doctrine of love and peace, He was executed in Jerusalem.

Even then, His followers, in the typical manner of misguided zealots, the Romans felt, continued to espouse His cause. They even claimed He had risen from the dead — and they were willing to die rather than renounce that belief.

The ancient Romans would doubtless sympathize with General Motors Corp. which this week withdrew sponsorship from a television movie based on Jesus's life, presumably to avoid controversy.

The film has come under attack from some of Jesus's followers who have not seen it but who nevertheless claim it is inaccurate. Other Christians have served as advisors to the film and are wholeheartedly supporting it.

The National Broadcasting Co. has said they will find sponsors to replace GM for the broadcasts, scheduled for Palm Sunday and Easter Sunday.

If they succeed in filling the space left by the company's withdrawal, it will be a sign that perhaps in the last 2,000 years, Jesus has become less controversial.

Few open space areas like this are left. We should keep it!

Carter cuts the wordfog surrounding Middle East

In just a few minutes of off-the-cuff comment recently, Jimmy Carter managed to cut through a couple of decades' worth of the wordfog that envelops Middle Eastern diplomacy. He said Israel ought to have "defensible" borders, just as he had in his campaign. As though he were unaware that a President is supposed to back away from Israel as soon as an election year is over, and that defensible borders for the Israelis is the last thing wanted by various Arab states, parties, factions and gangs.

While he was outraging folks, Brother Carter suggested that the Israelis should make substantial withdrawals — perhaps almost back to their frontier before the Six-Day War in 1967. To make that more consistent with defensible borders, the President went on to add that Israeli troops might be stationed beyond those formal borders in a position to deter or defeat any more invasions. They would be withdrawn only as peace, a real peace, developed over the years.

FOR THAT WAS the one aspect of his tentative comments on which the new President was completely clear: What the Middle East requires is not just another armistice, or lull between wars, but a peace that will last, including mutual recognition, treaties, trade, and human contact between the people on both sides.

None of the elements the new President had mentioned were new, but their arrangement certainly was. It was as though this still shiny-new President hadn't yet learned that the Middle East was hopeless. He took various Arab and Israeli demands, severed them from the emotional overtones that usually attach themselves to phrases like "defensible borders" or "Israeli withdrawal," and combined them in an almost off-hand vision of peace.

An optimist, if one still survives on the subject of the Middle East, could take Brother Carter's recipe and cook up quite a dream: A Middle East with free movement between Israel and her Arab neighbors. Demilitarized zones in Sinai, on the West Bank, and on the Golan Heights that might be patrolled and settled jointly by Israelis and Arabs. If they chose, Jews from Israel could live on the West Bank near shrines like the Tomb of the Patriarchs, or settle in the Sinai. Just as Arabs today live in Israel without hindrance. A unified Jerusalem would be open to all, perhaps with an Arab version of Vatican City guarded by Arabdom's finest in full regalia. Arab honor might be satisfied, Israeli security restored, the economic interdependence of Jordan, Israel, Lebanon and Syria recognized. And peace would come to the Middle East.

OF COURSE ONLY an amateur in an idle moment would dream such a dream. The professionals were aghast at Carter's comments. Israel's Yitzhak Rabin, who musters little enough public presence when given ample notice, appeared nonplussed, withheld any direct comment, and finally took refuge in the unexceptional formula that any peace-negotiated-in-the-area must be negotiated between the parties to the conflict.

An anonymous Egyptian diplomat was dismayed by this open talk of peace terms. Speaking for background only, he told a reporter for the Los Angeles Times that "when you deal with an explosive issue concerning our territory and Israeli territory, you don't do it in a press conference, you do it privately."

The State Department started issuing clarifications in an attempt to re-fuzz the issues. James Reston, David Broder and Max Lerner weighed in with punditry's dismay at such candor in a President. (Oh, Lord, another President to train in statecraft!) By week's end, the distinguished diplomats and journalists seemed to have got things back to the usual immobility.

IF I MIGHT take the liberty of addressing a word to the White House on the subject — Mr. President: Don't let 'em snow you. Maybe what the Middle East needs is leadership coming to its problems afresh and anew. That might be one area of the world that could use a little naivete. Sophistication doesn't seem to have done all that well there over the past thirty years or so.

On the surface the Carter Plan, or at this point the Carter Loose Idea, should be acceptable to both sides in light of their own public positions. The Israelis, a minority of them notwithstanding, keep saying it is not the additional land they are after but only the security the land provides. Here is a way for them to have a "security border" beyond their formal one.

Arab spokesmen, at least in the Western press, say they no longer want to Drive the Jews into the Sea, to quote a slogan of a less politic time, but only to regain the "Arab" land lost in 1967. That land could be regained through the Carter Plan — if Arabs were willing to allow the Israeli positions on it from which to defend the Jewish state. The avowed principles of both sides are put to the test by the Carter Plan.

ONE SERVICE the President rendered almost immediately by his impromptu remarks was to re-focus the world's attention on the crux of the dispute between Israel and her Arab neighbors. That famous "crux," contrary to changing versions of it from time to time, is not the "occupied" territories, or the status of Jerusalem, or a homeland for Palestinian Arabs. If any of those had been the central issue, the quarrel could have been settled thirty years ago.

The crux of the problem is whether Arabdom is willing to accept a Jewish state in the Middle East. For almost as soon as Jimmy Carter had finished speaking, the first reaction to his proposal arrived from a spokesman for the executive committee of the Palestine Liberation Organization meeting in Cairo. He described the President's talk of a genuine peace that would require concessions from both sides as "Israeli logic in American language." And when the full Palestinian National Council met Sunday in Cairo, it made no move to alter the clause in its charter that calls for the dissolution of Israel. Its press spokesman minced no words. The PLO, he said, will not "drop the destruction of Israel as a national goal."

If it accomplishes nothing else, Jimmy Carter's dream of peace has turned the discussion briefly away from the usual will-of-the-wisps and unveiled the same old reality at the core of the problem. If the President continues to talk in a truly even-handed way, he can expect to be called "intransigent" any day now. But it'll be worth it.

He answers fund charge

On Tuesday, March 15, The Herald ran an article entitled "Township incumbents accused of misuse of funds." The main theme presented by the Independent Coalition party candidate was that the use of Revenue Sharing funds on a new township building was a poor way to spend money. Mr. Peters contends that the $700,000 should have been spent on social services.

As a board member of the Northwest Mental Health Association since 1968 and President of the Board 1976-77, I would like to correct the impression left by Mr. Peters. First of all, four different social service agencies — Northwest Mental Health Center, OMNI House, The Salvation Army and Shelter — will be occupying 63 per cent of the building space. The township officials should be commended for their foresight and wisdom in having all the outpatient direct services located in one central facility. The shared housing will result in better communication between the agencies, more efficient delivery of human services, economics on shared equipment and last but not least, permanent housing.

The current Revenue Sharing Act is extended until 1980. After that what? We have no guarantee that Revenue Sharing will continue.

The Northwest Mental Health Center and other agencies have been funded in the past by Wheeling Township and we have been given assurances that funding will continue in the future.

Worthy of note

I would like to take this opportunity on behalf of the James L. Wamsley family to give a special thanks to Mr. Sam Terranova of Cesar's Restaurant, Des Plaines, and his terrific waitresses and cooks who donated all their time and tips, also his purveyors for their many supplies and with the cooperation of the post office made a success out of the benefit dinner held for the Wamsleys.

As a result from this benefit, donations are still coming in. So far they have exceeded $4,000. A thanks also to the Des Plaines residents and residents of surrounding suburbs who have opened up their hearts through contributions to this grief stricken family.

It surely gives a person a warm feeling to be a resident of such a sincere town like Des Plaines.

Mrs. Kathy Holm

I knew Elk Grove had an outstanding fire department, but now I know they have wonderful men working there.

On Feb. 28, a very cold day, I had a flat tire across the street from the department. A man came out of the building and took me inside where it was warm.

He called the motor club for me. After waiting half an hour, the motor club called and said there would be another hour's wait. I was a bit upset as I had two poodles which had been in the car two hours already.

Mr. Greg Riddle, Mr. Tom Wisniewski and Mr. Jim MacArthur of the fire department very quickly changed my tire and sent me on my way.

What wonderful men. God bless them all.

Mrs. Charles S. McDonough
Elk Grove Village

On February 28 David Cox of Boy Scout Troop 160, Des Plaines, delivered to Elk Grove Township over 400 items of canned and packaged goods for distribution to the needy of the Township.

David is working on his merit badges to become an Eagle Scout. Using his own initiative and ingenuity, he devised a community service project, organized the help, and in true Scout tradition carried it through to completion.

On behalf of myself, Supervisor Richard Hall and the Elk Grove Township Board of Auditors I would like to thank David and congratulate him on a highly successful and most thoughtful project.

'Provide patrols'

Why can't the township governments purchase police services for their respective unincorporated areas from surrounding villages, similar to the way fire protection is now purchased from village fire departments?

This would replace the current Cook County Sheriff's Police service. It would be cheaper, as well as quicker.

The lighter side

Guinness records futile superiority

by DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The phenomenally popular Guinness Book of World Records has just come out in its 15th edition and in some ways it's a disappointment.

While the fact that many of its entries are offbeat or outlandish undoubtedly accounts for part of its appeal, primarily it's a best-seller because it's relevant.

Almost all of us are pretty good at something, and may even do it superbly. Yet with most of us, there isn't any demand for the things at which we excel.

THE GUINNESS publishers capitalize on the universal aptitude for bootless achievement by giving a degree of recognition to unavailing skills and talents. Thus they strike a responsive chord in us all.

This point is beautifully illustrated by the record for the "longest hit" in badminton. Guinness says "Frank Rugani drove a shuttlecock 79 feet 8 1/2 inches in tests at San Jose, Calif., on Feb. 29, 1964."

Now if Rugani had hit a golf ball a record distance, he might be as famous as Jack Nicklaus, who holds the PGA record with a 341-yard drive. Had he set a record for the longest hit in baseball, he might be another Babe Ruth, who once hit a 587-foot homer.

IT SO HAPPENS, however, that one of the major objectives in the game of badminton is NOT to hit the shuttlecock 79 feet 8 1/2 inches.

A badminton court is only 44 feet long. In order to hit a shot 79 feet 8 1/2 inches and keep it in bounds, a player would have to be standing more than 35 feet behind the base line. Or somewhere in the next county.

Yet this is precisely the sort of feat that sells Guinness record books.

All of us with unappreciated attainments identify far more closely with Rugani than we do with Nicklaus or Ruth.

I, FOR EXAMPLE, have frequently amazed other tennis players — particularly those on neighboring courts — with the length of my serves.

When I ran across Rugani's badminton record, I instinctively turned to the section on tennis to see who held the record for the longest serve.

Surprisingly, Guinness ignores that category.

It lists the mark for the fastest serve (154 mph), but nothing for distance.

ASSUMING THAT records for the 16th edition are now being compiled, I am submitting to Guinness one of my serves at East Potomac Park last summer.

The ball sailed over the fence, cleared the parking lot, bounced across the road and rolled onto an adjacent golf course. Fortunately, it stayed in the fairway.

And bear in mind it was my second serve, which I take a little off of.

Was it a new record? That is the type of information tennis players relate to. If Guinness expects to continue as the supreme authority on futile superiority, it's going to have to shape up.

Stock options tantalizing way to play money game

by JAMES A. WHITE

NEW YORK (UPI) — The option — the right to buy or sell something at a specific price some time in the future — has been a way of business since biblical times.

Now options to buy or sell stock are the most tantalizing and least understood means of risking money for profit.

Long used by the sophisticated investor, options were introduced to the general public in 1973 with the start of listed trading.

As the name implies, options increase the investor's choice of action. The addition of selling options this summer to the call options already traded on five U. S. exchanges gives the investor more ways to win or lose.

A STOCK OPTION gives the holder the right to buy (call) or sell (put) shares of a specific stock at a predetermined, or striking, price within a specific time.

Most options are for 100 shares of stock and they have a life of up to nine months. If not used, they expire worthless.

The cost of an option, called the premium, is a fraction — usually no more than 10 to 15 per cent — of what the 100 shares of underlying stock would cost.

Premiums vary with the price of the underlying stock and as the option nears its expiration, its value diminishes.

Options are tricky, which heightens their appeal for some sophisticated investors and increases the potential reward for options players who make the right move at the right time.

THE RELATIVELY small cost of the premium gives the options player high leverage for potential profits.

Brokers emphasize, however, buying options always involve risk — at least to the extent the option premium can be lost — and does not fit into the financial plans of many investors. The seller of an option, called the writer, can be forced to buy or sell stock at a price above or below its market worth.

The chance the price of a stock will change, perhaps rapidly, in the near future is the reason behind both puts — sells — and calls. The call holder can benefit when the stock price rises above the option striking price because he can buy the stock from the option writer for less than it costs on an exchange.

With the stock in hand, he can keep it and hope for a further price rise or sell. Selling gives the option buyer his profit after subtracting his premium and commission costs.

While the call option holder is looking for a rise in stock prices, the put option holder is looking for a decline — or at least has protection against it — so he can sell his stock for more than it is worth.

WHEN THE underlying stock price falls below the striking price, the put holder can force the put writer to buy his stock, sparing the holder the full brunt of the stock price decline after figuring in premium and commission costs.

On the other side of the transaction, the writer of puts and calls makes his money when the option buyer guesses wrong. If the underlying stock price doesn't go much over the striking price in the case of calls or much under in the case of puts the option writer is safe.

The option he wrote won't be exercised by expiration and the writer pockets the premium minus commissions without being forced to buy or sell stock.

But this is just the start of the possibilities. The listing of put options for the first time on exchanges means investors can trade options looking for a profit only on fluctuations in premiums.

Call users obviously have a head start understanding put options, but even the experienced options player will have to digest a new set of strategies opened up by using puts and calls in tandem. Buying puts and calls in the same underlying stock can produce benefits in the event of a stock price move in either direction.

Beyond all this, there are tax and financial planning considerations.

It's a complicated and dangerous game. The universal advice for would-be options players, look before leaping.

U.S. aid to raise retail milk prices

President Carter has agreed to a government milk support increase that probably will raise the retail price of milk by 8 cents a gallon, government sources said Monday. The decision — to be announced today by Agriculture Sec. Bob Bergland — will increase government milk supports on April 1 by 74 cents per hundred pounds of milk, or slightly more than 6 cents a gallon. That is 9 per cent more than current supports and well above the 5 per cent increase recommended by the National Milk Producers Federation, which represents dairy farmers across the country. Patrick B. Healy, secretary of the federation, said the increase, when passed on to consumers, probably will raise prices in retail stores by 8 cents a gallon.

Harm of saccharin unsettled

The head of the National Cancer Institute expressed doubt Monday that saccharin causes cancer in humans. "Based on human data we do not believe saccharin is a potent carcinogen for humans, if it is one at all," Dr. Guy R. Newell, acting institute director, told a House health subcommittee. The subcommittee opened two days of hearings on a proposal by the Food and Drug Administration to ban saccharin because Canadian tests showed rats got cancer after being fed large doses of the artificial sweetener. However, government scientist testified Monday that the saccharin in just one daily can of diet soda — far below the 800 cans initially reported — can give rats cancer. Dr. Richard Bates, the FDA's commissioner for science, stressed that the impact of saccharin on humans is still largely unknown.

Car airbag debate reopened

Transportation Sec. Brock Adams overruled his predecessor Monday and reopened the possibility the government might require airbags or similar safety devices on passenger cars. Adams said he could not understand a ruling by former Sec. William Coleman against such safety devices even though they could save 9,000 lives. But he said he was undecided on whether they should be required on 1980 model year cars. Adams said he was reviewing Coleman's decision last December that ruled against requiring airbags or mandatory seatbelts. Hearings were scheduled for April 26, and Adams said he would rule by July 1 on the controversial issue.

Nestle boosts instant coffee price

The Nestle Co., Inc., Monday boosted wholesale prices by 12 cents an ounce on freeze-dried coffee and by 8 to 12 cents an ounce on its instant brands. The increase should be reflected on supermarket shelves in early July. Nestle, which is the nation's largest wholesaler of freeze-dried coffee and among the top three in the instant coffee market, said its second round of price hikes so far this year will go into effect April 2.

Ford recalls '68, '69 models

The Ford Motor Co., acting under government pressure, said Monday it is recalling more than a half-million 1968 and 1969 Mustangs and Mercury Cougars. A Ford spokesman said the recall involves a bracket supporting the right-hand side of the driver's bucket seat back. There have been 750 reports of seat back bracket failure, including 41 instances in which minor injuries were reported.

Coal energy conversion praised

Federal Energy Administrator John O'Leary Monday praised congressional efforts for mandatory conversion of electric power plants and industry to coal, adding the administration also was considering regulatory alternatives. O'Leary asked Congress for a six-month extension of current authority to order such conversion pending passage of legislation. "As part of the policy development for the President's April 20 message, we are evaluating alternative regulatory and other actions that could help to achieve the same objectives as the current draft of this committee's bill," O'Leary told a Senate Interior subcommittee.

Coffee shortage fake: legislator

A New York congressman says the current coffee shortage has been created by the Brazilian government to solve its own international balance of trade problems. Rep. Fred Richmond, D-N.Y., back from a visit with Brazilian coffee officials, said, "I come back with a clear feeling that there is no world shortage in coffee. I believe this shortage has been created by the Brazilian government." Richmond said, "I believe the Brazilian government cares more about its possible balance of trade for this year than it does about the future of coffee."

'Saccharin ban could be blessing'

NEW YORK — We have a lovely sense of values in this country. When the government systematically curbs our individual freedom in the name of looking out for the people better than they could look out for themselves, we dolefully nod and call it necessary and desirable. But when it fools around with our diet soft drinks, we hit the ceiling.

The temptation is to describe the flap over the Food and Drug Administration's ridiculous attempt to ban saccharin, on the basis of wildly inconclusive laboratory evidence, as being ironically "bitter." But in fact it could be the sweetest of blessings if it awakens millions of Americans to the folly — and the danger — of asking Washington to solve all our problems.

The facts of this one seem to have emerged unscathed from the pages of "Alice in Wonderland": Canadian tests showed that some rats developed cancer after being fed diets that contained 5 per cent saccharin. Hence the FDA had no option but to ban saccharin for humans, since a clause inserted by Rep. James J. Delaney, D-N.Y., in 1953 legislation requires the forbidding of any additive that causes any malignancy at all in humans or animals.

NO MATTER THAT saccharin has been in use for about 80 years without ever being known to cause a single human cancer, monkeys who were fed large doses for 6½ years developed no abnormalities, the equivalent human dosage of the saccharin fed the Canadian rats would be more than 33 cases (800 12-ounce cans) a day, or most people would be killed by the excessive water consumption alone before they finished the third case

No matter, either, that doctors immediately cited danger to diabetics, if the last presently available legal sweetener were removed from the market, and possible additional risk of obesity, heart disease and arthritis. Congress, in its wisdom has spoken — and the law allows no compromise on such piddling grounds as common sense.

How sweet it is. For years we have allowed — nay, encouraged — government to play parent for us in ever more areas. We have bowed to the Naderesque notion that we were innocent babes, desperately in need of bureaucratic guidance through the menacing thickets of adult decision-making.

We react emotionally, because that is the way these issues are usually presented. We are willing to believe that it is good for noble government to be cracking down on "those big corporations" until we find that the crack-down has been, in fact, on our free choice on our freedom to choose the medicine we want or the sweetener we like.

What we do not need is more Big Brothers in Washington — and if the saccharin lunacy has helped to convey this overdue message, we will truly be able to say: How sweet it is. (c) 1977 McNaught Syndicate, Inc.

Dow down 7.48 in moderate day

NEW YORK (UPI)—Inflation fears plus gloomy reports on business orders contributed to profit taking Monday that drove prices lower in moderate trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which gained 13.30 points overall last week, fell 7.48 points to 953.54. Analysts noted the average fell 3.82 points Friday and 3.16 Thursday, after a 20-point advance early in the week.

The NYSE common stock index lost 0.27 to 55.09 and the average price of a common share gave up 15 cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, containing some over-the-counter stocks, lost 0.55 to 101.31.

Bill giving jobless 52 weeks of aid OK'd

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Unemployed persons in 31 states would be eligible for up to one year of unemployment compensation under a bill passed Monday by the U.S. House.

The states include Illinois, Minnesota, North Dakota and Wisconsin. In general, individuals in the other states and the District of Columbia, which have insured unemployment rates below 5 per cent, would be eligible only for 39 weeks.

However, 52 weeks would be the maximum in "labor market areas" — generally greater metropolitan areas — where unemployment is more than 5 per cent even though the state rate is not.

Evansville, Ind., is among the cities which would qualify for 52 weeks this fiscal year.

According to unemployment projections, Wilmington, Del.; Honolulu; Evansville, Ind.; Toledo and Youngstown, Ohio; Augusta, Ga.; Chicago and Rockford, Ill., and Louisville, Ky., would qualify in fiscal 1978.

Explosion splits Panama tanker

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (UPI) — An explosion split a 711-foot Panamanian tanker in half 125 miles off the North Carolina coast, killing some of its 39 crewmen outright and hurling others into the sea. The survivors, with no way to call for help, waited 20 hours for passing ships to find them Monday.

Welders apparently caused the blast that cut the Claude Conway apart Sunday morning. By nightfall Monday 27 survivors had been picked up and two Coast Guard cutters searched through the darkness for the 13 missing crewmen.

"Many people were thrown in the water and we never saw them again," a survivor said.

The two halves of the huge tanker — still afloat at last report — had not spilled the 546,000 gallons of oil the Conway was carrying from New York to Freeport, Bahamas.

PASSING MERCHANT ships rescued 27 of the crew early Monday morning, about 20 hours after the explosion. The Coast Guard, after questioning several of the Spanish-speaking crewmen, said the explosion apparently happened Sunday morning.

A fire broke out but was extinguished quickly, and crewmen told the Coast Guard it took about three hours for the ship to break up. The Coast Guard said the ship's radio would not work, and the survivors had to wait for a passing ship to spot them before being rescued.

Eighteen of those were picked up by Coast Guard helicopters and flown to the Naval hospital here for medical treatment. The remaining nine crewmen were aboard one of the merchant vessels that was reported enroute to Baltimore, Md.

The Coast Guard said a minor oil slick was spotted near the wreckage, but it was believed to be from the vessel's engine. They said even a spill of the entire 546,000 gallons would be minor and not pose an environmental hazard.

A PASSING merchant ship reported to the Coast Guard Monday afternoon that the two sections of the vessel were afloat in the calm waters south-east of Wilmington.

Alvaro Carratu, a native of Uruguay and a fireman aboard the Conway, said he was about to take a shower at 8:46 a.m. Sunday when "I felt a big explosion. I ran outside and there was big confusion . . . everybody screaming."

"Many people were thrown in the water and we never saw them again. Some people died in the explosion," Carratu said.

Carratu said welders working on one of the ship's tanks apparently set off the blast.

Some of the crewmen went immediately to the lifeboats, Carratu said, but others stayed aboard until help arrived.

THE BOW SECTION of the tanker Claude Conway and 18 were moved by the Coast Guard to a Navy Hospital in North Carolina. drifts in the Atlantic following an explosion that ripped the ship in half. Twelve crewmen are missing

Marines denied service; McGuire's tavern cited

The Illinois Liquor Control Commission issued a citation Monday to the owner of Butch McGuire's tavern, 300 E. Rand in Mount Prospect and ordered him to explain why eight uniformed Marines were refused service at his bar on St. Patrick's Day.

The citation charged the bar, owned by Robert (Butch) McGuire, with violating the Soldiers and Sailors Act of 1948, which prohibits discrimination against servicemen, according to Thomas Murphy, liquor commission executive secretary.

McGuire was told to appear at next Monday's commission meeting to explain the incident.

He faces possible revocation of his liquor license.

U. S. Atty. Samuel K. Skinner, who is investigating the incident, said McGuire and his attorneys met with him Monday.

Skinner will make a statement on the incident and his investigation today.

The eight Marines, led by Col.

Frank G. McLenon, commanding officer of the Marine Air Reserve Training Detachment, Glenview Naval Air Station, were turned away from the bar by an assistant manager because they were in uniform. McLenon was accompanied by two other colonels, three captains, two lieutenants and four wives of the officers.

Neither McGuire nor McLenon was available Monday.

Wycliffe group dinner April 2

Wycliffe Bible translators will have a dinner meeting April 2 at the Mount Prospect Holiday Inn, 200 E. Rand Rd.

Wycliffe Associates, an Orange, Calif. Christian organization consisting of 3,600 members, specializes in Bible translations for tribal groups that speak unwritten languages. Wycliffe translators work in 600 languages in 26 countries.

Goals of Wycliffe, an interdenominational group, include development of alphabets, instruction in reading and writing for tribesmen, translation of the New Testament into native languages, and work in health, agriculture and simple industries.

The 7 p.m. dinner April 2 will feature a multi-media presentation and a missionary speaker.

Reservations for the dinner may be made through Mr. and Mrs. Chris F. Somerfield, 397-4252, by March 30.

Goldwater denies links to crime boss as illegal by United Press International

In a series of articles on crime and corruption in Arizona, Investigative Reporters and Editors Inc. have charged that Robert Goldwater, the brother of Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., maintained business and personal relationships with reputed organized crime figure Moe B. Dalitz.

In addition, the investigators said Robert Goldwater received free rooms at the Desert Inn, and that he has a line of credit at the Las Vegas gambling casino. The team also said Robert Goldwater has accompanied Dalitz on golf courses and other outings.

Robert Goldwater responded to these allegations in a letter sent to attorneys for United Press International and to other news organizations, saying:

"As I told the reporters, I have been acquainted with Mr. Dalitz for some number of years, but have entered into only a single business transaction with him — the placement of a store in The Desert Inn in Las Vegas in 1963. I have played golf with Mr. Dalitz on occasion and have seen him socially," Goldwater wrote.

"I AM NOT at all ashamed to have maintained an acquaintance with Mr. Dalitz. While I know nothing of your reporters' allegations with respect to Mr. Dalitz, I do know that during the time that I have known him he has been a public spirited citizen. He has been a generous and frequent contributor to charitable causes and has been a very respectable citizen of his city, state and country," Goldwater wrote.

In responding to the report that he had gambling debts in Las Vegas, Goldwater wrote:

"You reporters have asked about my gambling debts at The Desert Inn in Las Vegas. There simply have been no debts incurred and certainly none in the amounts suggested by their inquiries. I have no idea from what source they obtained their information, but it simply is not true," Goldwater wrote.

According to Larry Hammond, attorney for Robert Goldwater, Goldwater is waiting to see all the articles published by the investigative organization before making any further public statement.

IN THE NINTH copyrighted article on crime and corruption in Arizona, Investigative Reporters and Editors Inc. said that Raul Castro, international affairs attorney and former United States ambassador, has held meetings with a former client he himself describes as a "swindler." The investigators also said that Castro did not list a house he received as a legal fee as income on his taxes.

The Investigators said Castro:

- Dismissed suggestions of conflict of interest as well-intentioned mistakes.

- Appointed tough administrators to clean up the state police and corporate corruption, but his cronies get state building rental contracts by underbidding competition and then getting state approval for cost overruns and rent increases.

- Appointed men to state office despite confidential reports stating the men have questionable character.

- Campaigned against mob-connected businessmen he says have infested the state, yet insists he does not recognize some of their names among his campaign contributors.

The Investigative Reporters and Editors, Inc. is a team of nearly 40 journalists from 25 news organizations who investigated crime in Arizona following the bombing murder of Arizona Republic reporter Don Bolles.

No change noted in nervous system

Body not hurt by pot use: study

CHICAGO (UPI) — A study of heavy marijuana smokers — including those who puffed up to 20 cigarettes a day — failed to show changes in the central nervous system, the Journal of the American Medical Assn. reported.

The study, conducted by the Alcohol and Drug Abuse Research Center of the Harvard Medical School, McLean Hospital, Belmont, Mass., covered a 31-day period during which 19 male volunteers between the ages of 21 and 27 smoked an average of five marijuana cigarettes.

"In this study we were unable to confirm evidence of structural changes in the CNS (central nervous system) in young men who smoked large amounts of marijuana," the report said. "Independent and comparative analysis of all 19 cases showed no evidence of abnormality."

THE DOCTORS used a form of computerized X-ray photography scans and found the ventricular system and the subarachnoid spaces of the brain and spinal system were normal in size. There was no indication of atrophic change, they said.

The report differed from one published in 1971, which suggested marijuana might cause structural damage to the central nervous system. The Harvard doctors said their volunteers were healthy men with no current or past record of neurological disorders.

"We believe that these persons may be more representative of the general population of heavy marijuana users than those examined by" the earlier researcher, the report said.

IT MUST BE a real trip, burning 5 1/2 tons of marijuana. That's the task of police in Bangkok, Thailand. The grass was confiscated by the government last year and another 4 1/2 tons, confiscated this year is waiting to be burned in similar fashion.

Find booty by March 28 or out you go: Army

Time running out on gold seekers

WHITE SANDS, N.M. (UPI) — Heavy equipment clawed at the cactus and brush-covered surface of Victorio Peak Monday in a bid by treasure seekers to find a fabled gold fortune estimated at $250 billion.

The searchers — a mixed group of amateurs and professionals — had used up almost one-third of the time allowed them by the U.S. Army, which controls the missile range on which the Peak is located. They have until March 28 to prove the stories of buried gold dating back 400 years.

However, even if they find the buried cave containing piles of gold bars, they will not be able to remove the treasure until all legal claims have been settled.

search, said a five-man crew would crawl into a fault in the limestone peak to map a 300-foot tunnel and compare it with stories told by several claimants.

Scott, a professional treasure finder, has been conservative in his predictions.

"THERE IS NO question that this was an active mine at one time," he said.

"A gold mine? Who knows. A lead mine? Who knows."

There has been speculation that piles of heavy metal bars several persons said they saw were lead.

Although the peak is listed on maps as being 5,900-foot tall, it rises only 700 feet above the desert basin and is crisscrossed with rough roads.

A BACKHOE DUG boulders away from a small crevice on the side of the peak, enlarging a hole through which three men crawled Sunday. They found a cavern but no gold. An exit from the cavern, possibly leading to a tunnel, had been covered by a landslide.

Scott said the 45-minute search was only to get information for more intensive exploration.

"This tempo will be increasing each and every day on Vicky Peak, where we had the opening of a hole," Scott said.

About a mile from the peak, down the dry Hembill Gulch, a bulldozer was brought in to dig for another reported cache.

The gulch site was called "Bloody Hands" because of centuries-old Indian petroglyph on the side of a cliff.

County approves manpower grants

Money to repair potholes, hire student recreation leaders and improve the appearance of local ponds has been approved for the Northwest suburbs.

Grants totaling $90,294 for the Northwest suburbs were among the manpower programs approved Monday by the Cook County board under the Comprehensive Employment Training Act. The funds will be used to hire and train unemployed workers.

Receiving funds were the Arlington Heights Park District, $17,680; the Hoffman Estates Park District, $23,876; the Prospect Heights Park District, $14,251; the Village of Wheeling, $22,118; and the Northwest Mental Health Center, Arlington Heights, $12,569.

Allen Binder, Hoffman Estates parks director, said Monday the money will pay a four-man crew to do landscaping and beautification work. They will do soil erosion work at all the park district ponds and construct a retaining wall at Highpoint Park. Greg Peters, administrative assistant in Wheeling, said the village has a lot of winter damage to repair and will use its grant to hire workers to repair potholes, broken sidewalks and dead parkway grass.

The Prospect Heights Park District will use the funds to pay the salary of a maintenance superintendent.

Tom Thornton, Arlington Heights parks director, said the money will pay college-age recreation leaders to work full-time this summer at Camelot, Frontier, Recreation, Pioneer and Heritage parks.

Win at bridge

Tight squeeze makes seven

We recommend strongly that you play that the five-club response to Blackwood shows zero or four aces. This leaves some special use for the five-notrump response but we recommend even more strongly that you just leave that one out. You aren't likely to need it.

Two of the greatest players of all time, who are now playing their bridge in another world, did have a use for this bid and their special convention did come up once.

Sidney Sliodor, who sat North, responded five notrump to show four aces and no kings. John Crawford proceeded to bid six clubs to ask his partner to bid seven if he held the queen of trumps and Sidney obliged.

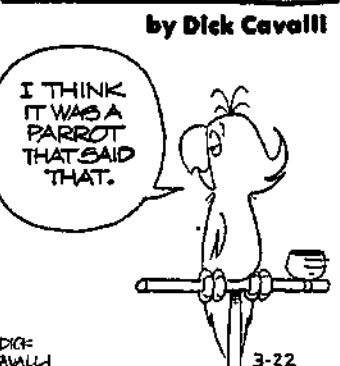

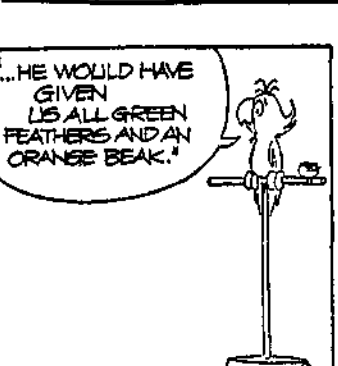

The four-zero trump break together with the bad breaks in the minor suits gave Johnny a problem but he was able to handle it.

He played dummy's ace of spades at trick two. East showed out but Johnny was able to lead to his king and pick up West's jack.

Then he played three rounds of clubs while discarding a diamond from dummy. He cashed his king and queen of diamonds and continued with his last trump to force poor East to unguard either the jack of clubs or jack of diamonds.

THE BORN LOSER

CAPTAIN EASY

FRISCILLA'S POP

Ask Andy

Woodpecker's tail, feet help him in clinging

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1977 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Marie Jordan, 11, of Costa Mesa, Calif., for her question:

HOW DO WOODPECKERS CLING TO TREES?

Most woodpeckers work for man by helping to protect the forest. They eat insects and grubs that lie beneath tree bark and find food by pounding on trees with their sharp beaks. When his hole is drilled, the woodpecker grabs his bug meal with a pointed, barbed tongue.

There are 210 different species of woodpeckers living today in the wooded areas of every part of the world except Madagascar, Australia and many of the Oceania islands.

Each woodpecker seems to have an almost magical ability to cling to tree trunks and branches that go straight up an down. A short, stiff tail, hooked claws and four-toed feet support his body as he seems to be stuck at an almost impossible angle. One variety, the northern blackbacked and boreal woodpecker, by the way, has only three toes. All varieties, however, use the spine-tipped tail as a brace in climbing vertical surfaces.

So that's how the woodpecker clings to trees: He's built for it.

Woodpeckers have long and strong necks. Their chisel-tipped bills used for cutting into wood have unusual strength, and their skulls are especially reinforced to withstand the pounding and vibrations.

Woodpeckers prey chiefly on beetles and other insects that live more or less permanently in dead wood. They do not migrate.

One variety of woodpecker, the yellow-bellied sapsucker, girdles trunks of trees with borings and thus is one of the few in his family that could prove harmful to man.

Our friend the woodpecker seems to depend on his sense of hearing to detect his prey. In hunting, he mounts from the lower part of a tree, often working in long spirals, hopping briskly and pausing often to listen. He turns his head from side to side regularly and then either starts hammering or bounds off to another location.

He builds his nest by drilling round holes in dead limbs and trunks. He tunnels down from 12 to 18 inches and hollows out a chamber where three to five eggs are laid.

The father in the family plays an important part in the nest building, incubation and rearing of the young, although mother helps. Incubation time for the eggs ranges from 11 to 14 days, going up to 18 days for some of the larger species. The nesting period is then from 19 to 35 days — much longer than with most birds.

Andy sends a Student Globe to Danna Archer, 11, of Tacoma, Wash., for her question:

WHAT ARE FINGERNAILS?

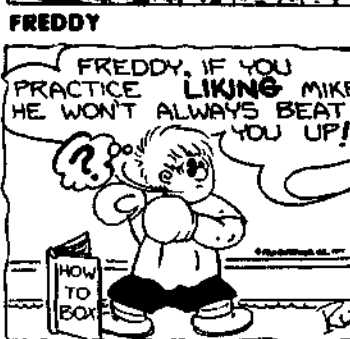

Fingernails, just like toenails, claws and hooves, are produced by the skin. Nails are actually the flattened claws of the highest order of mammals — the primates which include man, monkeys and apes.

Nails are made of a substance called keratin, a horny material which protects the digits. They are modified reptilian scales consisting of a hard top plate and a soft under plate.

Fingernails grow from the matrix, the crescent half-moon on the nail base, which is formed by the deepest layer of the outer epidermis. They grow about one-eighth of an inch per month.

Do you have a question to Ask Andy? Send it on a post card with your name, age and complete address to Ask Andy in care of The Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Entries are open to girls and boys 7 to 17.

splash hits

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

If that basic but blase trench coat is making you feel more like a run-down private eye than a cheerful antidote to a rainy day, maybe it's time for a change.

Of course, prices for this spring's crop of rainwear are climbing with the rest of the economy (a saleswoman at Marshall Field's says their average coat this spring is $100). But if you've got the cash and the chutzpah, you can brave the elements in everything from a sunny yellow "wet look" poncho to a metallic floor-length cape.

It's a far cry from the days when shoppers faced rack after rack of beige, navy or black polyester-blend raincoats in classic double-breasted trench styles or round collar, raglan-sleeved versions.

These days you'll see smocks, hoods and capes in fabrics ranging from polyurethane to Qiana. Today's colors include pastel shades of lilac, jasmine and melon as well as fire engine red and bright green.

"No fashion-conscious woman is going to be trudging along in a basic balmacaan (raglan-sleeved, round-collared) coat these days," said Ted Rose of Fleet Street, a medium-priced line of women's outerwear.

Rose said both hooded coats and capes have been selling well this season. Polished cottons for a shiny slicker finish lead the way in fabrics.

The slicker look and the cape influence haven't gained much ground with London Fog, but the country's largest raincoat manufacturer is updating its conservative image. Representative Gary Zimmerman said the company is moving away from total classics and is expanding its line to entice younger, more fashion-conscious buyers.

Hoods are now included in several styles, and while white is still the most popular color, bright shades of red and yellow are also cropping up, he said.

Sales at Marshall Field's Woodfield store seem to bear out the new trend. The women's coat department is selling high-fashion raincoats at a much faster clip than the traditional styles, said one saleswoman.

"Even older women are buying coats with removable capes and hoods," she said. "There are a lot of 'updated classics,' but the older styles aren't selling well."

Although solid beige shades still dominate the racks, herringbones and muted plaids are gaining popularity. As for the appeal of bright colors on a rainy day: "You'd be surprised at the women in their sixties who want a bright red coat," she said with a smile.

For the well-heeled woman in need of a new coat, designers such as Diane von Furstenberg, Bill Blass, Anne Klein, Luba and Raphael feature raincoats and/or umbrellas in their repertoire. Prices at Main Street, a company which carries both Diane von Furstenberg and Bill Blass, range from $90 to $200.

Popular fabrics in the higher-priced category include the wet look of cire, poplin and even pure water-repellent silk.

If high fashion influences the raincoat business, it is making headway in the umbrella industry as well. Tartan plaids, bright florals and yes, even designer names are joining ranks with the standard black umbrella.

Bernard Nahm of Bernard Nahm and Associates says his firm's Anne Klein and Stella Olsen designer umbrellas comprise almost 80 per cent of its line, and Nahm says he'll be adding additional designers next season.

Designer umbrellas run anywhere from $15 to $35, with other fashion umbrellas following at $12 to $15, said Nahm. Women who opt for the designer variety can expect a "certain status" for the extra cash, he added.

"Right now, that Anne Klein logo is magic . . . it stands up for itself," said Nahm. "The umbrellas tie in with her ready-to-wear items, and the woman can coordinate everything."

Also gaining in popularity is the compact Knirps umbrella, a collapsible style that comes with or without its own carrying case.

Regardless of the new developments in rainwear, the die-hard purist with an interest in fashion needn't resort to a Diane von Furstenberg cire wrap coat or a pull-on poncho for two with matching metallic umbrella.

A sales representative for Weatherbee, a major line of women's rainwear, says the simple trench coat is still one of the company's biggest sellers, whatever a woman's age. And while Shedrain Umbrellas carries almost 10 different Diane von Furstenberg umbrella styles, the No. 1 item is still the standard black or navy version.

Even a saleswoman at On Stage, a youth-oriented shop for juniors at Woodfield Mall, shrugged when asked about the popularity of an oversized plastic mackintosh, marked down $21 to $4.99.

"No, we aren't selling many of these," she admitted. "I bought one, but I'm in the minority . . . these strictly high-fashion styles don't appeal to everyone."

Color updates classic sweater style

SPRING SWEATER NOTES — One of the interesting fashion approaches this season is giving traditional sweaters unusual pattern and color treatments.

One sweater designer, for example, takes the classic, solid crew-neck pull-over and does it in all wool, patterned with large blocks on both the body and sleeves in blue, gray, yellow and soft white. Quite an up-dated look for this traditional style.

There seems to be a trend to more use of wool for sweaters, undoubtedly because this natural fiber wears well, resists snagging and keeps its shape.

Harry Juster

Look smart

In addition, it absorbs moisture, such as perspiration.

READERS ASK:

Dear Mr. Juster: I didn't have my brown herringbone suit more than a couple of months when I accidentally ripped the pants beyond repair. I am wondering now if I might at least get some use out of the coat, as a sport jacket, by putting metal buttons on it. — H.R.L.

You left out one very important detail — the fabric. If it's a soft-finish material, it could very well pinch hit as a sport jacket. However, if it's a smooth hard-finished fabric, your idea won't work as it will look like nothing but an odd suit coat rather than a sport coat.

Dear Mr. Juster: In one of your columns you recommended that shirt sleeves should drop about a half inch below the coat sleeves. This puzzles me. Could you please explain the value of this? T.F.

There are several reasons why this is recommended. The first, is that it adds a neat dressy look. Secondly, it allows the shirt sleeve to catch the soil. Also, sleeves eventually fray and it is better to let the shirt rather than the coat sleeves take the wear.

For the leaflet, "Dress Pointers," send 10 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Harry Juster, in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.

Dear Mr. Juster: A close friend at our office has a chance for a promotion, but I learned that his chances are slim due to his dress. He is capable, and I think it's unfair to hold him back because he dresses carelessly and doesn't look the part of an executive. — Ms. L.

He is standing in his own way because, like it or not, impressions are often influenced by appearance and the higher-ups realize an "executive look" carries weight in the business world. As a friend, why don't you bring this home to him? If he's smart he will remove this stumbling block to moving up.

Mrs. H.R., please note: Your husband will stop complaining about excessive lint on his socks after they are washed if you turn them inside out before washing.

A HANDY TRAVEL ACCESSORY — The recently introduced Lorus battery-operated rotary blade shaver... a compact, streamlined cylindrical style that is simple to use. It comes with a carrying case and takes a minimum of space.

SEEN IN NEW YORK! The newest sparkle is a touch of gold lame on a rainy day... from "gold" trenchcoats to "gold" jeans or from shoulder bags to a tiny clutch. They're pretty for a cloudy day and "blinding" when the sun comes out. Now New York '77 G.J.L.

(Register and Tribune Syndicate '77)

Advice for a rainy day.

A rain poncho looks wrong worn with a long dress. It also doesn't protect it, so relegate your poncho to sporty looks.

No one's sneering at waterproof boots any longer, provided they're sleek. You can even choose a pair combining canvas and rubber.

Don't pack a plastic raincoat in its accompanying plastic case when you're going on a trip. You want the room for other things. Simply carry it over your arm.

Trenchcoats are smart and stylish, but they don't look right over cocktail dresses, no matter how short they are.

How to care for an aging parent

Maybe there are too many generations under your roof. Or you have an aging parent struggling along alone. Who'll be around to help if there is a fall or sickness in the night? Will a TV be his only close companion? Will she be eating well?

They're too strong and proud for nursing care. And by living in the right environment, their years can be truly brim full of life. Such a place is Bowes Retirement Center in Elgin. Here there is dignity and conviviality for older men and women. A gentle helping hand. Friends to watch out.

We'll prove to you that living in lovely surroundings, dining tastefully and being pampered costs no more. A single small monthly payment includes three meals, maid service, private room and bath, physician on call and much more.

Our thirty years experience indicates that inactivity of the mind and body brings on complete helplessness. We offer the most stimulating activities, including whirlpool baths, saunas, our own exercise system, arts, crafts, and games.

SPRING SCENE '77

Getting back to basics this spring

Clean and simple fashion trend

The "do-your-own-thing" wardrobe is done and gone! No more better-skillet mix and match pieces accumulating in the closet.

American fashion is simpler, cleaner, and less complicated than ever as it swings into the spring showings. But clean and simple by no means equal boring and dull; color and cut are alive!

According to the American Designer Showings for Resort/Spring, 1977, American fashion ushers in 1977 with five major changes including a narrowing down of options, writing "fins" to the do-your-own-thing syndrome, the widening of skirts, the return of the waistline and interest in hemlines.

DESIGNERS AIM to bring fashion and life-style closer by divorcing fashion from the calendar. They see today's workable wardrobe as a year-round turntable, effortlessly swinging from climate to climate.

Most designers now concentrate on seasonless fabrics, adding layers instead of changing weights. Tweed, cotton, unlined flannel, gabardine, cotton twill, burlap, linen, crepe de chine, taffeta, velvet, all have lost their seasonal connotation.

Our designers have endorsed the busy American woman's rejection of the confusion and waste represented by too many aimless separates.

Piling on multiples in ragbag mixtures is out in the new discipline. Current thinking is toward deliberately related costumes which can also interrelate.

MOST COLLECTIONS reflect one of the two distinct American approaches to dressing: slick, clean-cut and modern or nostalgic, folkloric clothes which dramatize the peasant look like stage costumes, in vivid colors with rich, elaborate trimmings.

The stress is on native costumes of the Americas — Caribbean, South American and plantation themes.

Some collection cover points of view.

While there are far more skirts than pants, there are pants aplenty, and in a great variety of lengths, from heel to above-ankle to Bermudas, to shorts and short-shorts.

ALL PANTS AND most suit skirts are narrowed down: dresses and evening dresses are either wrapped close and flowing out or very full and billowing. The dirndl and tiered peasant skirt are a natural expression of the native-costume kick all designers are on.

The waistline is definitely a new focus: wrapped with a sash and shaped-in in suit jackets, marked by wide bias inserts, or cinched in with a stiffened cummerbund.

Some designers also play with the wavering waistline — low blouses and high empire bodices are frequent.

The arms are played up in many variations of shoulder and sleeve interest. Sleeveless dresses, sleeveless jackets, boleros, bit peasant sleeves, raglan shoulders, squared and dolman armholes are among these.

ONE AMERICANISM in these collections is a total cleanup of all dripping or draggy extras. Everything is either attached or built-in, without extraneous doodads.

Trimming is much more stressed: braids, tucks, embroideries, pipings in bright color contrast, lace insertions.

Wild and wonderful color, the whole paint-box range, and sweet, tender colors are countered in the American collections by many nuances of no-color and white. The natural and earth tones are very big with sports designers, who also love the big brights.

Young wardrobe candy-coated

Sugar 'n' spice 'n' everything nice, that's what little girls will be made of this spring, as young fashions go innocent and romantic this season.

Eyelet and lace, ribbons and embroideries adorn little girls' sunsuits, dress-with-panty sets, and dresses for an angelic look, especially in white.

But to illustrate that little girls have ginger in them too, they'll also be sporting T-shirts with amusing, sassy messages, in bold, sunny colors, to wear with their beloved jeans and shorts.

For the young net set, tennis fashions run the gamut from little tennis dresses to painter shorts. Appliques, piping, and stripes add colorful touches to young tennis gear for spring.

LINDA COULD climb a tree in this Faded Glory ensemble by Appendages. The rugged jeans and matching vest with snap front sport leather pockets and contrasting leather-braid trim. The V-neck shirt is 100 per cent cotton. A skirt and jacket to match are also available at Pants Towne, Arlington Market, Arlington Heights.

Once more with felt

Felt appliques are great for decorating children's clothes. If your youngster has an old shirt or skirt that he or she isn't wearing, add a pretty felt applique of an animal, letter or flower to give the clothing a new look.

POLISH UP your over-all appearance with a touch of class from Florsheim. These leather shoes are on display at Hupert Shoes, 1125 Mount Prospect Plaza in Mount Prospect.

KIM DONAVON can smile about spring because she's ready for it in this backless, halter jumpsuit. Made from 100 per cent acrylic, the wrap-around jacket picks up the multi-colored striping scheme in the top of the jumpsuit and the black sleeves match the bottom. From By George His & Hers Clothier at 1466 Lee St. in Des Plaines.

NO MATTER what the forecast, these leather coats will weather any conditions in style. The blue glove-leather tie car coat is by Hlah of California and the men's long leather buttendown by Gandalf. Both from Fureel in the Woodfield Mall, Schaumburg.

hairlines by remo

The opening of the new HAIRLINES by REMO at 1512 Miner Street in Des Plaines will showcase the award-winning talents and expertise of Remo and his stylists.

Always searching and adding new techniques to his skills, Remo recently returned from a worldwide meeting of stylists in London. Not one to pass an opportunity to further his own creativity, participated in demonstrations from top artists throughout the United Kingdom. Among them were such standouts as members of Vidal Sassoon team and Alexandre de Paris.

The newsmaking techniques of these artists will enhance the many new spring hair fashions Remo will create at HAIRLINES. In addition, Remo and his talented stylists will be putting to work their special know-how gained at a multitude of technical and professional classes to keep them current and knowledgeable. An expert at Unisex styling, Remo employs a staff of specially European-trained hair stylists. For a professional styling that is truly out of the ordinary, visit Remo at his new shop.

LINDA MADAY and Barb Bauske have no trouble ignoring the spring showers in these bright fashions from The Crawford Department Store, 3240 Kirchoff Rd. in Rolling Meadows. Linda's Jonathan Logan dress, $58, of polyester, acetate and nylon bouclé weave features the latest blouson look. The white A-line with blue and white squared-off top is accented by a matching blue and white striped zippered jacket with elasticized sleeves, drawstring waist and drop shoulders, sizes 8-16. Barb's poly/cotton sailcloth all-weather coat comes in light blue sizes 9-15 for $48. The tucked yoke is carried through to hood and the set-in waistband ties in front.

Shades frame facial lines

Sunglasses should be chosen to complement the face.

According to Foster Grant Co., Inc., women are creating sunglass "wardrobes" to reflect the varied tempo of their lifestyles this spring. A practical and versatile selection is easy to assemble because variety, in lens treatments and frame styles and colors, is the key word today.

The first step is to select sunglasses that enhance facial contour. Following this simple rule of thumb will help. Choose sunglasses with frames having a different shape than the face.

ROUND FACES look best in square, octagonal or sweeping wrap-arounds that don't extend outside the face. Women in this category should avoid sunglasses with round lenses. A faceful of circles will add pounds to the appearance.

Square faces need round or oval-shaped sunglasses. Pear-shaped faces look better in frames with emphasis on top, such as ovals that slant slightly upward. The oblong-shaped face gains width with frames having upturned lines extending beyond the broadest part of the face.

For faces that narrow at the forehead and widen at the jaws, the right frames will be thicker above the eye and thinner below. Wrap-arounds, which tend to lift up the face, are fine, too. Conversely, broad foreheads and narrow jaws need sunglasses with straight-line upper rims and oval-shaped lenses.

Women with thin or long oval-shaped faces are lucky. They can wear almost any frame style except for those super skinny ones. Small faces need delicate frame styles.

FOSTER GRANT stylists suggest that sunglasses also help modify certain less-than-perfect features. Round, wide frames and a low-riding bridge "shorten" a long nose, while slender, horizontal frames with a bridge perched high on the nose will "lengthen" it. Wide nostrils look narrower with sunglasses having a wide, keyhole-shaped bridge. Pointed chins "soften" with frames having flowing, rather than angular, lines.

Along with dozens of eye-catching frame styles, a number of lens treatments are available, designed to accommodate both lifestyle and sunlight conditions. For example, the effect of sun on water can mean wear and tear on the eyes, and polarized lenses offer protection by reducing the glare of reflected light.

Sunglasses with mirrored lenses add mystery while serving a practical purpose. These have a special coating which deflects heat-producing infrared rays from the lens surface. For squinty, super-bright days and hot-weather activities — jogging, volleyball and sunbathing — mirrors are ideal.

Polarized mirrors represent an important break-through in sunglass technology. They do double duty by bouncing intense light off the lens surface while providing extra protection through glare reduction. This lens combination, unique to Foster Grant, is important to the all-around sports-person.

"RADIANT" gradients are also making fashion news this spring.

Gradient lenses feature a dense tint at the top of the lens that fades to near transparency at the bottom. This style combines sophistication with soft femininity — a fresh, clean, exciting look. They're great for days that are moderately sunny. By the way, all pastel-colored tints are stylish as long as tint and outfit are coordinated.

Another lens duo, the gradient mirror, combines the contemporary, subtle shading of dark to light tint with the ability to reflect intense light from the lens surface. The shimmering effect produced by this combination is a fashion find for spring '77.

For use indoors and out, sunglasses with photochromic lenses, such as the Spectra-Shades, are sun sensitive, adjusting automatically to changing light conditions. These are great for use throughout the day, for a morning's shopping and an afternoon of tennis.

With so many style and color variations and combinations available, selecting sunglasses that reflect a mood or overall personality can be an interesting challenge. Remember to work within a basic shape, suited to your features.

RAGNAR PETERSON epitomizes sophistication in this polyester-wool blend summerweight suit by Hickey-Freeman. The subtle stripe is $295. A silk shantung tie by Contess Mara, $16.50, and cotton-polyester shirt by Hathaway, $17.50, complete the ensemble from J. Svoboda Sons, 12 S. Dunton Ave., Arlington Heights.

Prints set patterns

Prints make the fashion changes happen fast. Giving the cues are feminine florals, peasant prints, kitchen stripes and checks.

Florals range from tropical jungles to dainty English rock gardens. Most are on a dark background. They're especially important on "big" evening skirts and dresses.

Stripes come next, right out of the kitchen. The dishcloth stripe and the "hand-towel" look do lots of work in sportswear.

The traditional classics are madras plaids, in muted new versions, bright awning stripes, pin-stripes and puckered stripes. There's also the old-fashioned taffeta ribbon plaid and the charming tablecloth check.

BUFFALO GROVE

LOOKING forward to wearing clothes like these makes the mornings easier. Barb Kivland woke up to doing it herself with patterns and fabric from Stretch and Sew, 222 E. Grove in Arlington Heights. Sewn in an eye-opening check fabric, this pants suit is worn with a turtleneck and accented by a tie front.

Indulge in many fabrics, accessories

This is the season to really let yourself go when mixing and matching fabrics and piling on the accessories.

Indulge in stacks of bracelets or rings, ropes of glistening leaves or seashells and striking primitive pieces.

The bib necklace, the rope or cord "lasso," the slithery metal coils, and the knotted fabric choker are a few new looks.

Lots of pretty feminine jewelry looks are fashioned in porcelain, enamel, antique pretenders, inlays and lacquer.

FABRICS THIS SPRING are delicious... whether they're crunchy taffetas, home-fresh cottons or delicate silks.

The buffet is piled high with cottons of every flavor... the newest are old favorites — crisp pique, airy voiles, cloque, poplin and lightweight gabardine.

Fabrics with body for all the "big" shapes. Peasant fantasies need chintz, light challs, chino and denim.

The fluids call for lightweight cotton knits. Open weave knits and dish towel "kitchen" cottons wander all over ready-to-wear.

LINENS ARE CRISP and classic or light and airy as handkerchiefs. Linen-looking knits and silk and linen beinds are other main dishes this season.

Silk rustles with opulent flavorings: silk chiffon, georgette, crepes, and jerseys. Pucker fabrics like seersucker and crinkle cotton flavor sportswear.

Shinies like paper thin cre, taffeta, polished cotton, satin stripes are exotic spicings.

Trim is more important than ever: lace, eyelet, braid, ric-rac fringes, piping, pleats.

HAIR ORNAMENTS are newly important: combs, gold bars, barrettes, flowers. Long dangly earrings go with the peasant look.

There's also a trend toward tiny precious or semi-precious stud earrings worn in twos or threes. The single diamond stud earring fad continues.

Belts are a must with many ways to mark the waist-land. The newest look is the knotted rope belt over loose separates or the look of a patterned fabric belt layered over a scarf.

The wide belt is important with full skirts and it's done in corselet, ethnic or cinch-belt fashion.

BELTS WITH pockets and pouches are made for both day and evening wear. The narrow metallic belt for evening, the man-tailored belt for classicists and the real-metal "jewelry" buckle continue.

Handbags are practical or fantasy. Watch for ethnic fabrics, pouches for evening, and the use of eccentric shapes and materials, such as wooden boxes, baskets, bracelet bags.

For daytime, it's the perennial envelope, the luggage look, the lightweight parachute bags and the briefcase look in the fabric/leather mix.

Scarves are popular. The newest place to wear is at the hip, Carmen Miranda-style. Huge scarves become the big ethnic coverups, including lots of shawls, serapes and kerchiefs.

THE CUMMERBUND, the peasant sash and the obi are all ways to wrap the waist with scarves. The sarong scarf will be the big beach coverup again.

Hats are varied this year. Think "head coverings." We're talking about turbans, skull caps and hoods. There are romantic straws and panamas for the classicists.

The old-fashioned pocket watch has returned to style. Vests for both men's and women's suits have caused a high demand for antique-style watches, many with ornamental fobs.

Decorative pocket watches need not be expensive to look authentic. The finest old-time designs have been reproduced on the backs of the cases, and the faces are ornate with scrolls or exquisitely colored raised decorations.

Paris spotlights costumed look

Paris designers are offering a dance-hall girl costume look this spring. Velvet tops sporting spaghetti straps and tied like a corset are featured over full skirts in bright taffeta fabrics. High-heeled shoes with ankle straps and fringe shawls complete this costume look.

The nipped-in waist and the full skirt could bring back the merry-widow foundation garment popular in the 1950s. This version of the corset gave a woman a trim silhouette and a tiny Scarlett O'Hara waist, although many women complained that it was not the most comfortable undergarment to wear!

In keeping with the trend of the 1960s, the strapless look is back. However, unlike 20 years ago, the modern strapless look does not include a stiff, fitted bodice. Instead, dresses are made of soft, clinging materials that fall straight to the floor for evening wear.

The strapless dress of 1970s is simple and straight, perhaps slit up the side to reveal a trim leg.

Thinking of You At Fashions at Large

"Because of me, I'm thinking of you," says Fashions at Large owner Dorothy Robbins. After years of sewing her own clothing and frustration over the lack of fashionable styling for the large woman, Dorothy decided to open her own shop specializing in smart sportswear just for the large woman.

Now a year and a half later and with the addition of a second shop, Fashions at Large is thriving in its total fashion services to the fuller figure.

More than 40 lines are represented in the Fashions at Large stores in sizes 38-52 (tops) and 32-46 (slacks/skirts). Though emphasizing sportswear, the shops carry dresses, long dresses and coats in a wide array of colors. Dorothy carries a full color range for shoppers — though dark colors are often complimentary, brighter ones and pastels are more youthful and stylish, she says.

For spring, Fashions at Large is showing lots of crisp black and white. Also new this season are jade and navy. But there is a full array of colors to suit any taste and preference.

Fashions at Large carries a full and fashionable collection of styles that offer the same variety of selection an average-size figure finds when clothes shopping. You can browse through such fashion items as tunic tops, gauchos and denim outfits, as well as more classic lines.

The large woman can count on fashion, comfort and correct fit at Fashions at Large. Dorothy and her staff understand exactly what she wants — and deserves.

PAT SHINES in this corselet version of the sun dress. "A two for one story" by Mister Robert, the floral print design is set on a creme background. The corselet, from the Robin's Nest, Countryside Court, Mount Prospect, laces up the front and ties at the waistline.

ABRACADABRA Salon of Beauty, 646 S. Roselle Rd. in the Weatherway Plaza, Schaumburg, believes the "look of layers" should be adapted to the individual's hair texture.

EYE-CATCHING is the word for this flowing jumpsuit on Marlene Ray. This polyester creation by New Leaf is $50 at Windsor Sample Outlet, Windsor and Palatine roads, Arlington Heights. Complementing stole is sold separately.

A CROWN of flowers tops off this wavy version of the "scoop" style. Meg Welch of the Hair Directors Arlington Heights, predicts that this peasant or gypsy look will be the queen of spring hair fashion this season.

Have clothes customized

Nowadays, finding a good custom tailor is like searching for a needle in a haystack, except in Arlington Heights.

New to the downtown business community is Louis Cleaning and Tailoring in the Evergreen Shopping Center. Louis De Concillis, owner and tailor, specializes in custom tailoring and alterations, as well as cleaning and pressing services.

Di Concillis was born and raised in Italy. He began training as a tailor at the age of 6. When he arrived in America, his first job was with Pucci, a Michigan Avenue custom-tailoring house. Subsequently, he joined Wieboldt's where he headed the alterations department for 15 years.

Di Concillis will tailor a suit or overcoat "from scratch," according to the specifications of the customer regarding material and style. In addition to repairs on all items, he will also perform custom alterations to give any garment that "made for you" look.

BONNIE THEOBALD will never be overshadowed in this yellow polyester suit from the Lorraine-Ann Shop, Arlington Heights. By Koret of California, the blazer is $42, the slacks, $22, the striped blouse, $22, and purse, about $12.

Nature takes its course in menswear

"Natural" — that's the keyword for men's fashions in spring, 1977. Natural not only in fabric and fiber mix, but natural color blends and natural styles to fit the total lifestyle of today's man.

But this does not mean that it's going to be natural shades, natural shoulders or 100 per cent natural fibers. The spring '77 fashion die is not going to be "sartorial wheat germ" — even if that's the way it will often look!

Without dramatic changes, this will be a very good season for men's wear, according to the Men's Fashion Association. The opportunities will be numerous in the shape of the sport coat revival, a trading-up in the leisure suit area, growing acceptance of coordinates and separates, not a hint of let-up in denim, and the trend to classic patterns.

Color is the great neutral story with pale tones in bottom weights united with dark or deep brights in the tops.

The no-color look of black and white is very big — working together or singly, accented with brights. Greens range from forest green to spring leafy varieties to a version of celadon, a new neutral.

The woven look predominates fabrics in fancy cloths, prints, tweeds, plaids, flannels, twills, gabardines and herringbones.

Fine wale corduroy continues but seems to be broadening to medium and wider wales. Interlocks in solids and as a print base create a novelty look. But refinement is the keyword in all fabrics: denim, printed, solid, striped or plaided.

THE LINEAR look is seen in engineered stripes, pin, broken line and herringbones. There is a variation of checks and plaids in dress shirts. Single and double-knits will return in lightweight silky, tweedy, ribbed and quilted variations.

As for silhouette, the separates story is bigger than ever — all the parts are linked with one constant color.

The tailored suit will feature narrowed lapels, a less fitted waist, softer shoulders with a lower pocket stance and button placement.

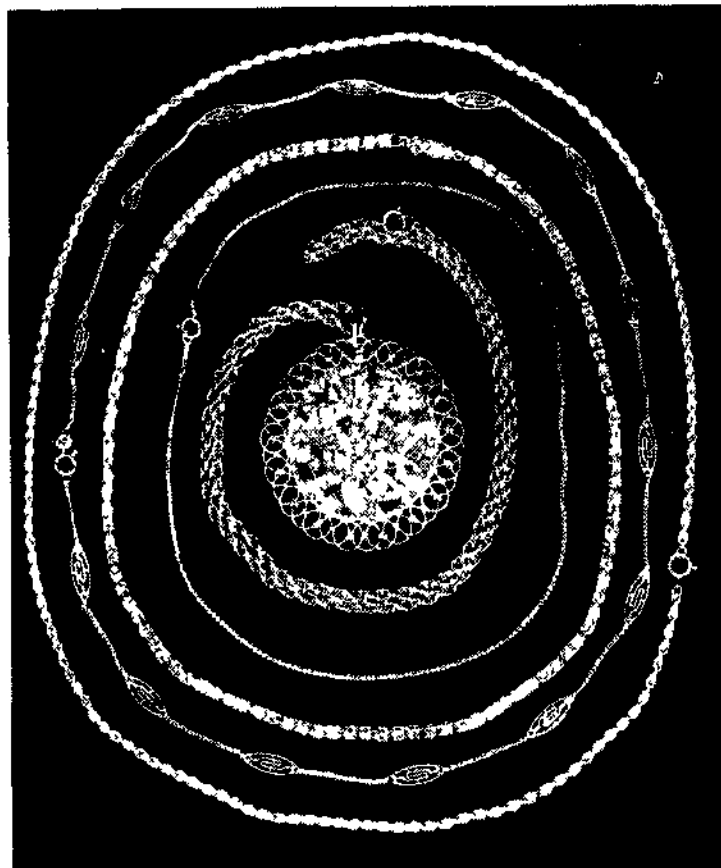

DOUBLE-BREADED models increase into four-six button placement. One button is closed for the American market effecting a more open look, pants narrowing but not to the extreme idea of the cigarette jean.

Unconstructed blazers will be coordinated with slacks, sweaters, shirts . . . a comfortable but more dressy sportswear look.

And last, but not least, the new fun fashion is the late 20's yachtsman look — blouson shirts, boat necks, raglan sleeves, cross stripes and lots of white.

ACCENT YOUR facial structure with the new European look offered at North Point Barber Shop on the lower level of the Northpoint Shopping Center in Arlington Heights.

THE ALWAYS-RIGHT fashion accent glitters in gold. These 14-karat gold-filled chains are all from Italy. Mitchell's Jewelers, Evergreen Shopping Center, Arlington Heights, has them ranging in lengths from 15 to 30 inches. The pendant in the center is a ceramic opal.

Cover-up for rain or shine

One of the nice things about raincoats, these days, is that they're shine coats as well. No longer worn only on dreary drippy days, raincoats can be practically anything you want them to be. Cowl-necked coverups, front-zipper pop-ons, perennally-right trench coats — you name it and the chances are that it can do duty as raingear.

In addition to the wonderful styles available at your favorite retail store, rain-dressing can be a do-it-yourself home-sewing project. There are so many exciting and versatile fashion patterns from which to choose. Just let your imagination be your guide.

One of the most fashionable looks this spring is the hooded rain dress. Make it in the new, longer length and try some contrasting stitching for detail. It's bound to put some sunshine in the dreariest of days. Or try a "fantasy" look with ruffles and frills and widely-sashed waist.

Even cover-ups not ordinarily thought of as rain fare will bear up nicely if you make them from tightly woven cloth and then treat your creation with a good fabric spray like "Scotchguard" fabric protector.

Aside from creating a raincoat yourself, you can save lots of special processing dollars by using fabric protector to beef up any regular raincoat's water repellency after it's been dry cleaned. Just about any piece of outerwear that's new or freshly cleaned would benefit from a session with the money-saving spray can. It's a handy way to make sure a raincoat is acting like one.

The doctor says

Phlebitis means vein inflammation

I was interested in your column some time ago about jogging and varicose veins. I have been diagnosed as having chronic phlebitis and thrombophlebitis. What is the difference?

In your column you said that walking contracts the leg muscles and squeezes the deep veins in the legs to empty them. You said the superficial veins in the leg drain into the deep veins of the legs and walking helps to empty them.

Just the opposite happens to me. When I walk or stand, my leg swells to about twice its normal size. I have worn an artificial leg for over 30 years but have just had this phlebitis condition for the last two years.

Can you tell me what causes the phlebitis? Could it have been brought on by favoring my artificial leg and straining my good leg? Or could it have come from falling and injuring the cartilage in my knee? I also have some foreign bodies retained from a bullet wound that went through my leg above the knee.

Judging from other letters many people are confused about the difference between thrombophlebitis and varicose veins. Varicose veins are simply dilated veins; they are wide open but they are overstretched. I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-8, Varicose Veins, so you can understand what they are and what you can do about them. Others who want this information can send 50 cents for it with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing.

Phlebitis means inflammation of the veins. Thrombophlebitis means inflammation of the veins with the formation of a clot (thrombosis) in the veins. The clot may break off and send pieces through the veins to the heart and out to the lung. That is how a blood clot develops in the lungs from the leg.

Thrombophlebitis may block the veins and cause the veins below the obstruction to dilate. Exercising will not empty the veins in the presence of thrombophlebitis because the veins are blocked and have trouble emptying. It is true that being up on your feet, even with walking, may cause the leg to swell in this condition.

THE LOCATION of the clot makes a great deal of difference. If the clot is in smaller superficial veins it is less likely to cause severe swelling. But the clot may involve the deep veins in the leg and the best treatment then is to be off the leg, usually keeping the leg elevated and immobilized. Anticoagulating medicines are often used. This can be a very serious disease and if a clot goes to the lung it may cause sudden death.

In your long standing case the clot has probably been invaded with scar tissue inside the veins. This eliminates the immediate danger. The amount of disability depends upon how much residual obstruction remains and apparently you have some.

The causes of thrombophlebitis are varied. Injuries to a leg may cause it. Or it may occur spontaneously after such a simple operation as an appendectomy in a healthy young person. I can't say what caused yours, but it may be associated with your old wound.

(Because of the volume of mail Dr. Lamb cannot answer your letters personally but he will answer representative letters of general interest in his column. Write to him in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.)

Flavor, juices lost when meat thawed

Dear Dorothy: You had a letter from a reader who said she cut the defrosting time for her steaks by taking them into the sauna with her. I don't understand why people think they have to defrost meat before cooking it. As it defrosts, all the good juices and flavors leak out and are lost. My steaks and chops go directly from freezer to broiler or frying pan where they sear immediately, keeping flavor and juices. One just has to let them broil a bit longer. — Vivian Schoening

I agree with you, Vivian. It does call for a little more planning, but I've had complete success with frozen roasts and frozen steaks.

Dear Dorothy: I'm at a loss to know what the equal parts of what do you mix with pickle relish, then add sour cream to make tartar sauce. Mayonnaise? — Helen Baker Right. That was a lapse on my part and I apologize. For those who missed it, this: To make homemade tartar sauce, take equal parts of pickle relish and mayonnaise, then add a tablespoon of sour cream.

Dear Dorothy: I read recently that toilet bowl cleaner and bleach should never be mixed together — that the results could be fatal. I don't believe I've ever seen this in your column. — Greta Wolff

I do it about once a year and perhaps it's not often enough. It's on the chlorine bottle. While other formulas change occasionally, this is a constant imperative. The mixture can be lethal.

Dear Dorothy: Mothers of young children might like this hint. When a prescription calls for a teaspoon of medicine, I put it in a tablespoon. It looks like less and there's less chance of spillage. — Jan Greene Specialist Bobbi Kalfen watches a training program client work on sweatbands.

At Countryside Center

They're training adults to work

by HARRIET HUBBARD

The loss of a social service program is not always a sad occasion. Sometimes, as with the phasing out of the early childhood day care program at Countryside Center for the Handicapped, the loss simply makes room for a new, previously too expensive program, such as the new adult training program now operated in conjunction with the sheltered workshop at Countryside.

The center, off Rand Road near Lake Zurich and Barrington, was started in 1954 by a group of parents needing day care for their mentally handicapped children. In 1969 a workshop was added to the private, not-for-profit corporation to give some of the more able, older children and young adults a way to occupy their time, earn a little money and perhaps prepare for a job in the "real world."

Residents of both Lake and Cook counties are served by the center, which has nine buses to transport its participants or "clients."

IN THE LAST few years, with the advent of state laws requiring public schools to provide care and training for every school district resident needing and wanting it from age 3 to 21, enrollment in Countryside Center's day care programs has dropped to 15 and the young children's program (up to age 3) has been discontinued.

Those basic changes have allowed the center to put more emphasis on the workshop and add an intermediate step to help mentally handicapped adults make the transition from the school environment to the work environment. The adult training program was launched last September to help moderately to severely retarded adults learn to cope with a work situation. Twenty participants in the program ages 16 to about 30, are now being trained to switch from the highly structured and stimulating school situation to the more routine and independent work situation, said Peg Mundstock of Lake Zurich, administrator of the day care and adult learning programs.

THOUGH MOST OF the group members may eventually move on to the sheltered workshop at Countryside that does packaging and light assembly subcontract work for area firms, few could have joined the workshop without the preparation offered in the adult training program.

"Many would not succeed in the workshop after starting there after graduation (from special education classes)," said Jan Edgar, associate executive director at Countryside Center. "They need the components of day care and the workshop, with a very low staff-to-client ratio. Our philosophy is that everybody will succeed given the right environment."

That environment includes one staff member for every five or six clients. The staff members are specialists in speech therapy, motor and recreational skills, socialization, personal hygiene and grooming, and vocational training.

THE CLIENT'S DAY, 9:15 a.m. to 2:15 p.m., includes sessions with each of the specialists and half a day of work in the workshop or in another area with simulated work activities.

Often the clients must be taught the concepts of work — why it is important — and pay — why it is to be desired, said Sharon Kamradt, training coordinator for the adult training program.

The jobs in the workshop are not outwardly difficult, but they are routine and must be done for long periods of time, compared to the shorter, more interesting classroom activities the clients have experienced before. Bright colors and many varied activities in a short time period help deal with short attention spans in the school setting, Ms. Kamradt explained, but the work is the same simple task repeated over and over in an unchanging, often uninteresting, setting. Verbal praise, colorful markers, candies and even hugs are used at gradually lengthened intervals to reward the novice workers, with 90 minutes of uninterrupted work as the goal.

"IT IS ACTUALLY quite easy to teach the clients the tasks in the pre-vocational area," said Sheryl Schrepper-Mekemson, speech pathologist for the day care and adult training program.

The difficult areas are teaching the concept of work and how to deal with several figures of authority on the job rather than one teacher. The clients must also learn the idea of receiving money as payment every two weeks instead of a food reward after each task is completed, Ms. Mundstock said.

The clients are also taught to work in the noisy, visually distracting factory environment, recognize mistakes to improve quality and, finally, increase their production speed.

MS. EDGAR expects to move about 10 per cent of the adults in training into the workshop each year. Outside placements from each workshop (another is located in North Chicago) average one or two a month.

Besides mental handicaps, many of the training program and workshop clients also have physical handicaps, such as impaired vision or hearing, partial paralysis or difficulty in walking or talking. The shop also serves as a resource for people who have had strokes or psychological breakdowns and are working toward community placements, Ms. Mundstock added.

To make the work accessible to the individual abilities of the clients, the jobs are broken down into many small steps by Ms. Kamradt. She also devises elaborate "jigs" to allow people with severely limited physical abilities to work on the assembly lines.

THE WORK DONE in the workshops is subcontracted by a center employee hired specifically to track down suitable light assembly or unskilled jobs needed by area companies. Samples are analyzed at the center to see if the job can be adapted to the workshop's needs at a competitive price.

Clients in the workshop and in the training program are paid hourly wages for the time they actually work, Ms. Edgar said. Commercial wages for similar jobs are surveyed every year to determine the basic hourly wage. This year it is $2.39. Workers earn a percentage of the base, depending on how much they produce in an hour compared to someone who is not handicapped.

Current long-term contracts include cleaning and repackaging all the passenger stereo headphones used on United Air Lines flights out of Chicago and assembly and packaging of disposable industrial sweatbands for Sellstrom Corp. in Palatine.

"It's either feast or famine," Ms. Edgar said of the subcontracts. The center is always looking for more jobs, either long term or one-shot contracts.

PROVIDING THE "right environment" needed to allow the clients to succeed takes a lot of money, Ms. Edgar said, mainly because of the low staff-to-client ratio required.

Funding for Countryside Center comes from the Illinois Department of Mental Health, the Illinois Division of Vocational Rehabilitation, local school districts and the Metropolitan Crusade of Mercy, Ms. Edgar said. Donations and contributions from private individuals, organizations and corporations also provide a significant portion of the center's operating expenses.

Though the adult training program and the workshops (34 clients in the main workshop and 55 in North Chicago) are now full or nearly full, some half-day openings are available now, and the training program may be expanded next summer.

Persons interested in more information about referrals to the training program or the workshop or in offering subcontract jobs may call the center at 438-8855.

Work becomes therapy for actress

Work sometimes is therapeutic for people, actors especially. They can leave the trying realities of life behind them for a little while and indulge in the personality and complexities of another person.

It's sort of that way now for Janis Paige, a strong-willed, versatile actress who has worked on stage, in movies and in television.

Life has been pretty fine and things have gone as well as they can in Hollywood for Janis Paige. But actors are people too and they suffer the joys and pains of life off screen the same as everyone else.

MS. PAIGE'S HUSBAND, the Oscar-winning composer Ray Gilbert, died last year. It was a loss the actress is still suffering.

"There is no upheaval in one's life like the death of a spouse. You become so much a part of each other after 13 years of marriage. And whether you want it or not, when it happens there is not much you can do about it," she said during a recent visit to Chicago.

So you learn how to live alone, you learn how to take care of all your business by yourself, how to grieve privately when there is no one else around and how to pick up the pieces. People all over the world are forced to do it all the time, she said.

There are a couple of bright spots starting to appear on Ms. Paige's horizon. One of them is a starring role in the new NBC series "Lanigan's Rabbi." The show rotates on Sundays with "McCloud" and "McMillan" on the Sunday Night Mystery Movie, and premiered last Sunday.

She plays the part of Kate Lanigan, the wife of Police Chief Paul Lanigan, played by Art Carney, in the 90-minute drama that can be seen again Sunday at 8 p.m. on Channel 5.

A REGULAR TELEVISION series was the answer just now, said Ms. Paige, who especially enjoys working on the series because she can perform with Carney, a long-time friend. When Carney first was cast for the part of Lanigan, he requested Ms. Paige be cast as his television wife.

Art Carney and his wife have been friends with Ms. Paige and her late husband for 15 years. "We have always felt comfortable together and I really enjoy working with him," she said. "I have discovered that I need this work just now very much."

The soul of Janis Paige comes through even after spending only a few minutes with her in a quiet room. She is a perfectionist who is never satisfied with her work and who strives to improve.

She is a performer who feels comfortable in any medium. She began her career in the movie "Hollywood Canteen," has starred in such Broadway productions as "Pajama Game" and "Mame," served as a regular part of the Bob Hope Christmas tours of military bases and has been featured in the movies "Please Don't Eat the Daisies" and "Silk Stockings."

SHE IS OPERATING the music business left to her by her husband and owns championship thoroughbred horses which she trains and rides.

Having a healthy dose of television in her blood stream again, Ms. Paige is working on plans for a situation comedy in which she'll star and be "just me, in my wonderful blue jeans. You're the best when you're yourself," she said.

"There is time to do another half-hour show since Lanigan isn't a weekly kind of thing and I want to give it a try. I've made guest appearances on a number of comedy shows during the past couple of years and I like it," Ms. Paige said.

"Besides, I've got all the time in the world now and I'm really looking for something special."

Janis Paige

HIGHLIGHTS:

• CBS presents a special hour-long report "The Fire Next Door" at 7 p.m. tonight on Channel 2. The program takes a close look at life in the Bronx. Reporter Bill Moyers highlights the poverty, violence, vandalism and arson, said to average 30 cases a day, ripping the area apart.

• A depressed psychiatrist is on the rampage and hopes to heal himself by sending everyone on vacation on the 407th on "M*A*S*H" at 8 p.m. on Channel 2.

• "Family" sees another healthy dose of turmoil tonight at 9 p.m. on Channel 7 as Nancy's former mother-in-law has a prolonged stay because of a bad back and an unemployed Willie announces plans to marry.

• Former United States senator from New York, James Buckley, has become a commentator on the Group W (Westinghouse Broadcasting Company) radio stations. His commentaries can be heard on WIND, the Chicago Westinghouse outlet.

• Roome Arledge, head of ABC sports, will not appear on Tom Snyder's "Tomorrow" show tonight as was originally planned. It seems Arledge still is not at liberty to discuss his possible appointment as head of ABC news and other subjects Snyder would ask about.

• The National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences which hands out the Emmy Awards has sued its former Hollywood chapter for $100 million saying the "dissident faction" was trying to destroy the national academy. The suit, filed in Superior Court this week, contends the officers and some 1,000 members of the former chapter are using the office, equipment and membership rolls of the academy to start their own organization. The National Academy Feb. 26 revoked the Hollywood chapter's charter because it allegedly violated the academy's constitution.

• A radio tribute to Benjamin Britten is being presented on WFMT (98.7 FM, AND 1450 AM) during March in a "Music of Britten" series. Britten, who died last December in England, often is called the greatest English composer since Henry Purcell in the 17th century and an important opera composer of the modern day. Some of the programs featured will include "Death in Venice" Sunday at 3:30 p.m. and "Owen Wingrave" March 29 at 3:30 p.m.

TV's hardest critics live in average U.S. homes

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Commentary

Television viewers often underestimate their power to influence network programming. They think they are disregarded victims of programming that is motivated mainly by a drive for making money and higher ratings.

Well, not so.

Marilyn Guthrie of Palatine and some of her friends are beginning to realize the power of the TV viewer. Mrs. Guthrie is discovering that she can voice her concern, write a letter, switch stations and even turn off her TV set — and she will be heard.

THE REALIZATION began because Mrs. Guthrie and her friends were concerned about the lesbian-murder story line of a recent NBC movie, "In the Gutter Palace." They found it offensive and potentially harmful to their children.

Understanding the film's subject matter before it aired, they tried without luck to convince the network not to show the movie.

"We first called the network affiliate, Channel 5 here in Chicago, and then tried to reach the NBC president in New York. Both times we got poor response and really an attitude of indifference," Mrs. Guthrie said.

"We felt that the topics covered in this movie, which ran during prime time, could have a detrimental effect on teenagers who are in a very susceptible time in their lives," she said.

The next step in their attempt to be heard was to write to a majority of the sponsors who advertised during the showing of the film. Mrs. Guthrie has received only three responses to the 15 letters she sent.

"RALSTON-PURINA SAID they were sorry I was displeased with that particular program they had sponsored and explained that they try to sponsor mostly family entertainment. The Zenith officials who replied said the corporation is changing its policy regarding advertising time and plans to screen all of the programs it buys time for in the future," she said.

Mrs. Guthrie knew that her letters wouldn't prompt an about face in network programming, but she is not discouraged by the unimpressive response she has received from the networks and the sponsors.

"It was the first time I decided to do this kind of thing and I think I would do it again. To me, it does make a difference. I think if enough of us write and call, it will force a change," she said.

"They have to listen when there are enough of us because we are what makes television work. No matter what you're programming, without an audience, it's no good," she said.

Every viewer is a television critic with the potential to kill a show by turning the set on or off, by changing channels, the viewer can determine ratings.

PERHAPS SOME viewers don't believe their individual voices can make a difference in TV programming. But there is power in numbers — a power that networks shun to think about and that viewers, unfortunately, don't fully grasp.

When viewers finally get up the nerve to telephone a network affiliate station or write network headquarters in New York, they are intimidated by TV promotion men and bosses who generate a definite "don't care" attitude.

The TV fan does not really expect a network executive to admit that he is running excessive violence or controversial topics just to appeal to the masses. So, concerned viewers become discouraged in their attempt to voice their complaints.

Maybe they decide to band together, as the National Parent-Teachers Assn has done in conducting nationwide public hearings on television violence.

They might be inspired by a protagonist such as the Rev. Don Wildmon of Southaven, Miss., who recently organized a "Turn the Television Off Week."

SOME ANTIVIOLENCE groups are making dramatic inroads and getting networks to start cutting down on violence.

The officials of the three major networks have said they will do some housecleaning, which has yet to be seen. NBC President Robert T. Howard said the network will veer away from "hard action" programs this spring and plans to direct its energies in the comedy and variety forms of entertainment.

ABC-TV President Frederick S. Pierce reportedly has laid down the law: no violence. He even plans to make Starsky and Hutch clean up their act. CBS TV President Robert Wussler, on a recent trip to Chicago, said the desires of viewers "does make a difference," and that his network also will begin to work on more comedies and mini-series, minus the hard-core action.

It seems as though the amending and even improving of TV programming has begun, but pressure and constructive prodding from viewers must continue if television is to fulfill its educational and entertainment potential.

OF COURSE, WHEN efforts fail with the networks, television viewers can take their case to major TV sponsors.

That kind of approach has its strengths and weaknesses. Viewers may succeed in pressuring one sponsor to decide against buying time during an "objectionable" program. But there are others who will buy the TV time. The programs under attack will appear anyway.

The viewer is in for a lot of frustration in pleading a case to the networks or the sponsors. But it takes throngs of complainers to bring about a major change. One concerned soul won't do it.

If half the television viewers in the Northwest suburbs decided to boycott a program or keep their TV sets off for a night, the networks would get the message.

If that same number wrote to a network president, the message surely would come across.

It's all a matter of how strongly a viewer feels about television and its effect on his life and the lives of children.

If you care at all, then it's worth doing something, as Mrs. Guthrie and others will tell you.

Dam won't hike floods, officials vow

Construction of a dam on Big Bend Lake in Des Plaines will not increase the danger of flooding in neighboring areas, state and county officials told residents Monday.

About 40 officials and residents of Big Bend Drive attended a meeting on the problem Monday in the Des Plaines Civic Center. Despite assurances by officials of the Illinois Dept. of Transportation and Cook County Forest Preserve, residents fear flooding from the project.

Mayor Charles Bolek asked planners to go "back to the drawing boards" for more information on the effect of the proposal.

The Cook County Forest Preserve plans to raise the water level of Big Bend Lake by building a four-foot dam at its outlet on the Des Plaines River. The lake is located west of the with the flooding problem than with Road in the forest preserve.

The dam project will be paid for with Illinois Dept. of Transportation funds as part of a $7 million plan to widen Golf Road.

The transportation department wants to divert run-off water from Golf Road into Big Bend Lake.

COOK COUNTY Forest Preserve engineers recommended the dam to hold the extra water. Officials say the dam will improve the quality of water by preventing the Des Plaines River from backing up into the lake. The dam also will increase the number of fish in the lake, officials said.

Area residents attending the meeting said they were more concerned with the flooding problem than with the quality of the lake water.

"If it's going to jeopardize our property and make us miserable, who cares about the lake," Mrs. Virginia Noee, 1972 Big Bend Drive, said.

Residents said they believe that if the lake were four feet higher, it wouldn't be able to serve as an effective retention basin during flood periods. Some residents said flood waters often come within several feet of their back doors.

Richard Buck, landscape architect for the Cook County Forest Preserve District, said the extra water in the lake will not have an effect on area flooding.

"THIS IS AN insignificant amount when you consider the scope and the size of the Des Plaines River system," Buck said.

Bolek said he believes there should be a public hearing before the state goes ahead with the project.

Larry L. Sorenson, an engineer for the state transportation department, said there was a hearing on the Golf Road project last year, but added there was no mention of the Big Bend Lake plans in advertisements for the hearing.

DOZENS OF CITIZENS had their say on critical energy issues at a town meeting Monday in Chicago. A panel of Federal

Energy Administration representatives listened to comments during the day-long meeting at the Illinois Institute of Technology campus on the city's South Side.

Satellites to windmills touted at energy forum

by LEA TONKIN

Ideas ranging from cosmic energy to satellites in outer space collecting the sun's rays were offered as solutions Monday to energy problems discussed at a Federal Energy Administration town meeting in Chicago.

Call for ideas from people who believe they can help solve the nation's energy problems, the agency invited the public to a forum at the Illinois Institute of Technology campus in Chicago. Residents from Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio and Wisconsin were invited to offer their views on energy issues.

Consumers, salesmen, industry executives and environmental activists took the opportunity to sound off about national energy policy.

LEADING OFF the discussion, William Reeve of Palatine called for long-term solutions to United States energy shortage problems and less government regulation of prices and supply. As vice president, secretary and general manager of Chemplex Co., Rolling Meadows, Reeve favors conservation programs and increased development of coal and nuclear energy.

Hefty consumer savings in home heating costs would be possible if the government stressed energy conservation in building materials, said Naperville resident John Orava. He criticized federal housing agencies, which he said seem to be unaware of energy efficient building codes and outdated building codes.

Cosmic energy was on Jerome Forneck's mind when he tried to sell the concept to the government. But "stupid procedures" make it difficult for creative people in the energy development field to make a buck, Forneck told the FEA panel. Cosmic rays are atomic particles from outer space which enter the earth's atmosphere at high speed.

Potential safety problems in automatic furnace dampers should be overcome as one solution to home energy conservation problems, said Victor Algrim, a Chicago resident. Algrim also favors development of satellite solar systems which could capture the sun's rays as an energy resource.

Another self-proclaimed energy conservation specialist, Dave Hale of Hickory Hills offered a demonstration of fans that circulate warm air. The contraption included a fan attached to a long yellow flexible tube.

ENERGY RESEARCHER Ira Charak of Western Springs said the United States needs expansion of energy use to achieve an increased gross national product. Nuclear power is "clean, safe and cheap," he said.

"Massive social upheavals" can be expected if the United States fails to overcome energy problems, said engineer Robert Boyar of LaGrange. Boyar supported the nuclear breeder reactor for energy use.

Windmills and other "appropriate technology" should be considered as alternatives to conventional energy resources, said Roger Heimer, representing the Community Action against Poverty energy program in Indianapolis, Ind. He called for alleviation of energy cost burdens on the poor, and constraints on energy-wasteful buildings.

Results from the town hall meetings in Chicago and nine other United States cities will be forwarded to the White House Office of Energy and Planning, for consideration in President Jimmy Carter's national energy plan to be announced April 20, N. Allen Anderson, regional FEA administrator, Chicago, said.

Town hall meetings also were held in Boston, New York City, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Kansas City, Denver, Dallas, San Francisco and Seattle. Summaries of the Chicago meeting will be available on request from the Chicago regional FEA office, Room A333, 175 W. Jackson, Chicago.

Violence in day of abductions

From Herald news services

A flurry of hostage-taking took place Monday in the United States and Canada. Three separate incidents occurred in Baltimore, Toronto, and Freeport, Ill. The Freeport case ended in death for the abductor.

Frank DeBoer, who held a Freeport policeman hostage and shot another one, died Monday of wounds sustained in a gun battle with state, county and local police.

DeBoer, 42, gave police 15 minutes to clear away from the home where he held Lt. Jack Mundt, hostage. He then raced from his home, shooting. DeBoer was shot in the head and chest. Mundt was unharmed.

The gunman was admitted to Freeport Memorial Hospital, where he underwent surgery. He was later transferred to St. Anthony's Hospital in Rockford, where he died.

Kyle Kuhlmeier, the wounded policeman, was in good condition with wounds in the hand, foot and leg.

IN TORONTO, a self-described former mercenary in the Congo held three bank employees and a police sergeant hostage at gunpoint, demanding a C-130 Hercules to fly him to Uganda to meet his "pal" President Idi Amin. The man, who identified himself as Bob McLagan, 38, of Vancouver, released 11 other hostages unharmed in the first few hours of the stand-off with police at the downtown Bank Canadian National. The gunman was holding employees Luc Loiseau, Pierre Chaisson, Michel Plouffe, and Police Sgt. Bill Donaldson at the point of a 12-gauge shotgun. The department of National Defense said there were Hercules C-130s at the Canadian Forces Base in suburban Downsview, but refused to say if the planes would be used. Police were continuing to negotiate with the gunman.

IN BALTIMORE, a security guard put down his two guns and machete three hours after taking his eight children, his wife, and about 35 others hostage in a city office. The man, identified as Anthony Griffin, released all but a few of the hostages shortly after the takeover of the Department of Social Services. He surrendered at 6 p.m.

Police said "no deals" were made with Griffin.

Gas tax, drivers' fees hike urged

State officials Monday were urged to increase the state gas tax 4 cents a gallon, boost license plate fees an average of 58 per cent, nearly double the cost of driver's licenses and place a 1 per cent surcharge on new car purchases.

The recommendations, which could give the state more than $370 million in new revenue is needed to continue the state's road maintenance program, according to the Illinois Transportation Study Commission.

The panel's recommendations will increase the state gas tax from 7.5 cents a gallon to 11.5 cents. License plates for small cars would go from $18 to $30 and large car plates would jump from $30 to $45.

The commission also called for increasing the cost of driver's licenses from $8 to $15 and adding a 1 per cent surcharge to the purchase price of new cars.

THE COMMISSION'S report will be sent to Gov. James R. Thompson and the Illinois General Assembly for action. In the past, the commission's recommendations for tax increases and transportation plans have been adopted by the legislature.

Thompson for months has been talking publicly about an increase in the gas tax and license fees and has admitted his discussion of the subject represents a "trial balloon."

He also has urged the legislature to start talking about increases, but has stopped short of formally proposing them himself.

Fred A. Schoenfeld, executive director of the commission, said the increases are designed to produce only enough money to continue maintenance and resurfacing programs on existing roads during the next 20 years.

The commission also formally recommended a modified supplemental free way system be built and financed through the sale during the next 20 years of $4.4 billion worth of bonds.

The proposal calls for further increases in the gas tax — starting at half cent a gallon and climbing to at least 3 cents — to pay off the bonds.

U.S. troops to leave South Korea

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter told Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda Monday that United States ground troops will be withdrawn from South Korea, Japanese diplomatic sources said.

Carter said the United States still will honor its obligations to defend South Korea, the sources said, and he promised that the withdrawals will be worked out in close consultation with the Japanese and the South Korean governments without undermining security on the Korean peninsula.

The discussion came during the first of two days of talks between Carter and the Japanese leader, who received a warm welcome and a 19-gun salute on his arrival at the White House.

PRESIDENTIAL PRESS Sec. Jody Powell said the Korean situation was discussed between the two leaders, but he gave no details.

No timetable for withdrawal of U. S. forces from South Korea was discussed, the sources said. Fukuda stressed during the 90-minute session,

Japanese sources said, that the security of the Korean peninsula was vital to Japan and East Asia.

"The President also expressed a similar opinion," one source said.

But, he added, "President Carter said, regarding the reduction of American troops in South Korea, that the United States would proceed with it without damaging peace in the Korean peninsula."

The United States has 40,000 servicemen in South Korea. Although ground troops will be removed, the sources said, about 7,000 Air Force personnel will remain.

Both Fukuda and Carter favored an early resumption of talks between South and North Korea, the sources said, and believed that "it is desirable that unification of South and North Korea be achieved through peaceful means."

CARTER ALSO declared that the United States "will maintain a presence in Asia and observe commitments made in the past," the (Continued on Page 3)

Standardized test scores in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 this year show students are slightly below the national average in math skills and reading but are at or above grade level in all the areas.

The testing report was presented Monday at a board of education workshop led by Marilyn Swanson, administrator of educational services. Bill Harner, testing coordinator, and Bob Bortnick, reading clinic director.

On the low tests of basic skills, administered in October, students in sixth and eighth grade scored in the 47th percentile on over-all math skills which includes concepts and problem solving. In reading, sixth graders scored in the 42nd percentile and seventh and eighth graders placed in the 46th percentile. The national average is 50 per cent.

STUDENTS in third through eighth grades were tested in five major areas — vocabulary, reading, language skills, work study skills and math.

The district's composite test scores by grade level ranged from a low of the 57th percentile for sixth graders to a high of the 67th percentile for third and fourth graders.

Students at every grade level placed in a lower percentile in math, work study and language skills than their counterparts did last year. The only exception was in language skills where this year's sixth graders placed in the 62nd percentile as did last year's sixth graders.

Vocabulary seems to be the students' strongest area with scores ranging from the 63rd percentile to the 77th percentile.

SCORES in language skills, which includes spelling, capitalization, punctuation and usage, ranged from a low of the 57th percentile for third and seventh graders to a high of the 65th percentile.

In work study skills, scores ranged from a low of the 63rd percentile for eighth graders to a high of the 76th percentile for fourth graders.

Scores in math skills ranged from a low of the 47th percentile for sixth and eighth graders to a high of the 67th percentile for fourth graders.

Council votes to hire firm to inspect ramp

The Des Plaines City Council Monday voted to hire an engineering firm to inspect the Herbert Behrel Parking Plaza — at the sponsoring alderman's expense.

Ald. George Olen, 2nd, said he would pay up to $300 for the study following a challenge by Ald. Thomas Koplos, 1st, that he not make the city pay for what he said is an unnecessary expense.

The action came after an hour of debate on the state of the new parking ramp at Lee and Ellinwood streets during which aldermen exchanged numerous insults and accusations.

THE DEBATE began when Ald. John P. Leer, 3rd, reported the results of a study made by two of the city's consulting engineering firms that the ramp is structurally sound. The studies on the parking ramp were made following the last council meeting when Olen said the structure appeared to be shifting and cracking. The facility was dedicated in January.

Many of the aldermen voting for the new study indicated they did so only because Olen had promised to pay for it. These included aldermen that earlier had spoken against another study.

The recent study of the ramp by the H. W. Lochner and Co., Des Plaines, stated, "We find that the entire parking structure is in excellent condition."

Olen disagreed with the study saying, "There is a serious water-proofing problem that will lead to structural defects. I'm very concerned about the cracks in the wall. I'm concerned about the puddling upstairs. The joints are leaking like a sieve."

"I MAY BE WRONG, but I'm willing to take the chance of being called an idiot by Mr. Koplos and a fool by Mr. (Joseph F. 1st) Szabo," he said. "I will make the motion I made two weeks ago that the city hire an independent engineering firm to inspect the ramp," he said.

Aid for train depot, parking lot sought

Funds for construction of a new Des Plaines train station and additional commuter parking are being sought by city officials.

Mayor Charles J. Bolek has asked the North Suburban Mass Transit System to investigate funding for a new train station on Miner Street in downtown Des Plaines. NORTAN, which is funded by the Regional Transportation Authority, also operates local buses that take riders to the station.

Bolek said funding for the station may not be available for two or three years. An estimate of the cost of the new station is not available.

A short-range plan to improve the bus system has been recommended by Joseph Di John, executive director of NORTAN.

He told city officials he has applied for $200,000 in federal funds to expand off-street parking for buses near the train station. Currently the four local buses stop in front of the train station, blocking traffic in one lane.

Bolek said Di John told him funds for the bus project may be available within a year.

Balanced budget backed after Dist. 26 vote defeat

Residents in River Trails Dist. 26 Monday seemed reluctant to discuss the tax hike referendum defeated Saturday, but some had suggestions on what the board of education should do to ensure a balanced budget.

The tax increase proposal, which would have raised the district's education fund tax rate 74 cents per $100 of assessed valuation, was defeated 814 to 782. The current educational tax rate is $1.60 per $100 of assessed valuation.

In a random telephone survey of residents of about 25 homes, everything from holding another tax hike referendum to merging with two neighboring school districts was proposed as ways to balance the budget.

MORE THAN HALF of those surveyed either said they did not vote Saturday or would not reveal how they voted.

"The board needs to cut down some of their administrative expenses," said one woman who voted no. She suggested Dist. 26 merge with Mount Prospect Dist. 57, a district of comparable size south of Dist. 26, to cut costs.

Another resident suggested Dist. 26 consolidate with Wheeling Township Dist. 21 because Dist. 21 has stable enrollment.

"I would love to see us combine with Dist. 21 because it has people of child-bearing age in apartments and townhouses. They have the bodies and we don't," she said.

Joan and Samuel McAllister, 913 Burning Bush Ln., Mount Prospect, voted against the tax hike, Mrs. McAllister said.

SHE SAID DIST. 26 should raise its average class size as a money-saving step because "I don't think kids are worse off with 35 in a class. If the kid is gonna learn, he's gonna learn whether there's two in the class or 35."

Betsy Hall, 1409 Althea Dr., Mount Prospect, said the board should hold another tax increase referendum soon. She voted for the increase, she said, and would vote "yes" again. "If they have to cut, start with gym, music and art teachers for the primary grades," she said.

Several residents, who said they did not vote in the referendum, said they did not receive much information about the proposal.

Teachers ponder jobless future

Teachers in River Trails Dist. 26 say they are unsure whether they will have jobs next year in the wake of Saturday's defeat of a tax increase referendum.

They also expressed concern about the possible effects on the district if the board of education decides to cut back programs and increase class size from 26 to 35 students.

The board of education has said it will have to raise average class size from 26 students to 35, cut programs not required by state law and close another building to save enough money to offset a projected $400,000 deficit for 1978-79 and $700,000 for 1979-80.

"IF THEY CUT ONE speech teacher and one typing teacher, they eliminate those programs, because there's only one speech teacher and one typing teacher," said Don Kellen, assistant principal at River Trails Junior High School, 1000 Wolf Rd., Mount Prospect.

The programs that do survive the cuts will be "watered down because of the number of students," teachers union Pres. George Chase said.

Chase said he is not sure district residents believed the board intended to make cuts and also were concerned about what the recent property reassessment would do to their taxes.

"I believe what the board said," Chase said. "In two years (of looking at budget figures) I can't find where they were wrong."

ALTHOUGH CONSOLIDATION with neighboring school districts has been mentioned as a way to cut expenses, science teacher Bud Lewis said he doesn't think much money would be saved.

"If you look at the financial position (of nearby districts) they aren't that much better," he said. "You might cut some administrative costs, but you're just adding financial losers together."

Chase said teachers may take a more active role in a second referendum, if the board decides to hold one. Their role this time was to get out the vote, he said.

Teachers were not permitted to discuss the tax proposal in class unless students brought it up, he said.

"We'll probably get more involved next time," Chase said, "in between looking for jobs."

Angell challenges Bolek to debate

Lorraine Angell, Des Plaines mayoral candidate, has challenged Mayor Charles J. Bolek to debate, but Bolek has declined the invitation.

Mrs. Angell said she wants to "pin down" Bolek on his record in office. In a letter to the mayor, Mrs. Angell said the scheduled candidate night forums are not sufficient to debate the issues with Bolek.

Bolek, elected by the city council in August to replace retiring mayor Herbert H. Behrel, said Monday he will not debate with Mrs. Angell.

"We will be on the stage at three public forums and I feel that's adequate," Bolek said. "She may want that (a separate debate) but I believe my time can be better used."

IF BOLEK WON'T debate, Mrs. Angell said she will press him about his performance in office at the scheduled candidate nights.

Mrs. Angell, owner of the Angel Town Day Care Center, 2329 Birch St., is involved in a zoning dispute with the city. She operates her day care center in a residential area not zoned for such use. She said she is not running as a one-issue candidate, however.

Candidate nights are scheduled for 8 p.m. Wednesday at West School, Second and Prairie streets; and at 8 p.m. Thursday at the Oehler Funeral Home, Lee and Perry streets. The League of Women Voters will sponsor a candidate night in April, but specifics have not been announced.

Involuntary annex for Liebling site

Prospect Heights Monday capped a three-month tug-of-war with Wheeling by annexing the 40-acre Liebling property at Willow and Wheeling roads.

Little discussion preceded the vote which received unanimous approval from the city council.

"Is this an involuntary annexation?" a member of the audience asked.

"Very much so," City Atty. Donald Kreger said.

THE ANNEXATION was involuntary because owner Arnold Liebling of Chicago said he wanted to annex to Wheeling.

Liebling built sewer and water lines to hook up with Wheeling utilities after the village annexed the site in 1971.

That annexation was invalidated by an Illinois Appellate Court in September because Wheeling only touched the site at one corner.

THE COURT ruled the property must be contiguous to the village in a voluntary annexation, meaning the village must touch more than just one point.

Wheeling attempted to reannex the property again in January. However, Prospect Heights successfully secured a court injunction to block the action until the Illinois Supreme Court handed down a decision on Wheeling's appeal of the appellate court decision.

The Supreme Court turned down Wheeling's appeal and Cook County Circuit Court made the injunction permanent. A temporary injunction placed on Prospect Heights was lifted at that time, freeing the city to annex the property.

Wheeling can appeal the permanent injunction, Kreger said.

The property was zoned in Cook County for single-family half-acre lots. The Prospect Heights zoning ordinance now under consideration would retain that zoning.

ILLINOIS STATUTES allow involuntary annexation of property under 60 acres by a city contiguous to it.

The council also considered applying for a federal grant to pay for a planning study to determine the best use of the Liebling property. The council will decide whether to apply for that grant and five others at a special meeting at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, at the Gary Morava Recreation Center, 110 Camp McDonald Road.

Other proposed grant applications would include a $320,000 project to improve roads in the Quincy Park area.

DOZENS OF CITIZENS had their say on critical energy issues at a town meeting Monday in Chicago. A panel of Federal

Energy Administration representatives listened to comments during the day-long meeting at the Illinois Institute of Technology campus on the city's South Side.

Satellites to windmills touted at energy forum

by LEA TONKIN

Ideas ranging from cosmic energy to satellites in outer space collecting the sun's rays were offered as solutions Monday to energy problems discussed at a Federal Energy Administration town meeting in Chicago.

Call for ideas from people who believe they can help solve the nation's energy problems, the agency invited the public to a forum at the Illinois Institute of Technology campus in Chicago. Residents from Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio and Wisconsin were invited to offer their views on energy issues.

Consumers, salesmen, industry executives and environmental activists took the opportunity to sound off about national energy policy.

LEADING OFF the discussion, William Reeve of Palatine called for long-term solutions to United States energy shortage problems and less government regulation of prices and supply. As vice president, secretary and general manager of Chemplex Co., Rolling Meadows, Reeve favors conservation programs and increased development of coal and nuclear energy.

Hefty consumer savings in home heating costs would be possible if the government stressed energy conservation in building materials, said Naperville resident John Orava. He criticized federal housing agencies, which he said seem to be unaware of energy efficient building materials and outdated building codes.

Cosmic energy was on Jerome Forneck's mind when he tried to sell the concept to the government. But "stupid procedures" make it difficult for creative people in the energy development field to make a buck, Forneck told the FEA panel. Cosmic rays are atomic particles from outer space which enter the earth's atmosphere at high speed.

Potential safety problems in a automatic furnace dampers should be overcome as one solution to home energy conservation problems, said Victor Algin, a Chicago resident. Algin also favors development of satellite solar systems which could capture the sun's rays as an energy resource.

Another self-proclaimed energy conservation specialist, Dave Hale of Hickory Hills offered a demonstration of fans that circulate warm air. The contraption included a fan attached to a long yellow flexible tube.

ENERGY RESEARCHER Ira Charak of Western Springs said the United States needs expansion of energy use to achieve an increased gross national product. Nuclear power is "clean, safe and cheap," he said.

"Massive social upheavals" can be expected if the United States fails to overcome energy problems, said engineer Robert Boyar of LaGrange. Boyar supported the nuclear breeder reactor for energy use.

Windmills and other "appropriate technology" should be considered as alternatives to conventional energy resources, said Roger Heimer, representing the Community Action against Poverty energy program in Indianapolis, Ind. He called for alleviation of energy cost burdens on the poor, and constraints on energy-wasteful buildings.

Results from the town hall meetings in Chicago and nine other United States cities will be forwarded to the White House Office of Energy and Planning, for consideration in President Jimmy Carter's national energy plan to be announced April 20, N. Allen Anderson, regional FEA administrator, Chicago, said.

Town hall meetings also were held in Boston, New York City, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Kansas City, Denver, Dallas, San Francisco and Seattle. Summaries of the Chicago meeting will be available on request from the Chicago regional FEA office, Room A333, 175 W. Jackson, Chicago.

Violence in day of abductions

From Herald news services

A flurry of hostage-taking took place Monday in the United States and Canada. Three separate incidents occurred in Baltimore, Toronto, and Freeport, Ill. The Freeport case ended in death for the abductor.

Frank DeBoer, who held a Freeport policeman hostage, and shot another one, died Monday of wounds sustained in a gun battle with state, county and local police.

DeBoer 42, gave police 15 minutes to clear away from the home where he held Lt. Jack Munda hostage. He then raced from his home, shooting. DeBoer was shot in the head and chest. Munda was unharmed.

The gunman was admitted to Freeport Memorial Hospital, where he underwent surgery. He was later transferred to St. Anthony's Hospital in Rockford, where he died.

Kyle Kuhlmeier, the wounded policeman, was in good condition with wounds in the hand, foot and leg.

IN TORONTO, a self-described former mercenary in the Congo held three bank employees and a police sergeant hostage at gunpoint, demanding a C-130 Hercules to fly him to Uganda to meet his "pal" President Idi Amin. The man, who identified himself as Bob McLagan, 38, of Vancouver, released 11 other hostages unharmed in the first few hours of the stand-off with police at the downtown Bank Canadian National. The gunman was holding employees Luc Loiselle, Pierre Chaisson, Michel Plouffe, and Police Sgt. Bill Donaldson at the point of a 12-gauge shotgun. The department of National Defense said there were Hercules C-130s at the Canadian Forces Base in suburban Downsview, but refused to say if the planes would be used. Police were continuing to negotiate with the gunman.

IN BALTIMORE, a security guard put down his two guns and machete three hours after taking his eight children, his wife, and about 35 others hostage in a city office. The man, identified as Anthony Griffin, released all but a few of the hostages shortly after the takeover of the Department of Social Services. He surrendered at 6 p.m.

Police said "no deals" were made with Griffin.

Gas tax, drivers' fees hike urged

State officials Monday were urged to increase the state gas tax 4 cents a gallon, boost license plate fees an average of 58 per cent, nearly double the cost of driver's licenses and place a 1 per cent surcharge on new car purchases.

The recommendations, which could give the state more than $370 million in new revenue is needed to continue the state's road maintenance program, according to the Illinois Transportation Study Commission.

The panel's recommendations will increase the state gas tax from 7.5 cents a gallon to 11.5 cents. License plates for small cars would go from $18 to $30 and large car plates would jump from $30 to $45.

The commission also called for increasing the cost of driver's licenses from $8 to $15 and adding a 1 per cent surcharge to the purchase price of new cars.

THE COMMISSION'S report will be sent to Gov. James R. Thompson and the Illinois General Assembly for action. In the past, the commission's recommendations for tax increases and transportation plans have been adopted by the legislature.

Thompson for months has been talking publicly about an increase in the gas tax and license fees and has admitted his discussion of the subject represents a "trial balloon."

He also has urged the legislature to start talking about increases, but has stopped short of formally proposing them himself.

Fred A. Schoenfeld, executive director of the commission, said the increases are designed to produce only enough money to continue maintenance and resurfacing programs on existing roads during the next 20 years.

The commission also formally recommended a modified supplemental free way system be built and financed through the sale during the next 20 years of $4.4 billion worth of bonds.

The proposal calls for further increases in the gas tax — starting at half cent a gallon and climbing to at least 3 cents — to pay off the bonds.

U.S. troops to leave South Korea

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter told Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda Monday that United States ground troops will be withdrawn from South Korea, Japanese diplomatic sources said.

Carter said the United States still will honor its obligations to defend South Korea, the sources said, and he promised that the withdrawals will be worked out in close consultation with the Japanese and the South Korean governments without undermining security on the Korean peninsula.

The discussion came during the first of two days of talks between Carter and the Japanese leader, who received a warm welcome and a 19-gun salute on his arrival at the White House.

PRESIDENTIAL PRESS Sec. Jody Powell said the Korean situation was discussed between the two leaders, but he gave no details.

No timetable for withdrawal of U. S. forces from South Korea was discussed, the sources said. Fukuda stressed during the 90-minute session,

Japanese sources said, that the security of the Korean peninsula was vital to Japan and East Asia.

"The President also expressed a similar opinion," one source said.

But, he added, "President Carter said, regarding the reduction of American troops in South Korea, that the United States would proceed with it without damaging peace in the Korean peninsula."

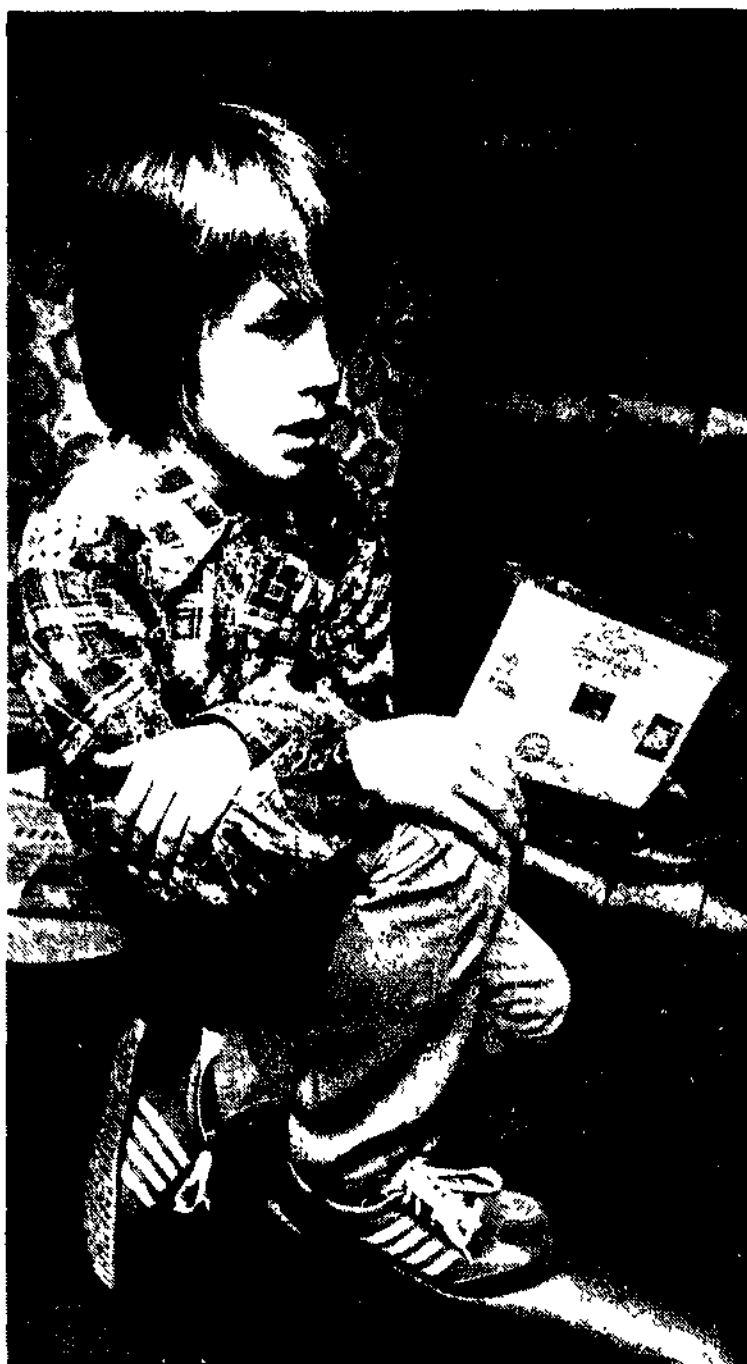

The United States has 40,000 servicemen in South Korea. Although ground troops will be removed, the sources said, about 7,000 Air Force personnel will remain.

Both Fukuda and Carter favored an early resumption of talks between South and North Korea, the sources said, and believed that "it is desirable that unification of South and North Korea be achieved through peaceful means."

Wrong turn in the mail sends Yule card to Poland

TOMMY FRICK, 10, of Hoffman Estates and the Christmas card that ended up in Warsaw, Poland, instead of New Orleans.

For three months, 10-year-old Tom Frick wondered why his friend didn't respond to the Christmas card.

Now he knows. His friend never got it.

It ended up in Poland instead.

Tom mailed the card at the Hoffman Estates Post Office Dec. 12, but the story really began earlier than that. It began late last spring when his friend Tommy Traina moved away.

THEY HAD BEEN friends for about five of six years at Lakeview School, Hoffman Estates. They got to know each other well at school even though they didn't play together too much after school. Tom lived at 237 Alcoa Ln. in Hoffman Estates but young Traina lived on the other side of Bode Road.

But Traina did know that Tom likes to collect beer cans, so when his family moved to New Orleans last spring, Tommy Traina promised to send Tom some new cans for his collection.

No beer cans or letters ever came.

Six or seven months passed, and in early December, Tom started making out his Christmas cards. There were just three or four friends on his list. He hadn't forgotten about young Traina, and he decided to try to send one to him.

HE SELECTED THE card, enclosed a recent school photo and included a little note, wishing young Traina a happy Christmas and asking him to send his address so he could write to him.

But Tom didn't know the address,

so he wrote, Tommy Traina, 217 Western, Hoffman Estates, Ill. 60194, and below, he advised, "Please forward." On the back of the envelope, he wrote the return address and attached three Christmas stickers.

He has used the "please forward" procedure a couple of other times, Tom says, and he just assumed it would get to his friend.

"I do that all the time," adds his mother, Linda Frick.

AN OFFICIAL AT THE Hoffman Estates Post Office says the letter should have been forwarded. The only way he can see that it ended up in Poland, he says, is that if it got slipped into the wrong sack somewhere along the line.

March 8, the unopened envelope was wrapped in a clear plastic bag and back in the Frick's mail box. He turned the envelope over and saw the "Warszawa" postmark, which means Warsaw in Polish. At the bottom of the bag was a small note in Polish that the family still hasn't been able to decipher.

"I guess after it went to Poland, and it came back to the United States, people in the United States assumed the stickers were Polish stamps, and that's why it got back," Mrs. Frick says.

She phoned the post office to try to find out what went wrong.

The postal clerk was as amazed as she was that it had gone all the way behind the Iron Curtain. "For 13 cents, it should never have gone overseas," he said.

In Dist. 59, Dist. 214 controversy

Village supports bill on unit vote

The Wheeling Village Board Monday gave its support to a proposed state law that would allow voters in High School Dist. 214 to cast ballots in the April 9 referendum on the Elk Grove Township unit district proposal.

The board asked Village Mgr. Terry L. Zerkle to write legislators in support of House Bill 434, which amends a state law allowing only residents of Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 to vote on the issue.

The board gave its support at the request of Dist. 214 Supt. Edward Gilbert. He said the bill will directly affect efforts by Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 to form a unit district.

STATE SCHOOL Supt. Joseph Cronin has ruled that the issue should be decided by a referendum April 9. According to state law only Dist. 59 residents will be eligible to vote.

The unit district proposal would combine Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 elementary schools with Forest View and Elk Grove high schools which are now in Dist. 214. The unit district would take 42 per cent of Dist. 214's current tax base and 27 per cent of its students.

The High School Dist. 214 Board of Education has filed suit challenging the constitutionality of allowing only Elk Grove Dist. 59 residents to vote in the referendum. Unit school district opponents say Dist. 214 would suffer through the reorganization.

Gilbert has said that the issue is "the constitutionality of the law which does not allow taxpayers to vote on an issue which has an impact on them."

The Dist. 214 Board is soliciting community organizations and private citizens to join the suit. The Village of Arlington Heights last week voted to file class action suits in federal and state courts opposing the formation of the unit district.

Gilbert said district lawyers told him it would be possible "that along the way the judge could dismiss the school district" from the suit but could not dismiss citizens.

The House Elementary Education Committee is expected to continue a hearing on the bill today.

Dist. 21 board hopefuls to appear at four forums

Candidates for the Wheeling Township Dist. 21 Board of Education will appear at four candidates' nights before the April 9 election.

Candidates for the two 3-year terms will attend meetings at the following schools:

• Poe School, 2800 N. Highland Ave., Arlington Heights, Tuesday, 8 p.m.

• Cooper Junior High School, 1050 W. Plum Grove Rd., Buffalo Grove, Wednesday, 8 p.m.

• Irving School, 1250 Radcliffe St., Buffalo Grove, March 30, 8 p.m.

• Tarkington School, 310 Scott St., Wheeling, April 5, 8 p.m.

Each candidate will make an introductory statement and answer questions.

Dist. 21 candidates are Xenophon Daniel Kafkas, Linda Kurtzman, Herbert Stein and Stuart Weinstein.

Fire area taxes to yield $179,000

Wheeling will receive $179,000 more in revenue from the Wheeling Rural Fire Protection District in 1977-78 thanks to an ambulance tax approved by voters last July.

Lance Hooper, fire district trustee, said the district board has agreed to give Wheeling a total of $518,000 — $339,000 in fire tax revenue and $179,000 in ambulance tax revenue.

The village last year received only $339,000 from the district. The ambulance tax hike amounted to 25 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

HOOPER SAID the Buffalo Grove Fire Dept. will receive $194,000 in fire tax revenues and $80,000 in ambulance tax revenues.

Village officials last month asked the fire department for $570,000 to operate the village fire department in 1977-78, 75 per cent of the village's total proposed fire budget of $762,417. Wheeling Village Mgr. Terry L. Zerkle said in the past year, Wheeling received from the fire district only 50 per cent of the department's operating expenses.

Hooper said the $518,000 allocation "doesn't hit your request but it's the best we could do." He said the district did not receive an expected increase in assessed valuation in 1976-77 and that "we used up $60,000 worth of surplus."

"We know there's an increased valuation coming but there's some question on whether we'll receive enough tax monies to cover costs. We may have to issue tax anticipation warrants," he said.

WHEELING TRUSTEES Saturday asked Zerkle to go back to the fire district board and attempt to get the allocation raised to the 75 per cent mark.

The fire district serves 50,000 residents in the Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and Prospect Heights area. The Wheeling Fire Dept. is owned and operated by the village. The district, however, collects the tax money and contracts with the municipal department for its services.

A portion of Wheeling is not in the fire district but is served by the municipal fire department.

Groups endorse golf course purchase

The Wheeling Park District's efforts to purchase the Chevy Chase Golf Course and develop the Childerly Retreat site have been endorsed by 12 community groups — including two political parties and two independent candidates in the village election.

Supporters of the March 26 bond referendum include the Wheeling Jaycees, the Wheeling Chamber of Commerce, the Wheeling Rotary Club board of directors, the Wheeling Women's Club, the Wheeling Historical Society, the Wheeling Village Board, the Better Environment, Service and Trust Party, the Wheeling Citizen's Party, the Tahoe Village

Condominiums Assn. executive committee, the Chelsea Cove Condominiums executive committee, Edward Fox, independent candidate, president, and Patrick Trunda, independent candidate for village clerk.

THE PARK BOARD is asking residents to vote on a $3.7 million bond referendum to purchase the 128-acre golf course at 1003 N. Milwaukee Ave., Vernon Township. The course will be used for golfing, jogging, winter archery, cross-country skiing, bike trails, fishing, horseshoes, shuffle board and outdoor basketball.

The park district also plans to use the 48-year-old Tudor-style clubhouse for dancing, exercise classes, yoga, theater and arts and crafts.

The 9.5-acre Childerly site, 506 Old McHenry Rd., will be developed as an outdoor education and recreation site. The park district also will work with the Wheeling Historical Society to restore historical buildings on the property.

If the referendum is approved, park officials estimate the average Wheeling park district resident with a home assessed at $7,000 will pay a maximum of $12.60 more a year in park taxes.

Pay issue to be discussed tonight

Township salary hikes 'outrageous,' ICP says

Salary increases for Wheeling Township officials "would be outrageous," say members of the Independent Coalition Party, who have vowed to return any pay increases if they are elected in April.

The Wheeling Township Board of Auditors will meet tonight to discuss salary increases for part-time and full-time township officials. The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the new Wheeling Township Hall, 1616 N. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights.

Ethel Kolerus, township supervisor, said she hopes all of the salaries will be increased for the next term. Mrs. Kolerus now earns $12,500 a year as full-time supervisor. State law requires townships to raise their salaries by March 29 or wait four more years.

OTHER TOWNSHIP salaries include: highway commissioner, $14,000; assessor, $14,500; clerk, $6,000; and auditors $720 a year.

Mrs. Kolerus's opponent in the April 5 election, Albert A. Peters, said he thinks the salaries are high enough now.

"I don't believe it is necessary to receive any salary increase for the duties that my office will perform in light of the diminishing unincorporated areas," Peters said.

Vincent A. Franzone, the Independent Coalition Party's highway commissioner candidate, also said a pay raise for the post is not warranted.

"I will refuse to accept a salary increase now that the commissioner of highways is responsible for only 10 per cent of the township's roads," Franzone said.

All coalition party candidates said if elected they would return any salary increase and use the money "to expand community services."

PATRICIA A. CARR, Independent Coalition Party candidate for clerk, said she thinks the clerk's $6,000-a-year salary "is too much for a job in which the responsibilities are decreasing."

But her Republican opponent, 27-year incumbent Dorothy Hauff, said the duties of the clerk are increasing.

"The increased number of precincts means more voter registration," she said. "And when the number of people in the township increases, it increases the entire workload."

The ICP candidate for assessor, William A. Hogendorp, said the office of the assessor now has a salary and expenses in excess of $45,000.

"I am definitely against increasing this in any manner," Hogendorp said.

A full slate of Independent Coalition Party candidates is opposing the incumbent Republican slate in the April 5 election.

Gerry's Deli gets nod for links cafe

The owner of Gerry's Deli Monday was selected to operate the Buffalo Grove Golf Course restaurant.

The village board Monday, in an informal polling of members, voted to accept a village staff recommendation that Gerry's owner, Gerry Geffan, be allowed to operate the restaurant at 400 Lake-Cook Rd. rather than Gary Roper and Geraldine Teichma, owners of Bill's Buffalo House.

The board did not reach an agreement whether the village should replace the carpeting in the restaurant. Trustee Thomas Mahoney asked that the carpeting item be removed from the proposed lease with Geffan and discussed at the next board meeting.

Terms of the restaurant lease were being discussed late Monday night by the board.

Three trustees had opposed the village replacing the carpeting because of a shortage of funds from golf course revenue.

"The money is not there, you only have $10,000 this year for capital improvements," Trustee Robert Bogart said.

TRUSTEE CLARICE RECH, who chaired the village's golf course information committee, said the village should do more long-range planning before committing itself to major capital improvements at the restaurant.

The village staff committee recommended Geffan because he proposed paying a higher monthly rent than the other applicants, asked for a seven-year lease, and agreed to pay for new chairs, a sign and other improvements at the restaurant.

Proposing the committee's recommendation be accepted Mahoney said, "This is the recommendation of the people on the village staff that will have to get along with them (the restaurant operators) on a day-to-day basis."

The staff committee was composed of Richard Glueckert, acting village manager, Charles McCoy, director of public works; and Carmen Molinaro, director of golf course operations. It was formed by the board last week when trustees could not reach agreement on who to select to run the golf course restaurant.

All of the trustees agreed the board had to reach a decision Monday to enable an operator to open the restaurant as quickly as possible. Golf season starts April 1.

DOZENS OF CITIZENS had their say on critical energy issues at a town meeting Monday in Chicago. A panel of Federal

Energy Administration representatives listened to comments during the day-long meeting at the Illinois Institute of Technology campus on the city's South Side.

Satellites to windmills touted at energy forum

by LEA TONKIN

Ideas ranging from cosmic energy to satellites in outer space collecting the sun's rays were offered as solutions Monday to energy problems discussed at a Federal Energy Administration town meeting in Chicago.

Call for ideas from people who believe they can help solve the nation's energy problems, the agency invited the public to a forum at the Illinois Institute of Technology campus in Chicago. Residents from Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio and Wisconsin were invited to offer their views on energy issues.

Consumers, salesmen, industry executives and environmental activists took the opportunity to sound off about national energy policy.

LEADING OFF the discussion, William Reeve of Palatine called for long-term solutions to United States energy shortage problems and less government regulation of prices and supply. As vice president, secretary and general manager of Chemplex Co., Rolling Meadows, Reeve favors conservation programs and increased development of coal and nuclear energy.

Heavy consumer savings in home heating costs would be possible if the government stressed energy conservation in building materials, said Naperville resident John Orava. He criticized federal housing agencies, which he said seem to be unaware of energy efficient building materials and outdated building codes.

Potential safety problems in automatic furnace dampers should be overcome as one solution to home energy conservation problems, said Victor Algmim, a Chicago resident. Algmim also favors development of satellite solar systems which could capture the sun's rays as an energy resource.

Another self-proclaimed energy conservation specialist, Dave Hale of Hickory Hills offered a demon-

ENERGY RESEARCHER Ira Charak of Western Springs said the United States needs expansion of energy use to achieve an increased gross national product. Nuclear power is "clean, safe and cheap," he said.

"Massive social upheavals" can be expected if the United States fails to overcome energy problems, said engineer Robert Boyar of LaGrange. Boyar supported the nuclear breeder reactor for energy use.

Windmills and other "appropriate technology" should be considered as alternatives to conventional energy resources, said Roger Heimer, representing the Community Action against Poverty energy program in Indianapolis, Ind. He called for alleviation of energy cost burdens on the poor, and constraints on energy-wasteful buildings.

Results from the town hall meetings in Chicago and nine other United States cities will be forwarded to the White House Office of Energy and Planning, for consideration in President Jimmy Carter's national energy plan to be announced April 20, N. Allen Anderson, regional FEA administrator, Chicago, said.

Town hall meetings also were held in Boston, New York City, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Kansas City, Denver, Dallas, San Francisco and Seattle. Summaries of the Chicago meeting will be available on request from the Chicago regional FEA office, Room A333, 175 W. Jackson, Chicago.

The recommendations, which could give the state more than $370 million in new revenue is needed to continue the state's road maintenance program, according to the Illinois Transportation Study Commission.

The panel's recommendations will increase the state gas tax from 7.5 cents a gallon to 11.5 cents. License plates for small cars would go from $18 to $30 and large car plates would jump from $30 to $45.

The commission also called for increasing the cost of driver's licenses from $8 to $15 and adding a 1 per cent surcharge to the purchase price of new cars.

THE COMMISSION'S report will be sent to Gov. James R. Thompson and the Illinois General Assembly for action. In the past, the commission's recommendations for tax increases and transportation plans have been adopted by the legislature.

Thompson for months has been talking publicly about an increase in the gas tax and license fees and has admitted his discussion of the subject represents a "trial balloon."

He also has urged the legislature to start talking about increases, but has stopped short of formally proposing them himself.

Fred A. Schoenfeld, executive director of the commission, said the increases are designed to produce only enough money to continue maintenance and resurfacing programs on existing roads during the next 20 years.

The commission also formally recommended a modified supplemental free way system be built and financed through the sale during the next 20 years of $4.4 billion worth of bonds.

The proposal calls for further increases in the gas tax — starting at half cent a gallon and climbing to at least 3 cents — to pay off the bonds.

U.S. troops to leave South Korea

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter told Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda Monday that United States ground troops will be withdrawn from South Korea, Japanese diplomatic sources said.

Carter said the United States still will honor its obligations to defend South Korea, the sources said, and he promised that the withdrawals will be worked out in close consultation with the Japanese and the South Korean governments without undermining security on the Korean peninsula.

The discussion came during the first of two days of talks between Carter and the Japanese leader, who received a warm welcome and a 19-gun salute on his arrival at the White House.

PRESIDENTIAL PRESS Sec. Jody Powell said the Korean situation was discussed between the two leaders, but he gave no details.

No timetable for withdrawal of U. S. forces from South Korea was discussed, the sources said. Fukuda stressed during the 90-minute session,

Japanese sources said, that the security of the Korean peninsula was vital to Japan and East Asia.

"The President also expressed a similar opinion," one source said.

But, he added, "President Carter said, regarding the reduction of American troops in South Korea, that the United States would proceed with it without damaging peace in the Korean peninsula."

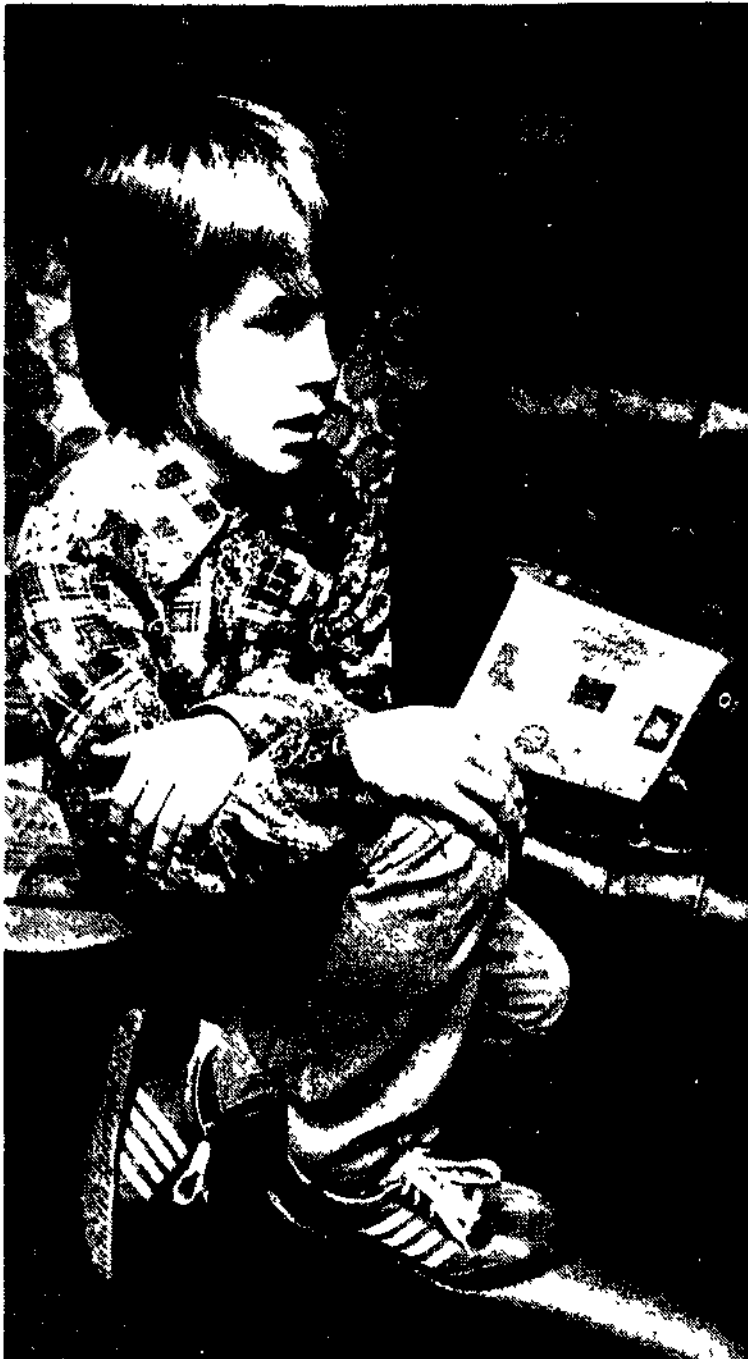

The United States has 40,000 servicemen in South Korea. Although ground troops will be removed, the sources said, about 7,000 Air Force personnel will remain.

Both Fukuda and Carter favored an early resumption of talks between South and North Korea, the sources said, and believed that "it is desirable that unification of South and North Korea be achieved through peaceful means."

Wrong turn in the mail sends Yule card to Poland

TOMMY FRICK, 10, of Hoffman Estates and the Christmas card that ended up in Warsaw, Poland, instead of New Orleans.

For three months, 10-year-old Tom Frick wondered why his friend didn't respond to the Christmas card.

Now he knows. His friend never got it.

It ended up in Poland instead. Tom mailed the card at the Hoffman Estates Post Office Dec. 12, but the story really began earlier than that. It began late last spring when his friend Tommy Traina moved away.

THEY HAD BEEN friends for about five of six years at Lakeview School, Hoffman Estates. They got to know each other well at school even though they didn't play together too much after school. Tom lived at 237 Alcoa Ln. in Hoffman Estates but young Traina lived on the other side of Bode Road.

But Traina did know that Tom likes to collect beer cans, so when his family moved to New Orleans last spring, Tommy Traina promised to send Tom some new cans for his collection.

No beer cans or letters ever came.

Six or seven months passed, and in early December, Tom started making out his Christmas cards. There were just three or four friends on his list. He hadn't forgotten about young Traina, and he decided to try to send one to him.

HE SELECTED the card, enclosed a recent school photo and included a little note, wishing young Traina a happy Christmas and asking him to send his address so he could write to him.

But Tom didn't know the address,

so he wrote, Tommy Traina, 217 Western, Hoffman Estates, Ill. 60194, and below, he advised, "Please forward." On the back of the envelope, he wrote the return address and attached three Christmas stickers.

He has used the "please forward" procedure a couple of other times, Tom says, and he just assumed it would get to his friend.

"I do that all the time," adds his mother, Linda Frick.

AN OFFICIAL AT THE Hoffman Estates Post Office says the letter should have been forwarded. The only way he can see that it ended up in Poland, he says, is that if it got slipped into the wrong sack somewhere along the line.

March 8, the unopened envelope was wrapped in a clear plastic bag and back in the Frick's mail box. He turned the envelope over and saw the "Warszawa" postmark, which means Warsaw in Polish. At the bottom of the bag was a small note in Polish that the family still hasn't been able to decipher.

"I guess after it went to Poland, and it came back to the United States, people in the United States assumed the stickers were Polish stamps, and that's why it got back," Mrs. Frick says.

She phoned the post office to try to find out what went wrong.

The postal clerk was as amazed as she was that it had gone all the way behind the Iron Curtain. "For 13 cents, it should never have gone overseas," he said.

Injury suit filed against fire unit

A lawsuit seeking $125,000 for injuries has been filed against the Buffalo Grove Fire Dept. by a Glenview woman who was injured when a fire truck struck a jeep in which she was riding.

Barbara Workman, 24, suffered leg, back and kidney injuries as well as various cuts in the accident April 15, 1976, said George R. Segenrich, Ms. Workman's attorney.

It has taken nearly a year to file suit, Segenrich said, because "it took time to determine the extent of injuries," and because he first tried to reach a negotiated settlement with the Hartford Insurance Group, which insured the fire department at the time of the accident.

THE SUIT PROBABLY will not come to trial in Cook County Circuit Court for three or four years because of overcrowded court calendars, Segenrich said.

The Hartford Group has not yet filed a response to the suit, Segenrich said.

Hartford will be responding within a week, said Charles Shriver of the Shriver Insurance Agency Inc., Mount Prospect, the former insurance agent for the fire department.

MS. WORKMAN WAS riding in a jeep driven by Lewis Lettman, 27,

Lake Forest, last April when it was struck at the corner of Arlington Heights and Dundee roads by the fire truck, which was answering an alarm.

The fire truck skidded on wet pavement caused by heavy rains and rammed Lettman's jeep, which then was pushed into three other cars.

Ms. Workman was taken to North-west Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, where she was treated and released.

Fire area taxes to yield $179,000

Wheeling will receive $179,000 more in revenue from the Wheeling Rural Fire Protection District in 1977-78 thanks to an ambulance tax approved by voters last July.

Lance Hooper, fire district trustee, said the district board has agreed to give Wheeling a total of $518,000 — $339,000 in fire tax revenue and $179,000 in ambulance tax revenue.

The village last year received only $339,000 from the district. The ambulance tax hike, amounted to 25 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

HOOPER SAID the Buffalo Grove Fire Dept. will receive $194,000 in fire tax revenues and $80,000 in ambulance tax revenues.

Village officials last month asked the fire department for $570,000 to operate the village fire department in 1977-78, 75 per cent of the village's total proposed fire budget of $762,417. Wheeling Village Mgr. Terry L. Zerkle said in the past year, Wheeling received from the fire district only 50 per cent of the department's operating expenses.

Hooper said the $518,000 allocation "doesn't hit your request but it's the best we could do." He said the district did not receive an expected increase in assessed valuation in 1976-77 and that "we used up $60,000 worth of surplus."

"We know there's an increased valuation coming but there's some question on whether we'll receive enough tax monies to cover costs. We may have to issue tax anticipation warrants," he said.

WHEELING TRUSTEES Saturday asked Zerkle to go back to the fire district board and attempt to get the allocation raised to the 75 per cent mark.

The fire district serves 50,000 residents in the Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and Prospect Heights area. The Wheeling Fire Dept. is owned and operated by the village. The district, however, collects the tax money and contracts with the municipal department for its services.

Pay issue to be discussed tonight

Township salary hikes 'outrageous,' ICP says

Salary increases for Wheeling Township officials "would be outrageous," say members of the Independent Coalition Party, who have vowed to return any pay increases if they are elected in April.

The Wheeling Township Board of Auditors will meet tonight to discuss salary increases for part-time and full-time township officials. The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the new Wheeling Township Hall, 1616 N. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights.

Ethel Kolerus, township supervisor, said she hopes all of the salaries will be increased for the next term. Mrs.

Kolerus now earns $12,500 a year as full-time supervisor. State law requires townships to raise their salaries by March 29 or wait four more years.

OTHER TOWNSHIP salaries include: highway commissioner, $14,000; assessor, $14,500; clerk, $6,000; and auditors $720 a year.

Mrs. Kolerus's opponent in the April 5 election, Albert A. Peters, said he thinks the salaries are high enough now.

"I don't believe it is necessary to receive any salary increase for the duties that my office will perform in light of the diminishing unincorporated areas," Peters said.

Vincent A. Franzone, the Independent Coalition Party's highway commissioner candidate, also said a pay raise for the post is not warranted.

"I will refuse to accept a salary increase now that the commissioner of highways is responsible for only 10 per cent of the township's roads," Franzone said.

PATRICIA A. CARR, Independent Coalition Party candidate for clerk, said she thinks the clerk's $6,000-a-year salary "is too much for a job in which the responsibilities are decreasing."

But her Republican opponent, 27-year incumbent Dorothy Hauff, said the duties of the clerk are increasing.

"The increased number of precincts means more voter registration," she said. "And when the number of people in the township increases, it increases the entire workload."

The ICP candidate for assessor, William A. Hogendorp, said the office of the assessor now has a salary and expenses in excess of $45,000.

"I am definitely against increasing this in any manner," Hogendorp said.

A full slate of Independent Coalition Party candidates is opposing the incumbent Republican slate in the April 5 election.

Dist. 21 candidates to appear at forum

Candidates for the Wheeling Township Dist. 21 Board of Education will appear at four candidates' nights before the April 9 election.

Candidates for the two 3-year terms will attend meetings at the following schools:

• Poe School, 2800 N. Highland Ave., Arlington Heights, Tuesday, 8 p.m.

• Cooper Junior High School, 1050 W. Plum Grove Rd., Buffalo Grove, Wednesday, 8 p.m.

• Irving School, 1250 Radcliffe St., Buffalo Grove, March 30, 8 p.m.

• Tarkington School, 310 Scott St., Wheeling, April 5, 8 p.m.

Each candidate will make an introductory statement and answer questions.

Dist. 21 candidates are Xenophon Daniel Kafkas, Linda Kurtzman, Herbert Stein and Stuart Weinstein.

Shopping center plans gain OK

The Buffalo Grove Village Board Monday approved final plans for a shopping center on the south side of Dundee Road between Ellen Drive and Old Buffalo Grove Road.

Elston Builders of Skokie had proposed building the two-structure development which received village plan commission approval March 18.

Agreement on well tabled

A proposed agreement on construction of the village's sixth well was tabled by the village board Monday because of trustee questions on the cost of the agreement. The proposed agreement calls for Centex Homes of Illinois Inc. to construct a well, south of Pauline Avenue east of Weiland Road, reservoir and pipes needed to connect the new well to the village water system at a total cost of $911,678.

The village would act as general contractor for the project and repay Centex for the construction costs over five years following completion of the project.

Board members questioned how much a provision stating that the village would be responsible for providing workmen's compensation insurance for the project might cost the village.

$20,000 for park development

A $20,000 donation to be used for developing park lands was presented to the village board Monday on behalf of developers Albert Frank and Salvatore Balsamo. The developers plan to construct homes on property east of Arlington Heights Road and north of Ill. Rte. 83. The park district has said it will use the donation to develop a regional park in the Lake County section of Buffalo Grove.

Arlington Hts. Road plans OKd

The village board adopted a resolution Monday finalizing plans for the widening of Arlington Heights Road between Lake-Cook Road and Dundee Road. The board appropriated $2,258, the village's share of the construction costs. State and federal funds will pay for the majority of reconstruction costs.

Village plans to relax ban on sprinkling

The Elk Grove Village Board Monday decided to relax the sprinkling ban it imposed last summer.

Board members said they will ask Village Atty. George Kalckerbocker to draw up an ordinance relaxing the ban tonight. The decision was made during the board's committee-of-the-whole meeting.

The relaxation of the ban will allow residents living at odd-numbered addresses to sprinkle their lawns from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturdays and residents at even-numbered addresses to do so from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Sundays.

Companies in the village's industrial park with odd-numbered addresses may sprinkle from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Tuesdays and those with even-numbered addresses may do so from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Thursdays. Washing cars and filling swimming pools will be limited to the same hours as sprinkling.

BOARD MEMBERS said the plan would allow time for water to build up in the reservoirs.

A total sprinkling ban was imposed last June when the village experienced water shortages. A moratorium on annexations and rezoning was imposed in July, and although it officially expired in August, the board has not rezoned any property for projects that would affect the water supply and has annexed one 80-acre lot of land. The board did not discuss the moratorium Monday.

Instead, it directed its attention to sprinkling, washing cars and filling swimming pools. But Pres. Charles Zetek throughout the evening insisted "I don't care what you pick. You'll change it anyway. What we do depends on what happens this summer."

But village trustees nevertheless were intent on laying some ground rules from which they could work. The trustees rejected nine plans recommended by village staff members after Trustee Ronald Chernick said the board must choose a plan that would be enforceable.

TRUSTEE MICHAEL Tosto said he was concerned that the even-odd plan might be difficult to enforce and suggested dividing the village into sections. He also expressed concern that the village's wells could not handle four hours of sprinkling at a time.

"We're just building an enforcement problem," said Trustee Edward Kenna. "The cops are going to have to carry clocks and maps."

Residents with new lawns must get a permit from the village to water for four hours of their choice for 14 days.

DOZENS OF CITIZENS had their say on critical energy issues at a town meeting Monday in Chicago. A panel of Federal

Energy Administration representatives listened to comments during the day-long meeting at the Illinois Institute of Technology campus on the city's South Side.

Satellites to windmills touted at energy forum

by LEA TONKIN

Ideas ranging from cosmic energy to satellites in outer space collecting the sun's rays were offered as solutions Monday to energy problems discussed at a Federal Energy Administration town meeting in Chicago.

Call for ideas from people who believe they can help solve the nation's energy problems, the agency invited the public to a forum at the Illinois Institute of Technology campus in Chicago. Residents from Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio and Wisconsin were invited to offer their views on energy issues.

Consumers, salesmen, industry executives and environmental activists took the opportunity to sound off about national energy policy.

LEADING OFF the discussion, William Reeve of Palatine called for long-term solutions to United States energy shortage problems and less government regulation of prices and supply. As vice president, secretary and general manager of Chemplex Co., Rolling Meadows, Reeve favors conservation programs and increased development of coal and nuclear energy.

Heavy consumer savings in home heating costs would be possible if the government stressed energy conservation in building materials, said Naperville resident John Orava. He criticized federal housing agencies, which he said seem to be unaware of energy efficient building materials and outdated building codes.

Cosmic energy was on Jerome Forneck's mind when he tried to sell the concept to the government But "stupid procedures" make it difficult for creative people in the energy development field to make a buck, Forneck told the FEA panel. Cosmic rays are atomic particles from outer space which enter the earth's atmosphere at high speed.

Potential safety problems in automatic furnace dampers should be overcome as one solution to home energy conservation problems, said Victor Algrin, a Chicago resident. Algrin also favors development of satellite solar systems which could capture the sun's rays as an energy resource.

Another self-proclaimed energy conservation specialist, Dave Hale of Hickory Hills offered a demonstration of fans that circulate warm air. The contraption included a fan attached to a long yellow flexible tube.

ENERGY RESEARCHER Ira Charak of Western Springs said the United States needs expansion of energy use to achieve an increased gross national product. Nuclear power is "clean, safe and cheap," he said.

"Massive social upheavals" can be expected if the United States fails to overcome energy problems, said engineer Robert Boyar of LaGrange. Boyar supported the nuclear breeder reactor for energy use.

Windmills and other "appropriate technology" should be considered as alternatives to conventional energy resources, said Roger Heimer, representing the Community Action against Poverty energy program in Indianapolis, Ind. He called for alleviation of energy cost burdens on the poor, and constraints on energy-wasteful buildings.

Results from the town hall meetings in Chicago and nine other United States cities will be forwarded to the White House Office of Energy and Planning, for consideration in President Jimmy Carter's national energy plan to be announced April 20, N. Allen Anderson, regional FEA administrator, Chicago, said.

Town hall meetings also were held in Boston, New York City, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Kansas City, Denver, Dallas, San Francisco and Seattle. Summaries of the Chicago meeting will be available on request from the Chicago regional FEA office, Room A333, 175 W. Jackson, Chicago.

Violence in day of abductions

From Herald news services

A flurry of hostage-taking took place Monday in the United States and Canada. Three separate incidents occurred in Baltimore, Toronto, and Freeport, Ill. The Freeport case ended in death for the abductor.

Frank DeBoer, who held a Freeport policeman hostage and shot another one, died Monday of wounds sustained in a gun battle with state, county and local police.

DeBoer, 42, gave police 15 minutes to clear away from the home where he held Lt. Jack Munda hostage. He then raced from his home, shooting. DeBoer was shot in the head and chest. Munda was unharmed.

The gunman was admitted to Freeport Memorial Hospital, where he underwent surgery. He was later transferred to St. Anthony's Hospital in Rockford, where he died.

Kvie Kuhlmeier, the wounded policeman, was in good condition with wounds in the hand, foot and leg.

IN TORONTO, a self-described former mercenary in the Congo held three bank employees and a police sergeant hostage at gunpoint, demanding a C-130 Hercules to fly him to Uganda to meet his "pal" President Idi Amin.

The man, who identified himself as Bob McLagan, 38, of Vancouver, released 11 other hostages unharmed in the first few hours of the stand-off with police at the downtown Bank Canadian National. The gunman was holding employees Luc Loiselle, Pierre Chaisson, Michel Plouffe, and Police Sgt. Bill Donaldson at the point of a 12-gauge shotgun. The department of National Defense said there were Hercules C-130s at the Canadian Forces Base in suburban Downsview, but refused to say if the planes would be used. Police were continuing to negotiate with the gunman.

IN BALTIMORE, a security guard put down his two guns and machete three hours after taking his eight children, his wife, and about 35 others hostage in a city office. The man, identified as Anthony Griffin, released all but a few of the hostages shortly after the takeover of the Department of Social Services. He surrendered at 6 p.m.

Police said "no deals" were made with Griffin.

Gas tax, drivers' fees hike urged

Dist. 54 wrapupPlumbing contract to Stompanato

A contract for plumbing installation on a new administration building for Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 has been awarded by the board of education to Stompanato Plumbing Corp., Schaumburg.

Their $49,500 bid brings the total of construction bids to $783,973, more than the $700,000 approved by voters in a 1974 referendum.

Marvin Lapicola, assistant superintendent of finance, said the referendum money has been invested, earning enough interest for the district to afford to build the center.

Plumbing bids, which were received along with other construction bids this month, were rejected because some firms had not included estimates for all the work the district listed in its specifications, Lapicola said. New bids were requested and were opened Thursday, he said.

The building is to be constructed on a site near Schaumburg School, 520 E. Schaumburg Rd., Schaumburg. Architect Donald Steffens, of Cooley & Borre & Associates, Park Ridge, has estimated the building can be completed in eight to 10 months.

Board OKs reading purchase

The board also approved the purchase of kindergarten reading materials at a cost of $9,067.

Board member Margaret Pageler said about $6,000 of the cost is for workbook materials, which must be purchased every year.

The books, published by MacMillan Co., will be used in conjunction with a new reading program planned to begin in grades one through three this fall.

The new reading series, published by Houghton Mifflin Co., is a graded program allowing each child to progress through a set of books at an appropriate pace. The district plans to drop its current program, published by Open Court, because the Open Court books do not allow for different levels of skill in children, reading consultant Jo Telford has said.

Math scores below U.S. average

Standardized test scores in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 this year show students are slightly below the national average in math skills and reading but are at or above grade level in all the areas.

The testing report was presented Monday at a board of education workshop led by Merlyn Swanson, administrator of educational services, Bill Harner, testing coordinator, and Bob Bortnick, reading clinic director.

On the Iowa tests of basic skills, administered in October, students in sixth and eighth grade scored in the 47th percentile on over-all math skills which includes concepts and problem solving. In reading, sixth graders scored in the 42nd percentile and seventh and eighth graders placed in the 46th percentile. The national average is 50 per cent.

STUDENTS in third through eighth grades were tested in five major areas — vocabulary, reading, language skills, work study skills, and math.

The district's composite test scores by grade level ranged from a low of the 57th percentile for sixth graders to a high of the 67th percentile for third and fourth graders.

Students at every grade level placed in a lower percentile in math, work study and language skills than their counterparts did last year. The only exception was in language skills where this year's sixth graders placed in the 62nd percentile as did last year's sixth graders.

Vocabulary seems to be the students' strongest area with scores ranging from the 63rd percentile to the 77th percentile. SCORES in language skills, which includes spelling, capitalization, punctuation and usage, ranged from a low of the 57th percentile for third and seventh graders to a high of the 65th percentile.

In work study skills, scores ranged from a low of the 63rd percentile for eighth graders to a high of the 76th percentile for fourth graders.

Scores in math skills ranged from a low of the 47th percentile for sixth and eighth graders to a high of the 67th percentile for fourth graders.

Dist. 54 boundary plan to changeSpecial ed relocation to be limited

by HOLLY HANSON

Administrators will attempt to limit relocation of special education classes as they complete a boundary plan that has been approved by the Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Board of Education.

Ronald Ruble, assistant superintendent of personnel, said some special education classes must be moved this year because of overcrowding in schools.

Special education classes traditionally have been placed in new buildings where enrollment capacity has not been reached. When the school's classes fill up, the special education classes are relocated, Ruble said.

Ruble said he will try to determine which special education classes can be moved easily and try to place the classes in schools where growth is not expected.

RUBLE HAS recommended 12 special education classes be moved to less crowded schools next year. Five of these are part of a one-year program that includes a different group of children each year.

He said classes at Aldrin, 617 Boxwood Dr., Schaumburg; Armstrong, 155 N. Kingsdale, Hoffman Estates; Collins, 407 S. Summit, Schaumburg; Enders-Salk, 345 N. Salem Dr., Schaumburg; and Lakeview, 280 Lakeview Ln., Hoffman Estates, will have to be relocated next year if enrollment continues to increase in those neighborhoods.

He said mobile classrooms at Blackhawk School, 370 Illinois Blvd., Hoffman Estates, could be moved to Collins to ease overcrowding, and keep special education classes there.

The other boundary changes will be made in six of the district's 28 schools: Aldrin, Enders-Salk, Schaumburg and Stevenson elementary schools and Frost and Eisenhower junior high schools.

EXCEPT FOR some students at Schaumburg and Link schools; the plan will affect only families moving into areas recommended for boundary changes, Ruble said.

Boundary changes approved for next year are:

• Aldrin, 617 Boxwood Dr.,

Schaumburg. Children in the Unit 21 development west of Salem Drive and south of Cranbrook next year will attend Hale School, 1300 Wise Rd.,

• Enders-Salk, 345 N. Salem Dr., Schaumburg. Some children in the Sheffield Estates area, north of Schaumburg Road and east of Barrington Road, will go to Lakeview School, 280 Lakeview Ln., Hoffman Estates.

• Schaumburg, 520 E. Schaumburg Rd., Schaumburg. Students from the Schaumburg Green apartments, who attend Link School, 900 W. Glenn Tr., Elk Grove Village, will attend Schaumburg School.

About nine students from the Country Lane apartments at Schaumburg School next year will go to Hanover Highlands School, 1451 Cypress Ave., Hanover Park.

• Stevenson, 1414 Armstrong Ln.,

Elk Grove Village. Students moving into a Centex development north of Nerge Road and east of Meacham Road will attend Stevenson next year.

Ruble had recommended sending the new Centex students to Schaumburg School next year. By moving the Schaumburg Green students to Schaumburg School, space was opened up at Stevenson to accommodate the Centex students and keep them at their neighborhood school.

• Boundaries also will change for Frost Junior High, 320 Wise Rd., Schaumburg, and Eisenhower Junior High, 800 W. Hassell Rd., Hoffman Estates.

Students who are sixth graders at Link School, next year will go to Eisenhower. The Link students would have attended Frost, which will be overcrowded, while Eisenhower's enrollment is expected to drop.

Deputy wants shooting range built

A Cook County sheriff's deputy wants to build a shooting range in Elk Grove Township where police officers, security guards and others could learn how to handle firearms.

Harold Butz, of Bensenville, a weapons instructor for the county, said his idea to build a public shooting range for training policemen is a "whole new idea" but "really what I want to see done."

The shooting range would be built on the north side of Old Higgins Road, just west of Busse Road. The building would be 6,500 square feet on each of two floors and would be built on land owned by Rudy Busse of Elk Grove Village.

BUT BUTZ first must get a special-use permit from the county zoning board of appeals because the land is zoned for industry. A hearing has been set tentatively for April 22.

The shooting range would have 18 stalls, Butz said. A team of certified weapons instructors would be available to teach, and police departments could rent out some stalls, Butz said.

He said a "majority of police departments in the area" have shown interest but have not made commitments. "I don't want commitments until I get the zoning taken care of," he said.

At least half of the shooting range's business should come from police

BUTZ SAID THERE are no nearby residents who would be disturbed by the facility.

"When it comes to security or personal safety, there's no compromise," he said. "When I talk about qualified people, I don't mean only to instruct, but to make sure it's 100 per cent safe."

Besides the shooting range, the building also will house a shop with firearms, hunting, fishing and archery equipment, Butz said.

Dist. 54 reviews plans for two lunch programs

Two proposals for lunch supervision programs and the consequences of eliminating the current parent-paid program are being reviewed by the Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 administration.

Two organizations have asked to conduct the district's parent-paid lunch program in 1977-78. Currently, parents of students who live less than 1.5 miles from school must pay for lunch supervision.

A private nonprofit corporation, headed by Rosemarie Sells, and Heritage Food Service Management, Palatine, a for-profit company, have presented lunch supervision proposals to the board of education.

This year, a parent corporation headed by Mrs. Sells ran the lunch program. Children who lived within 1.5 miles of school, who wished to stay at school during the lunch hour, were charged $35 per year for supervision. The charge does not include food.

The board decided during budget cutbacks a year ago to turn over lunch supervision to a parent corporation, which saved the district about $70,000.

PARENTS LAST summer asked why the district could not operate the lunch program and reduce the fee by absorbing the cost of bookkeepers and other administrative expenses.

In a letter to the board last week, Dist. 54 attorney Frank Hines said if the district assumes responsibility for lunch room supervision, it becomes a school activity and parents cannot be charged for school activities.

Hines said, however, it is legal to allow an outside corporation to operate a parent-paid lunch program because the Illinois School Code allows districts to open building for non-school use when classes are not in session.

Mrs. Sells' proposal for 1977-78 is similar to her program this year. The fee would remain at $35 per child per year, and one supervisor would be used for each group of 30 children.

SHE SAID MORE specific guidelines for disciplining children would be given to supervisors and an orientation program for supervisors, including first aid techniques, would be planned.

She urged the board to select a lunch program for 1977-78 this spring, so parents may be notified of sign up procedures and supervisors can receive orientation before the program begins.

Lunch supervision by a for-profit corporation was proposed by James E. Solomon of Heritage Food Service Management.

UNDER SOLOMON'S plan, parents would be charged $7.50 per quarter for each child in the program. The yearly cost would be $30, he said. Parents would be charged only for their first two children participating in the program, he said.

Children not enrolled in the program who wished to stay for lunch on one day would be charged $2.50 for that day, Solomon said. If a child stayed three days in one quarter, no further charge for using the program that quarter would be made, he said, because $7.50 would have been paid for that child.

Solomon said supervisors would be hired from the community and would receive supervision training.

Dist. 54 approves rental of Blackhawk

A lease allowing Schaumburg Township to rent office space at Blackhawk School next fall has been approved by the Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Board of Education.

Terms of the lease call for the township to rent Blackhawk for four years at an annual rent of $18,000. The township also would be responsible for maintenance and utility costs.

The board agreed recently to delete a clause in the lease requiring the township to pay a security deposit to Dist. 54.

The board decided last year to close

Blackhawk, 370 Illinois Blvd., Hoffman Estates, because of an estimated cost of $1 million to renovate the building for continued use by kindergarten through 6th grade classes.

The agreement also must be approved by township officials, Township Supervisor Kathleen Wojcik told the board.

THE $18,000 figure came from an appraisal of the building, Marvin Lapicola, assistant superintendent of finance, said. The lease has no clause automatically raising the rental rate at the end of four years, board member Elizabeth Carpenter said. At that point, the board could get a reappraisal of the building and change the rental fee, she said.

Township officials presently rent office space in the Buttery, 5 N. Roselle Rd., Schaumburg, for $15,000 a year.

Two trucks and a tractor used by the township road commissioner may be stored in an out building near the school. A screen will be constructed to avoid disturbance in the residential neighborhood near Blackhawk, Mrs. Wojcik said.

Movable interior paneling will be used to separate Blackhawk's classrooms into office space, she said. These panels could be removed if the district decided to take back the school when the lease ends, she said.

School hopefuls meet Thursday

School board candidates from Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 and High School Dist. 211 will present their views and answer questions from the public at a candidates night Thursday from 7 to 10 p.m. at Talman Federal Savings, 1010 N. Meacham, Schaumburg.

The evening will be sponsored by The League of Women Voters of Schaumburg-Hoffman Estates and the American Assn. of University Women of Schaumburg. The candidates will make opening statements and then answer questions. For further information, call Monica Levin at 894-1866 or Elizabeth Jaffee at 885-1530.

Teamsters try to recruit FOP police

The Teamsters Union is attempting to recruit members of the Schaumburg Police Dept. although an official of the Fraternal Order of Police said Monday he is confident of retaining 95 per cent membership in the 55-member department.

FOP was recognized as the official bargaining agent for the police department in December 1975.

William Hogan Jr., president of Teamsters Local 714, said he met with police department representatives "at their request" Sunday. Hogan said patrolmen "requested application cards" and said they wanted "to talk it over among themselves."

HE SAID IF THE department decides to join the Teamsters, the union wants "overwhelming" support. "We don't want to represent one-third or one-half of the department because that won't give us a strong basis (for negotiations)," Hogan said.

In recent weeks municipal officials in Rolling Meadows and Palatine have refused to meet with the Teamsters. The union is seeking recognition as bargaining agent for Rolling Meadows police and firefighters and Palatine police and public works employees.

Hogan said he was "surprised" to see FOP representatives at Sunday's meeting in Schaumburg. "We don't like to anticipate problems but we did have a heated discussion with the FOP," Hogan said. "FOP people say they are doing the job, but if they were we wouldn't have been there."

Joseph Vertuno, Illinois FOP president, said he was asked by members of the Schaumburg chapter to attend the meeting.

"FOP feels that policemen should be represented by a professional police organization for the simple reason that otherwise a patrolman could be put in a position of having his loyalties divided," he said.

VERTUNO SAID 15 Schaumburg patrolmen attended the meeting. "At this time it doesn't look like the men are in favor of joining the Teamsters. From where I stand there is only a minority interested," he said.

A Schaumburg patrolman who asked to remain unnamed said Monday "it doesn't seem too many of us are in favor of going into the Teamsters."

The policeman said patrolmen are "not unhappy with the FOP" although there is "unrest in the department because of internal problems."

Vertuno said FOP is "aware of and trying to do something about" low morale in the department. He said problems concern a "double standard" for punishment of violations of (Continued on Page 5)

DOZENS OF CITIZENS had their say on critical energy issues at a town meeting Monday in Chicago. A panel of Federal

Energy Administration representatives listened to comments during the day-long meeting at the Illinois Institute of Technology campus on the city's South Side.

Satellites to windmills touted at energy forum

by LEA TONKIN

Ideas ranging from cosmic energy to satellites in outer space collecting the sun's rays were offered as solutions Monday to energy problems discussed at a Federal Energy Administration town meeting in Chicago.

Call for ideas from people who believe they can help solve the nation's energy problems, the agency invited the public to a forum at the Illinois Institute of Technology campus in Chicago. Residents from Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio and Wisconsin were invited to offer their views on energy issues.

Consumers, salesmen, industry executives and environmental activists took the opportunity to sound off about national energy policy.

LEADING OFF the discussion, William Reeve of Palatine called for long-term solutions to United States energy shortage problems and less government regulation of prices and supply. As vice president, secretary and general manager of Chemplex Co., Rolling Meadows, Reeve favors conservation programs and increased development of coal and nuclear energy.

Helty consumer savings in home heating costs would be possible if the government stressed energy conservation in building materials, said Naperville resident John Orava. He criticized federal housing agencies, which he said seem to be unaware of energy efficient building materials and outdated building codes.

Cosmic energy was on Jerome Forneck's mind when he tried to sell the concept to the government. But "stupid procedures" make it difficult for creative people in the energy development field to make a buck, Forneck told the FEA panel. Cosmic rays are atomic particles from outer space which enter the earth's atmosphere at high speed.

Potential safety problems in automatic furnace dampers should be overcome as one solution to home energy conservation problems, said Victor Algrin, a Chicago resident. Algrin also favors development of satellite solar systems which could capture the sun's rays as an energy resource.

Another self-proclaimed energy conservation specialist, Dave Hale of Hickory Hills offered a demonstration of fans that circulate warm air. The contraption included a fan attached to a long yellow flexible tube.

ENERGY RESEARCHER Ira Charak of Western Springs said the United States needs expansion of energy use to achieve an increased gross national product. Nuclear power is "clean, safe and cheap," he said.

"Massive social upheavals" can be expected if the United States fails to overcome energy problems, said engineer Robert Boyar of LaGrange. Boyar supported the nuclear breeder reactor for energy use.

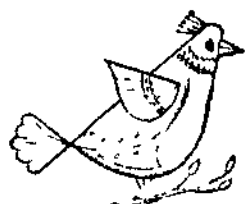

Windmills and other "appropriate technology" should be considered as alternatives to conventional energy resources, said Roger Helmer, representing the Community Action against Poverty energy program in Indianapolis, Ind. He called for alleviation of energy cost burdens on the poor, and constraints on energy-wasteful buildings.

Results from the town hall meetings in Chicago and nine other United States cities will be forwarded to the White House Office of Energy and Planning, for consideration in President Jimmy Carter's national energy plan to be announced April 20, N. Allen Anderson, regional FEA administrator, Chicago, said.

Town hall meetings also were held in Boston, New York City, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Kansas City, Denver, Dallas, San Francisco and Seattle. Summaries of the Chicago meeting will be available on request from the Chicago regional FEA office, Room A333, 175 W. Jackson, Chicago.

Violence in day of abductions

From Herald news services

A flurry of hostage-taking took place Monday in the United States and Canada. Three separate incidents occurred in Baltimore, Toronto, and Freeport, Ill. The Freeport case ended in death for the abductor.

Frank DeBoer, who held a Freeport policeman hostage and shot another one, died Monday of wounds sustained in a gun battle with state, county and local police.

DeBoer 42, gave police 15 minutes to clear away from the home where he held Lt. Jack Munda hostage. He then raced from his home, shooting DeBoer was shot in the head and chest. Munda was unharmed.

The gunman was admitted to Freeport Memorial Hospital, where he underwent surgery. He was later transferred to St. Anthony's Hospital in Rockford, where he died.

Kyle Kuhlmeier, the wounded policeman, was in good condition with wounds in the hand, foot and leg.

IN TORONTO, a self-described former mercenary in the Congo held three bank employees and a police sergeant hostage at gunpoint, demanding a C-130 Hercules to fly him to Uganda to meet his "pal" President Idi Amin. The man, who identified himself as Bob McLagan, 38, of Vancouver, released 11 other hostages unharmed in the first few hours of the stand-off with police at the downtown Bank Canadian National. The gunman was holding employees Luc Loiselle, Pierre Chaisson, Michel Plouffe, and Police Sgt. Bill Donaldson at the point of a 12-gauge shotgun. The department of National Defense said there were Hercules C-130s at the Canadian Forces Base in suburban Downsview, but refused to say if the planes would be used. Police were continuing to negotiate with the gunman.

IN BALTIMORE, a security guard put down his two guns and machine three hours after taking his eight children, his wife, and about 35 others hostage in a city office. The man, identified as Anthony Griffin, released all but a few of the hostages shortly after the takeover of the Department of Social Services. He surrendered at 6 p.m.

Police said "no deals" were made with Griffin.

Gas tax, drivers' fees hike urged

State officials Monday were urged to increase the state gas tax 4 cents a gallon, boost license plate fees an average of 58 per cent, nearly double the cost of driver's licenses and place a 1 per cent surcharge on new car purchases.

The recommendations, which could give the state more than $370 million in new revenue is needed to continue the state's road maintenance program, according to the Illinois Transportation Study Commission.

The panel's recommendations will increase the state gas tax from 7.5 cents a gallon to 11.5 cents. License plates for small cars would go from $18 to $30 and large car plates would jump from $30 to $45.

The commission also called for increasing the cost of driver's licenses from $8 to $15 and adding a 1 per cent surcharge to the purchase price of new cars.

THE COMMISSION'S report will be sent to Gov. James R. Thompson and the Illinois General Assembly for action. In the past, the commission's recommendations for tax increases and transportation plans have been adopted by the legislature.

Thompson for months has been talking publicly about an increase in the gas tax and license fees and has admitted his discussion of the subject represents a "trial balloon."

He also has urged the legislature to start talking about increases, but has stopped short of formally proposing them himself.

Fred A. Schoenfeld, executive director of the commission, said the increases are designed to produce only enough money to continue maintenance and resurfacing programs on existing roads during the next 20 years.

The commission also formally recommended a modified supplemental free way system be built and financed through the sale during the next 20 years of $4.4 billion worth of bonds.

The proposal calls for further increases in the gas tax — starting at half cent a gallon and climbing to at least 3 cents — to pay off the bonds.

U.S. troops to leave South Korea

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter told Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda Monday that United States ground troops will be withdrawn from South Korea, Japanese diplomatic sources said.

Carter said the United States still will honor its obligations to defend South Korea, the sources said, and he promised that the withdrawals will be worked out in close consultation with the Japanese and the South Korean governments without undermining security on the Korean peninsula.

The discussion came during the first of two days of talks between Carter and the Japanese leader, who received a warm welcome and a 19-gun salute on his arrival at the White House.

PRESIDENTIAL PRESS Sec. Jody Powell said the Korean situation was discussed between the two leaders, but he gave no details.

No timetable for withdrawal of U.S. forces from South Korea was discussed, the sources said. Fukuda stressed during the 90-minute session,

Japanese sources said, that the security of the Korean peninsula was vital to Japan and East Asia.

"The President also expressed a similar opinion," one source said.

But, he added, "President Carter said, regarding the reduction of American troops in South Korea, that the United States would proceed with it without damaging peace in the Korean peninsula."

The United States has 40,000 servicemen in South Korea. Although ground troops will be removed, the sources said, about 7,000 Air Force personnel will remain.

Both Fukuda and Carter favored an early resumption of talks between South and North Korea, the sources said, and believed that "it is desirable that unification of South and North Korea be achieved through peaceful means."

CARTER ALSO declared that the United States "will maintain a presence in Asia and observe commitments made in the past," the (Continued on Page 3)

Wrong turn in the mail sends Yule card to Poland

TOMMY FRICK, 10, of Hoffman Estates and the Christmas card that ended up in Warsaw, Poland, instead of New Orleans.

For three months, 10-year-old Tom Frick wondered why his friend didn't respond to the Christmas card.

Now he knows. His friend never got it.

It ended up in Poland instead.

Tom mailed the card at the Hoffman Estates Post Office Dec. 12, but the story really began earlier than that. It began late last spring when his friend Tommy Traina moved away.

THEY HAD BEEN friends for about five of six years at Lakeview School, Hoffman Estates. They got to know each other well at school even though they didn't play together too much after school. Tom lived at 237 Alcoa Ln. in Hoffman Estates but young Traina lived on the other side of Bode Road.

But Traina did know that Tom likes to collect beer cans, so when his family moved to New Orleans last spring, Tommy Traina promised to send Tom some new cans for his collection.

No beer cans or letters ever came.

Six or seven months passed, and in early December, Tom started making out his Christmas cards. There were just three or four friends on his list. He hadn't forgotten about young Traina, and he decided to try to send one to him.

HE SELECTED THE card, enclosed a recent school photo and included a little note, wishing young Traina a happy Christmas and asking him to send his address so he could write to him.

But Tom didn't know the address, so he wrote, Tommy Traina, 217 Western, Hoffman Estates, Ill. 60194, and below, he advised, "Please forward." On the back of the envelope, he wrote the return address and attached three Christmas stickers.

He has used the "please forward" procedure a couple of other times, Tom says, and he just assumed it would get to his friend.

"I do that all the time," adds his mother, Linda Frick.

AN OFFICIAL AT THE Hoffman Estates Post Office says the letter should have been forwarded. The only way he can see that it ended up in Poland, he says, is that if it got slipped into the wrong sack somewhere along the line.

March 8, the unopened envelope was wrapped in a clear plastic bag and back in the Frick's mail box. He turned the envelope over and saw the "Warszawa" postmark, which means Warsaw in Polish. At the bottom of the bag was a small note in Polish that the family still hasn't been able to decipher.

"I guess after it went to Poland, and it came back to the United States, people in the United States assumed the stickers were Polish stamps, and that's why it got back," Mrs. Frick says.

She phoned the post office to try to find out what went wrong.

The postal clerk was as amazed as she was that it had gone all the way behind the Iron Curtain. "For 13 cents, it should never have gone overseas," he said.

Man fights to leave ghetto then murdered in suburb

by DAVE IBATA

Luke L. Bishop worked hard all his life to escape the ghetto and live, safe and secure, in the suburbs.

But now the 32-year-old Schaumburg resident will be buried in Greenville, S.C., a victim of the senseless sort of murder he thought he had fled when he left his home town of Society Hill, S.C.

Bishop, a captain in the U.S. Army Reserve and recipient of a Bronze Star for action under fire in Vietnam, was shot to death Saturday night in an elevator of his Town Square apartment building, 300 S. Roselle Rd., Schaumburg.

AND ARMETHA Shouse, 34, the upstairs tenant who allegedly shot him, has been set free on her own recognizance.

"What can you say?" asked his fiancée, Carmen Roman, 26, of Chicago, as she packed his belongings. "The guy was 32 years old. Do you think he lived a full life? He had too much to do in that short a time."

Miss Roman; Bishop's brother John Bishop, Greenville, S.C.; and Bishop's close friend, Maurij Hamilton, Evanston, came to Bishop's apartment Monday night to pack his belongings to ship home to his parents in Society Hill, S.C.

Bishop was a man who willingly helped other people, his friends agree. And this willingness to get involved resulted in his death.

Luke L. Bishop

HE LOVED CHILDREN. Miss Roman said, and was at a birthday party for the building maintenance man's 5-year-old daughter the Saturday night he was murdered.

The gaiety of the party for the daughter of George Geber, 300 S. Roselle Rd., was shattered when a woman believed to be Mrs. Shouse appeared armed with a revolver in the basement recreation room of the building.

Bishop intervened and tried to talk Mrs. Shouse into putting away the pistol. He was in the elevator with her when she allegedly pulled the trigger and put a slug in Bishop's head.

Police Monday night could not confirm reports that Mrs. Shouse was searching for the man who sexually attacked her daughter.

MRS. SHOUSE was arrested and charged with murder and unlawful use of a weapon. She was released on her own recognizance Monday morning in the Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court. She was ordered to appear at 11 a.m. Wednesday in the Schaumburg branch of Cook County Circuit Court to post $500 bail on a $5,000 bond.

The murder cut short Bishop's career in the Army. John Bishop and Hamilton, both first lieutenants in the reserves, said Bishop had devoted himself to the military. He served in Vietnam, where he was wounded in action and earned a Bronze Star for his courage.

Another brother, James M. Bishop, also served in Vietnam. He wasn't as fortunate as his brothers. He was killed in action in 1968.

"Tragedy has a way of following us, doesn't it?" said John Bishop.

BISHOP ALSO IS survived by an ex-wife who has custody of his 4½-year-old son, Len, in Skokie. Though they lived apart, Bishop loved his son and saw him often.

"He loved kids," Miss Roman said. "His child was always here — just look at his toys," she said, waving to the collection of toys Bishop kept in his closet for his son's visits.

"I can't understand something like this would happen in this neighborhood," John Bishop said. "Here you work all your goddamn life to get out of the slum and now this."

Dist. 54 to try to avoid shifting special ed classes

by HOLLY HANSON

Administrators will attempt to limit relocation of special education classes as they complete a boundary plan that has been approved by the Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Board of Education.

Ronald Ruble, assistant superintendent of personnel, said some special education classes must be moved this year because of overcrowding in schools.

Special education classes traditionally have been placed in new buildings where enrollment capacity has not been reached. When the school's classes fill up, the special education classes are relocated, Ruble said.

Ruble said he will try to determine which special education classes can be moved easily and try to place the classes in schools where growth is not expected.

RUBLE HAS recommended 12 special education classes be moved to less crowded schools next year. Five of these are part of a one-year program that includes a different group of children each year.

He said classes at Aldrin, 617 Boxwood Dr., Schaumburg; Armstrong, 155 N. Kingsdale, Hoffman Estates; Collins, 407 S. Summit, Schaumburg; Enders-Salk, 345 N. Salem Dr., Schaumburg; and Lakeview, 280 Lakeview Ln., Hoffman Estates, will have to be relocated next year if enrollment continues to increase in those neighborhoods.

He said mobile classrooms at Blackhawk School, 370 Illinois Blvd., Hoffman Estates, could be moved to Collins to ease overcrowding, and keep special education classes there.

The other boundary changes will be made in six of the district's 28 schools: Aldrin, Enders-Salk, Schaumburg and Stevenson elementary schools and Frost and Eisenhower junior high schools.

EXCEPT for some students at Schaumburg and Link schools; the plan will affect only families moving into areas recommended for boundary changes, Ruble said.

Boundary changes approved for next year are

• Aldrin, 617 Boxwood Dr., Schaumburg. Children in the Unit 21 development west of Salem Drive and south of Cranbrook next year will attend Hale School, 1300 Wise Rd.

• Enders-Salk, 345 N. Salem Dr., Schaumburg. Some children in the Sheffield Estates area, north of Schaumburg Road and east of Barlington Road, will go to Lakeview School, 280 Lakeview Ln., Hoffman Estates.

• Schaumburg, 520 E. Schaumburg Rd., Schaumburg. Students from the Schaumburg Green apartments, who attend Link School, 900 W. Glenn Tr., Elk Grove Village, will attend Schaumburg School.

About nine students from the Country Lane apartments at Schaumburg School next year will go to Hanover Highlands School, 1451 Cypress Ave., Hanover Park.

• Stevenson, 1414 Armstrong Ln., Elk Grove Village. Students moving into a Centex development north of Nerge Road and east of Meacham Road will attend Stevenson next year.

Ruble had recommended sending the new Centex students to Schaumburg School next year. By moving the Schaumburg Green students to Schaumburg School, space was opened up at Stevenson to accommodate the Centex students and keep them at their neighborhood school.

• Boundaries also will change for Frost Junior High, 320 Wise Rd., Schaumburg, and Eisenhower Junior High, 800 W. Hassell Rd., Hoffman Estates.

Students who are sixth graders at Link School, next year will go to Eisenhower. The Link students would have attended Frost, which will be overcrowded, while Eisenhower's enrollment is expected to drop.

Parks sponsor candidates night

Candidates in the April 5 Schaumburg Park District, Schaumburg Township and library board elections will speak at 7:30 p.m. today at the Addams Junior High School cafeteria, 700 S. Springinguth Rd., Schaumburg.

The candidates night is sponsored by Schaumburg Park District.

Three candidates are seeking two 6-year terms in the park board: incumbent Michael P. Doherty, Douglas O. McLemore and Bonnie Luhman.

NEW FOUR-YEAR terms are being sought by the incumbent Republican township board — Supervisor Vernon Laubenstein, Clerk Kathleen Wojcik, Assessor Scott MacEachron, Collector Charles Holmes, Road Comm., David Erickson and Trustees Glenn Hoffmann, Walter P. Wing Jr., Shirley Kost and Brian Carey.

They are being challenged by a Democratic township slate of Dennis Watts for supervisor, Judith Sherman for clerk, John Benedetto for assessor, Joseph Sacco for collector, John Patrick Kelley for road commissioner, and trustee candidates William Engler, Estelle Navarro, Joseph Marshall and Herbert Hinkelman.

Nine candidates are running for seven 4-year terms on the library board: Deborah Miller, Robert Lyons, John Lucas, Ruth Tresselt, Sonja Leraas and Louis Ryseff. Newcomers are Diana Vandenberg, Mychalene Mandel and Robert Frankel.

EACH PARK BOARD candidate will be allowed five minutes for a presentation and three minutes for a summary.

Township and library board candidates will each be allowed three minutes for a presentation and two minutes for a summary.

A 30-minute question-and-answer period will be allowed for each group of candidates.

Six students win science awards

2 teens die of injuries from crash

Two Schaumburg teens died during the weekend of injuries they received in a two-car crash in the village.

Patrice L. Soelter, 18, of 129 Dunlap Pl., died at 6:45 p.m. Friday and Jeanette Adams, 15, of 100 Springinguth Rd., died at 5:05 p.m. Saturday.

Both had been taken to the intensive-care unit of Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, following the Thursday night accident, in which 18-year-old Elaine Osterberg, 1815 Crandon Ln., Schaumburg, was killed.

Ms. Soelter was a student at Harper College, Palatine, and Miss Adams was a sophomore at Schaumburg High School.

They and Ms. Osterberg were occupants of a car that was struck by an auto driven by Paul Makis, 35, of 1880 Jamestown Circle, Hoffman Estates. Makis received minor injuries in the crash.

departmental rules and policy.

"It's a case of where when a violation occurs one man might be allowed to work on one of his off days as a suspension while, for the same infraction, another man might be made to work two days without pay," Vertuno said.

POLICE CHIEF Martin J. Conroy is recuperating from a recent heart attack and could not be reached for comment. However, Village Mgr. John E. Coste said Monday he is "unaware" of Teamsters activities in the village.

Hogan said the Schaumburg meeting was "another question of a suburb calling us. We're not soliciting and it is not our intention to go after the FOP."

What the Teamsters can do that FOP can't in Schaumburg, Hogan said "remains to be seen."

"These villages are little dictators that call all the shots," he said. Hogan said about 90 per cent of all strikes are called "over recognition, these guys want it and with true collective bargaining will get it."

But Hogan said the Teamsters will not support police strikes. "I don't feel policemen should strike, that's not at all our intention," he said.

Vertuno contends FOP offers patrolmen a "better package" for $31 a year dues than the Teamsters provide for about $10 a month.

Thief of engine sought by police

Schaumburg police are seeking the thief who stole a gasoline-powered electric generator valued at between $400 and $600 Sunday from a parked truck, police reported Monday.

Police said the generator was stolen off a truck parked at 1104 Mercury Dr., between 1 p.m. and 10:45 p.m. Sunday. Victim of the theft was Able Aluminum of Wheeling, police said.

Shea runs write-in bid in 3rd Ward

Rolling Meadows businessman Frank Shea is quietly running as a write-in candidate for 3rd Ward alderman.

He is challenging Lorraine Godawa, the only person on the ballot in the 3rd Ward.

Shea, 34, of 4500 Magnolia Dr., said he decided to run two weeks ago because he wants the voters of the ward to have a choice. He said he previously was unaware that Godawa was running unopposed.

SHEA IS THE owner of Dart Inc. and National Plastics Inc., a tool making firm in Rolling Meadows. He has lived in the city since 1974 and is a member of the chamber of commerce and the Independent Order of Foresters.

Shea said his business background gives him an edge over Godawa.

"I've seen her literature and she's been involved in Woman's Club and a few other things," he said. "I feel to be on the council you have to have a business background."

Related story on Page 5

Ald. Stephen Eberhard, 3rd, has been working with Shea in his bid for alderman. Eberhard announced several weeks ago that he would not seek reelection.

"He's been thinking about running for a couple of weeks," Eberhard said of Shea. "I think he's really an all right guy. He's got a good head on his shoulders and he's really dynamic."

NEITHER SHEA nor Eberhard made any attempt to publicize the campaign, and Godawa learned of it when she came across Shea's literature while she was campaigning Saturday.

"We wanted to take her by surprise and I think we did," Shea said.

Eberhard says he is not familiar with Godawa's qualifications and says he is surprised she never approached him when she decided to run.

Although Eberhard has established a reputation as a foe of Mayor Roland J. Meyer, Shea says he does not consider himself an anti-Meyer candidate.

"I don't want to start off on the wrong foot with the mayor," he said. "I may disagree with him on some things, but I'm not going in as his opponent."

Eberhard said Shea knows he has an uphill fight. But he said, "we've got one guy now who won on a write-in," he said, referring to Ald. James Huddleston, 4th, who ran a successful write-in campaign in 1971.

DOZENS OF CITIZENS had their say on critical energy issues at a town meeting Monday in Chicago. A panel of Federal

Energy Administration representatives listened to comments during the day-long meeting at the Illinois Institute of Technology campus on the city's South Side.

Satellites to windmills touted at energy forum

by LEA TONKIN

Ideas ranging from cosmic energy to satellites in outer space collecting the sun's rays were offered as solutions Monday to energy problems discussed at a Federal Energy Administration town meeting in Chicago.

Call for ideas from people who believe they can help solve the nation's energy problems, the agency invited the public to a forum at the Illinois Institute of Technology campus in Chicago. Residents from Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio and Wisconsin were invited to offer their views on energy issues.

Consumers, salesmen, industry executives and environmental activists took the opportunity to sound off about national energy policy.

LEADING OFF the discussion, William Reeve of Palatine called for long-term solutions to United States energy shortage problems and less government regulation of prices and supply. As vice president, secretary and general manager of Chemplex Co., Rolling Meadows, Reeve favors conservation programs and increased development of coal and nuclear energy.

Heavy consumer savings in home heating costs would be possible if the government stressed energy conservation in building materials, said Naperville resident John Orava. He criticized federal housing agencies, which he said seem to be unaware of energy efficient building codes.

Cosmic energy was on Jerome Forneck's mind when he tried to sell the concept to the government. But "stupid procedures" make it difficult for creative people in the energy development field to make a buck, Forneck told the FEA panel. Cosmic rays are atomic particles from outer space which enter the earth's atmosphere at high speed.

Potential safety problems in a automatic furnace dampers should be overcome as one solution to home energy conservation problems, said Victor Algin, a Chicago resident. Algin also favors development of satellite solar systems which could capture the sun's rays as an energy resource.

Another self-proclaimed energy conservation specialist, Dave Hale of Hickory Hills offered a demonstration of fans that circulate warm air. The contraption included a fan attached to a long yellow flexible tube.

ENERGY RESEARCHER Ira Charak of Western Springs said the United States needs expansion of energy use to achieve an increased gross national product. Nuclear power is "clean, safe and cheap," he said.

"Massive social upheavals" can be expected if the United States fails to overcome energy problems, said engineer Robert Boyar of LaGrange. Boyar supported the nuclear breeder reactor for energy use.

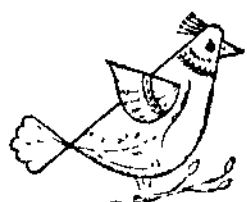

Windmills and other "appropriate technology" should be considered as alternatives to conventional energy resources, said Roger Heimer, representing the Community Action against Poverty energy program in Indianapolis, Ind. He called for alleviation of energy cost burdens on the poor, and constraints on energy-wasteful buildings.

Results from the town hall meetings in Chicago and nine other United States cities will be forwarded to the White House Office of Energy and Planning, for consideration in President Jimmy Carter's national energy plan to be announced April 20, N. Allen Anderson, regional FEA administrator, Chicago, said.

Town hall meetings also were held in Boston, New York City, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Kansas City, Denver, Dallas, San Francisco and Seattle. Summaries of the Chicago meeting will be available on request from the Chicago regional FEA office, Room A333, 175 W. Jackson, Chicago.

Violence in day of abductions

From Herald news services

A flurry of hostage-taking took place Monday in the United States and Canada. Three separate incidents occurred in Baltimore, Toronto, and Freeport, Ill. The Freeport case ended in death for the abductor.

Frank DeBoer, who held a Freeport policeman hostage and shot another one, died Monday of wounds sustained in a gun battle with state, county and local police.

DeBoer, 42, gave police 15 minutes to clear away from the home where he held Lt. Jack Munda hostage. He then raced from his home, shooting. DeBoer was shot in the head and chest. Munda was unharmed.

The gunman was admitted to Freeport Memorial Hospital, where he underwent surgery. He was later transferred to St. Anthony's Hospital in Rockford, where he died.

Kyle Kuhlmeier, the wounded policeman, was in good condition with wounds in the hand, foot and leg.

IN TORONTO, a self-described former mercenary in the Congo held three bank employees and a police sergeant hostage at gunpoint, demanding a C-130 Hercules to fly him to Uganda to meet his "pal" President Idi Amin. The man, who identified himself as Bob McLagan, 38, of Vancouver, released 11 other hostages unharmed in the first few hours of the stand-off with police at the downtown Bank Canadian National. The gunman was holding employees Luc Loiselle, Pierre Chaisson, Michel Plouffe, and Police Sgt. Bill Donaldson at the point of a 12-gauge shotgun. The department of National Defense said there were Hercules C-130s at the Canadian Forces Base in suburban Downsview, but refused to say if the planes would be used. Police were continuing to negotiate with the gunman.

IN BALTIMORE, a security guard put down his two guns and machete three hours after taking his eight children, his wife, and about 35 others hostage in a city office. The man, identified as Anthony Griffin, released all but a few of the hostages shortly after the takeover of the Department of Social Services. He surrendered at 6 p.m. Police said "no deals" were made with Griffin.

Gas tax, drivers' fees hike urged

State officials Monday were urged to increase the state gas tax 4 cents a gallon, boost license plate fees an average of 58 per cent, nearly double the cost of driver's licenses and place a 1 per cent surcharge on new car purchases.

The recommendations, which could give the state more than $370 million in new revenue, are needed to continue the state's road maintenance program, according to the Illinois Transportation Study Commission.

The panel's recommendations will increase the state gas tax from 7.5 cents a gallon to 11.5 cents. License plates for small cars would go from $18 to $30 and large car plates, would jump from $30 to $45.

The commission also called for increasing the cost of driver's licenses from $8 to $15 and adding a 1 per cent surcharge to the purchase price of new cars.

THE COMMISSION'S report will be sent to Gov. James R. Thompson and the Illinois General Assembly for action. In the past, the commission's recommendations for tax increases and transportation plans have been adopted by the legislature.

Thompson for months has been talking publicly about an increase in the gas tax and license fees and has admitted his discussion of the subject represents a "trial balloon."

He also has urged the legislature to start talking about increases, but has stopped short of formally proposing them.

Fred A. Schoenfeld, executive director of the commission, said the increases are designed to produce only enough money to continue maintenance and resurfacing programs on existing roads during the next 20 years.

The commission also formally recommended a modified supplemental free way system be built and financed through the sale during the next 20 years of $4.4 billion worth of bonds.

The proposal calls for further increases in the gas tax — starting at half cent a gallon and climbing to at least 3 cents — to pay off the bonds.

U.S. troops to leave South Korea

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter told Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda Monday that United States ground troops will be withdrawn from South Korea, Japanese diplomatic sources said.

Carter said the United States still will honor its obligations to defend South Korea, the sources said, and he promised that the withdrawals will be worked out in close consultation with the Japanese and the South Korean governments without undermining security on the Korean peninsula.

The discussion came during the first of two days of talks between Carter and the Japanese leader, who received a warm welcome and a 19-gun salute on his arrival at the White House.

PRESIDENTIAL PRESS Sec. Jody Powell said the Korean situation was discussed between the two leaders, but he gave no details.

No timetable for withdrawal of U.S. forces from South Korea was discussed, the sources said. Fukuda stressed during the 90-minute session,

Japanese sources said, that the security of the Korean peninsula was vital to Japan and East Asia.

"The President also expressed a similar opinion," one source said.

But, he added, "President Carter said, regarding the reduction of American troops in South Korea, that the United States would proceed with it without damaging peace in the Korean peninsula."

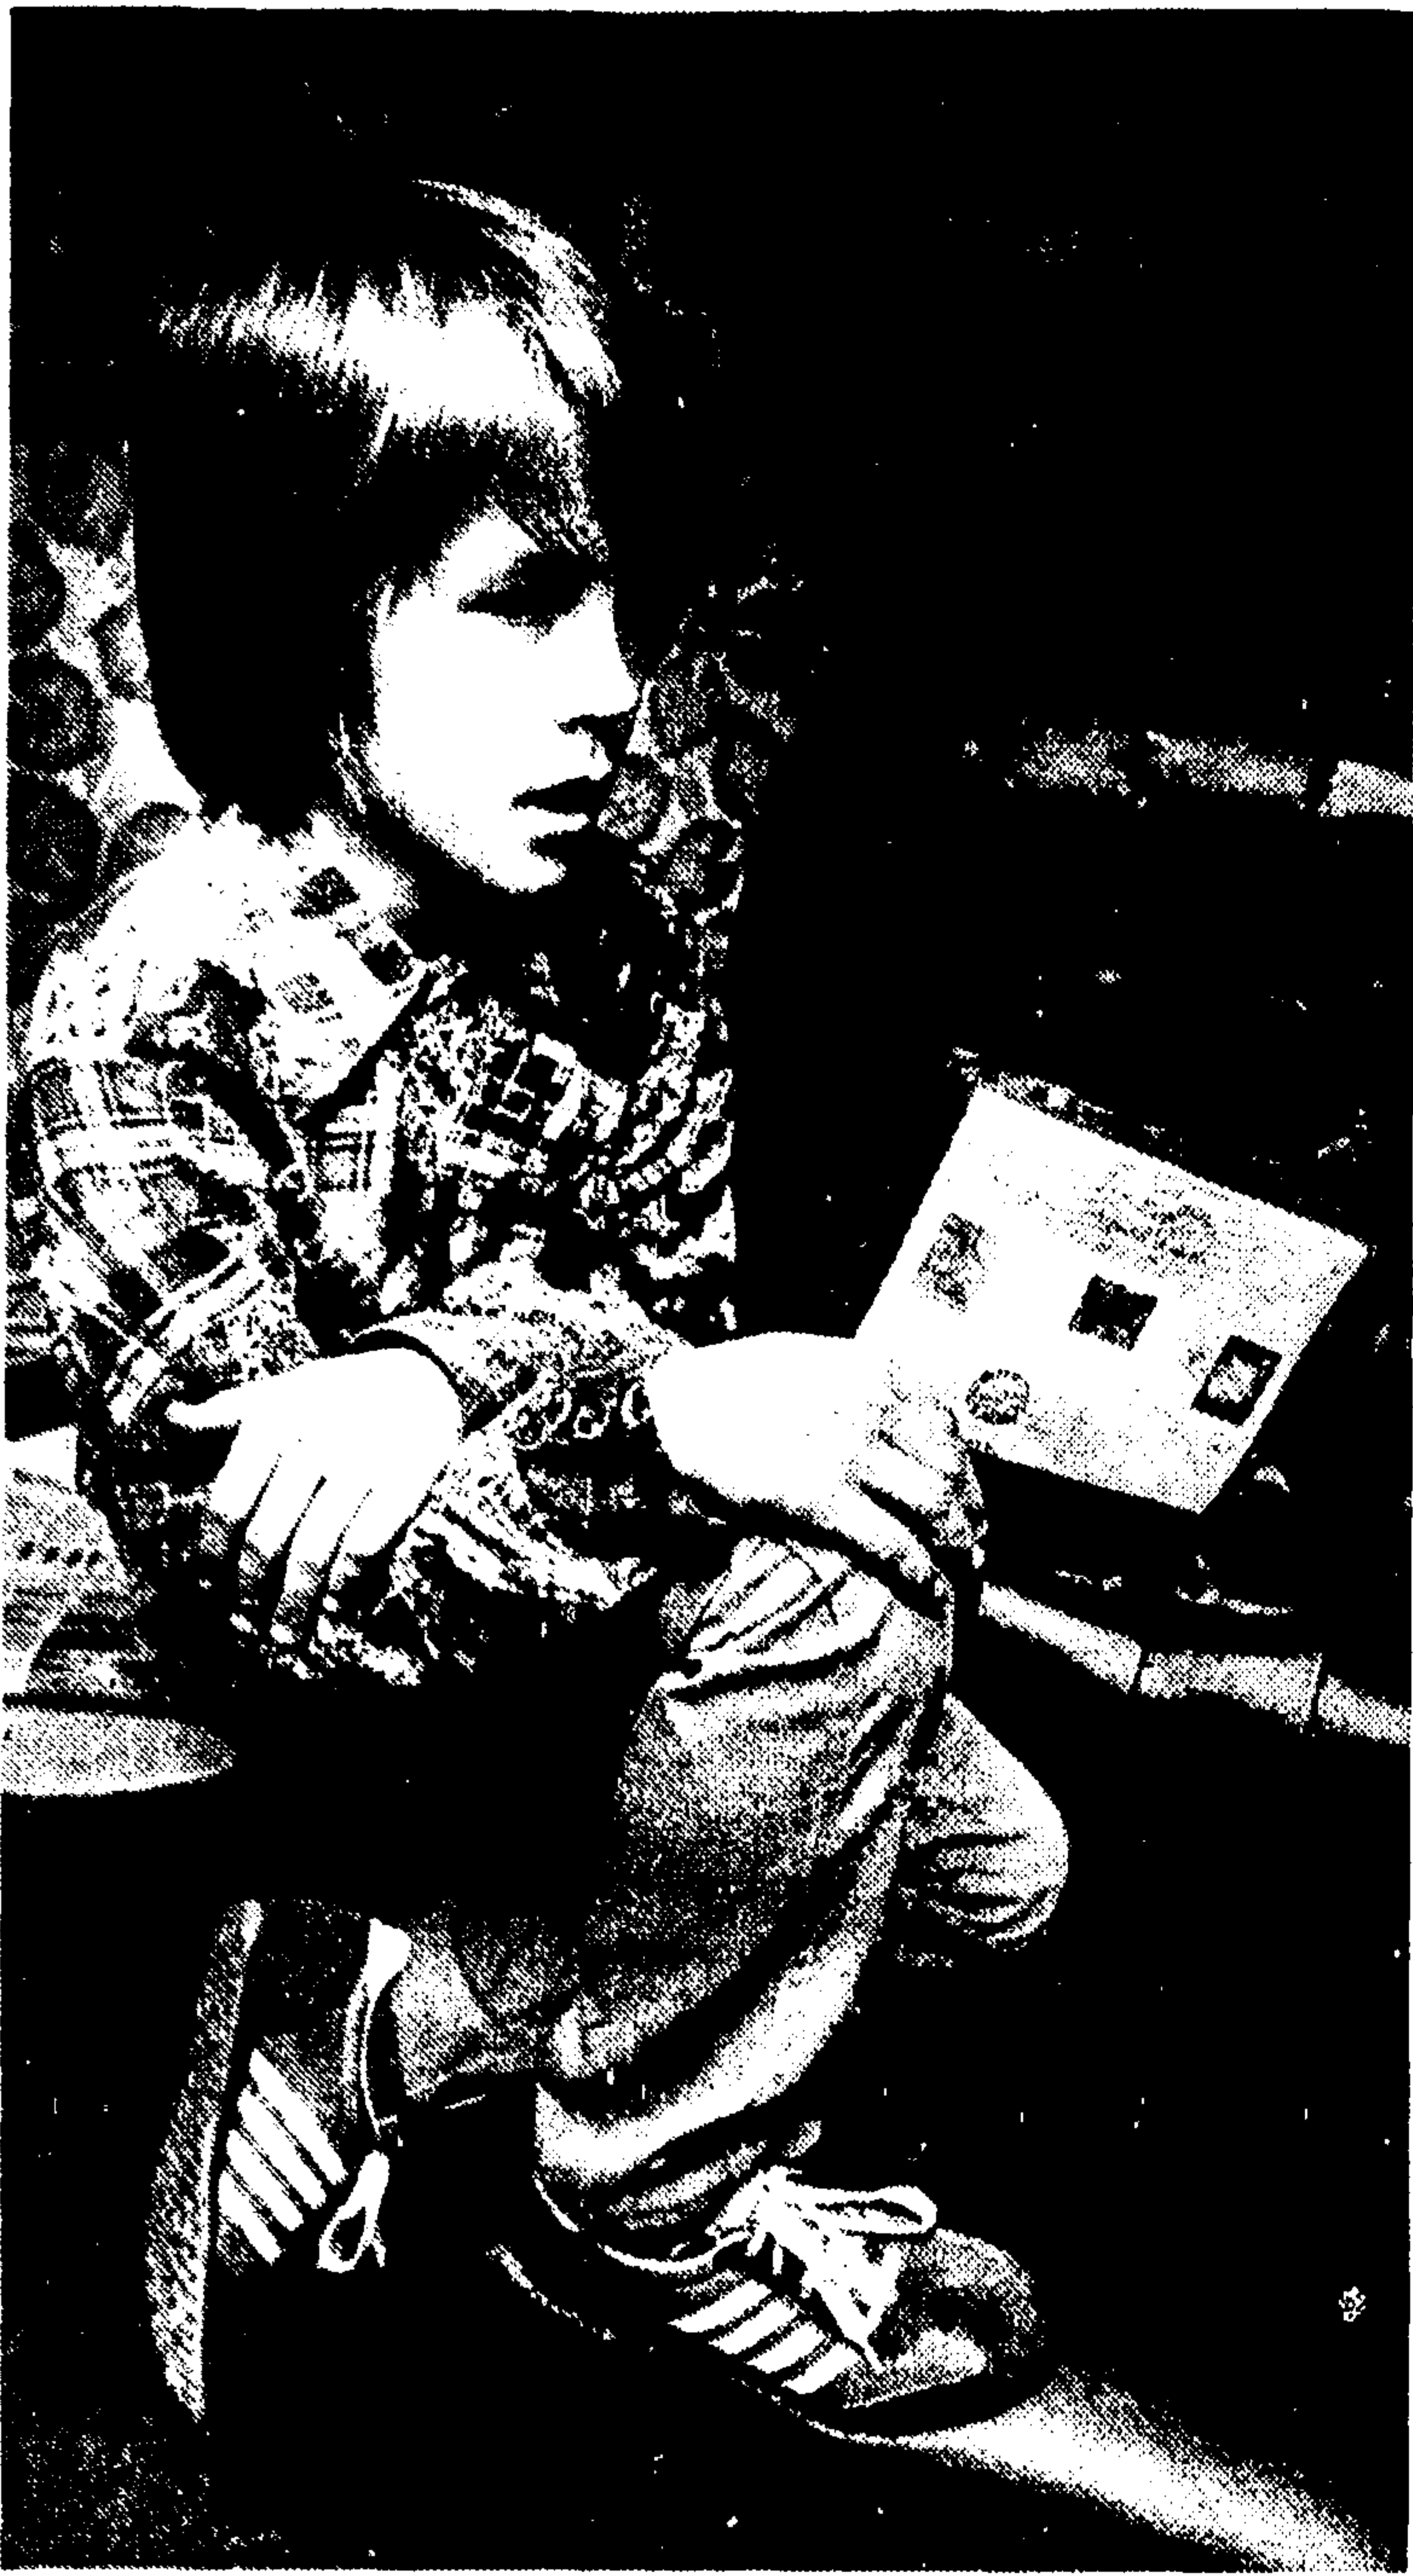

The United States has 40,000 servicemen in South Korea. Although ground troops will be removed, the sources said, about 7,000 Air Force personnel will remain.

Both Fukuda and Carter favored an early resumption of talks between South and North Korea, the sources said, and believed that "it is desirable that unification of South and North Korea be achieved through peaceful means."

CARTER ALSO declared that the United States "will maintain a presence in Asia and observe commitments made in the past." (Continued on Page 3)

Wrong turn in the mail sends Yule card to Poland

TOMMY FRICK, 10, of Hoffman Estates and the Christmas card that ended up in Warsaw, Poland, instead of New Orleans.

For three months, 10-year-old Tom Frick wondered why his friend didn't respond to the Christmas card.

Now he knows. His friend never got it.

It ended up in Poland instead.

Tom mailed the card at the Hoffman Estates Post Office Dec. 12, but the story really began earlier than that. It began late last spring when his friend Tommy Traina moved away.

THEY HAD BEEN friends for about five of six years at Lakeview School, Hoffman Estates. They got to know each other well at school even though they didn't play together too much after school. Tom lived at 237 Alcoa Ln. in Hoffman Estates but young Traina lived on the other side of Bode Road.

But Traina did know that Tom likes to collect beer cans, so when his family moved to New Orleans last spring, Tommy Traina promised to send Tom some new cans for his collection.

No beer cans or letters ever came.

Six or seven months passed, and in early December, Tom started making out his Christmas cards. There were just three or four friends on his list. He hadn't forgotten about young Traina, and he decided to try to send one to him.

HE SELECTED THE card, enclosed a recent school photo and included a little note, wishing young Traina a happy Christmas and asking him to send his address so he could write to him.

But Tom didn't know the address,

so he wrote, Tommy Traina, 217 Western, Hoffman Estates, Ill. 60194, and below, he advised, "Please forward." On the back of the envelope, he wrote the return address and attached three Christmas stickers.

He has used the "please forward" procedure a couple of other times, Tom says, and he just assumed it would get to his friend.

"I do that all the time," adds his mother, Linda Frick.

March 8, the unopened envelope was wrapped in a clear plastic bag and back in the Frick's mail box. He turned the envelope over and saw the "Warszawa" postmark, which means Warsaw in Polish. At the bottom of the bag was a small note in Polish that the family still hasn't been able to decipher.

"I guess after it went to Poland, and it came back to the United States, people in the United States assumed the stickers were Polish stamps, and that's why it got back," Mrs. Frick says.

She phoned the post office to try to find out what went wrong.

The postal clerk was as amazed as she was that it had gone all the way behind the Iron Curtain. "For 13 cents, it should never have gone overseas," he said.

New parks chief vows open door

by PAUL GORES

New Salt Creek Park Director John Turausky Monday said he knew he was stepping into a controversy when he accepted the director's job, and he pledged to restore an open administration to the park district.

Turausky, 37, of Northbrook, was appointed director last week after nearly a month of controversy prompted by the park board's one-day dismissal of former director James DeVos. He will begin the job March 28.

has happened in another district."

TURAUSKY SAID HE had a list of questions to ask the commissioners at the time of his interview. He said he was apprehensive about the job "until they (the commissioners) answered the questions that had to be asked."

On Feb. 18, the board gave DeVos a one-day notice to clear out of his office and the locks on the office building were changed. DeVos had submitted his resignation in January, following disputes with the park board about management of the park district and his office hours.

The board's refusal to explain adequately the one-day dismissal sparked protests and complaints about the board. Park Board Pres. Walter Peppel since has said the board was not satisfied with DeVos' handling of administrative duties. Peppel has not gone into the specifics publicly.

Turausky said he is not worried about charges by some residents that the park board had been too dictatorial with DeVos and other employees.

"THERE IS A JOB to be done and I have every confidence that the board has hired me to do that job and will give me the authority to do it," Turausky said.

"That door (his office) is open and it's going to remain open," Turausky said. "I may not have the answer to every question on the tip of my tongue, but I'll be honest and tell you if I don't know. Then I'll find the answer and get back to you. It's part of my job to let the people know what's going on and to find out how they feel about things."

Turausky has spent the past 17½ years with parks and recreation. He was recreation supervisor with the Park Ridge Park District for the last 1½ years and also worked for the Chicago and Northbrook park districts. He will make $15,000 as director of the Salt Creek Rural Park District.

Turausky said one of the important tasks he faces is formulation of a budget.

"Part of the problem we're facing in the administration part of it is that they've been without a director," Turausky said. "In the past few weeks there has been very little done. We've got to keep the programs going and get a feel for what the people want."

TURAUSKY SAID HE already has his staff preparing budget recommendations.

"I've been reading all morning — minutes of meetings, program activities, everything I can," he said. "Until I can really review what has been done," he could not predict what new directions and programs the district will pursue.

"A lot of that depends on the people themselves," Turausky said. "We'll have to see how they feel and what they want to do."

Deputy wants shooting range built

A Cook County sheriff's deputy wants to build a shooting range in Elk Grove Township where police officers, security guards and others could learn how to handle firearms.

Harold Butz, of Bensenville, a weapons instructor for the county, said his idea to build a public shooting range for training policemen is a "whole new idea" but "really what I want to see done."

The shooting range would be built on the north side of Old Higgins Road, just west of Busse Road. The building would be 6,500 square feet on each of two floors and would be built on land owned by Rudy Busse of Elk Grove Village.

BUT BUTZ first must get a special-use permit from the county zoning board of appeals because the land is zoned for industry. A hearing has been set tentatively for April 22.

The shooting range would have 18 stalls, Butz said. A team of certified weapons instructors would be available to teach, and police departments could rent out some stalls, Butz said.

He said a "majority of police departments in the area" have shown interest but have not made commitments. "I don't want commitments until I get the zoning taken care of," he said.

At least half of the shooting range's business should come from police

BUTZ SAID THERE are no nearby residents who would be disturbed by the facility.

"When it comes to security or personal safety, there's no compromise," he said. "When I talk about qualified people, I don't mean only to instruct, but to make sure it's 102 per cent safe."

Godawa takes vote competition in stride

by RUTH MUGALIAN

Some fierce-looking dogs have greeted Lorraine Godawa on her door-to-door campaign for 3rd Ward alderman. And she's faced some pretty fierce weather, too.

But these obstacles are minor compared to the one Godawa encountered this weekend. Previously unopposed, Godawa discovered Saturday that she now has competition from write-in candidate Frank Shea, 34, of 4509 Magnolia Dr.

"It's a good thing I was ready and willing to work this hard," Godawa said, before setting out for a Sunday afternoon walking her ward. "Otherwise I'd really have to scramble now."

THOUGH SHE had been running unopposed in her first bid for public office, Godawa already had a busy campaign schedule. She is going door to door herself and will be followed by campaign workers.

As Godawa goes through the ward, she is winning friends by campaigning against the proposed unit school district that would take Elk Grove and Arlington Heights high schools out of High School Dist. 214. Godawa and others say it will strip Dist. 214 of its tax base and hurt Rolling Meadows High School.

Although it is not a city issue and Rolling Meadows residents currently have no say, Godawa feels they can "exert pressure by making their opposition known."

Godawa says she did not originally plan to use the unit district issue as a campaign tool, but she admits that it has helped her a great deal.

"Nobody in Rolling Meadows is for it," she said. "It can only hurt us. I've been working on it since summer and I feel I'm performing a service by giving people the facts on it. But it really does help my campaign."

GODAWA GREETED her neighbors with a standard, but slightly nervous campaign pitch: "Hi, I'm Lorrie Go-dawa and I'm running for alderman in the ward here. I'd appreciate a consideration of your vote."

But she relaxes as the questions come.

"What can a woman do on the city council?" asked an elderly woman with a Norwegian accent.

"I can do as well, if not better, than any man on the council," Godawa shot back.

"Are you married?" the woman asked.

"I have three children. One is in college and two are in high school."

THE WOMAN interrupted her. "Do you have a husband? You know nowadays they have the children without the husband."

Godawa laughed. "Yes, I've been married 21 years."

The woman then launched into a list of complaints and questions, including how to go about getting her driveway repaired. Godawa listened patiently, taking notes.

"Someone will get back to you this week," she said. "That's a promise."

"I'M GOING TO vote for you," the woman replied.

At another door, she found a piece of Shea's literature attached to the knob. She hung her own campaign brochure over it.

"There, now I'm in front of you," she said, smiling. "And I'm going to stay in front of you."

Apartments charge extra for kids

by PAUL GORES

A new rental policy at Twelve Oaks Apartments in Arlington Heights requires parents to pay $15 extra in monthly rent for each child living with them. But the new owner of the apartments says the surcharge is not meant to discriminate against families.

Michael Sparks of Sparks & Co., Des Plaines, confirmed Monday that in addition to the $315 rent for a two-bedroom apartment, couples will be charged $15 for every other person living in the apartment as they renew their lease. Sparks said the surcharge is to offset the increasing cost of utilities.

But some residents of the apartment complex, including Nancy Mannaberg, say they believe the surcharge is an attempt to drive families out of the complex.

"THEY'VE GOT TO find some way to get rid of at least most of us," Mrs. Mannaberg said.

Mrs. Mannaberg, a mother of two, said the new management is trying to drive families out by increasing the price because Sparks & Co. found that not renewing leases to persons with children is illegal.

Casey Warner, manager of the apartments, said the new management had hoped to convert Twelve Oaks, 1217 S. Wilco Rd., into an "adults only" complex. He said the firm gave up the idea when their attorney found an Illinois statute that prohibits discrimination against renters with children.

A woman with two children who asked not to be named said her lease expires this spring and said she is upset about the Twelve Oaks policy.

THIS IS OUR fourth year and we fully expected to be here next year," she said. "This is really ridiculous. I think they are still discriminating against children."

"We didn't raise it to get the kids out," Sparks said. "It's because of the additional cost of utilities because of the additional people."

Sparks said he is worried about vandalism at the apartments.

"Whenever you have a significant number of young people you're going to have more vandalism than with all adults," Sparks said. He said he believes townhomes are more suited to families than the apartment complex.

HE CITED A lake on the grounds of the complex as a reason he believes the apartments are not safe for small children.

"I don't think any reasonable person would feel it (Twelve Oaks) was built to deal with kids," Sparks said.

Sparks said he has talked with some residents at the 468-unit complex about the $15 surcharge.

"I've just come to the conclusion they figure if they get enough publicity maybe they can get something for nothing," he said. "You can't please all of the people all of the time."

David Schucker of the Leadership Council of Metropolitan Chicago which deals with legalities in housing problems, said the $15 surcharge is not illegal, but it "violates the spirit of the law."

"BY CHARGING more, they are not refusing to rent," Schucker said. Schucker said a 1909 state law that says landlords cannot refuse to rent to persons with children is rarely enforced.

Arlington Heights police have arrested two Northwest suburban teens for the theft of a car.

Police arrested Jeffrey C. Knickrehm, 17, of 5450 Astor Ln., Rolling Meadows, and a 15-year-old Arlington Heights youth late Friday after police reported they stole a car owned by Charles J. O'Brien of Wauconda.

O'Brien had parked his car in the lot at 2010 S. Arlington Heights Rd., and had left the keys in the ignition, police said. He went into the building, and when he came out at 10:50 p.m. he saw the youths driving his car away, police said.

A squad car later spotted the stolen auto westbound on White Oak Street near Princeton Avenue, and gave chase, police said. Police said the youths drove the car into a field, jumped out and fled on foot.

The youths were arrested by another policeman at 10:55 p.m. Friday near Victoria Lane between Fernandez and Highland avenues.

The 15-year-old was turned over to his parents pending processing by the police juvenile division. Knickrehm was charged with auto theft, and was released after he posted $500 bail on a $5,000 bond to await trial in the Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Students take reins, urge bicycle law

Students from Fremd High School became village leaders for a while Monday night and proposed passage of a tough new bicycle safety ordinance that would allow police to ticket bike law violators.

Students from Fremd's student council elected representatives to serve as village president, village clerk and various village department heads during Palatine's observance of student government day. The students spent the day with their village counterparts Monday.

The day culminated with the students enacting and staging their own village board meeting and adopting the bike ordinance, which they wrote and presented.

THE BIKE ORDINANCE includes provisions for three-year registration of all bikes in the village.

The ordinance also proposes regulations calling for riders to travel single-file, observe all traffic signals, ride on sidewalks where they are available if the rider is 7 years old or younger, park so as not to impede pedestrians and observe safe speeds.

The measure also calls for police to ticket offenders of the ordinance and required that they attend a special bike film to be set up by the village police department.

Persons under 17 who fail to attend the film showing would be referred to the youth officer. Persons over 17 would be issued a ticket to appear in court and face a $25 fine.

THE ORDINANCE ALSO would give police the power to impound for 14 days the bicycles of persons who fail to appear in court or disregard the meeting with the youth officer.

The ordinance, adopted by the students, will be referred to the village health, safety and welfare committee for consideration later by the village board.

Violence in day of abductions

From Herald news services

A flurry of hostage-taking took place Monday in the United States and Canada. Three separate incidents occurred in Baltimore, Toronto, and Freeport, Ill. The Freeport case ended in death for the abductor.

Frank DeBoer, who held a Freeport policeman hostage and shot another one, died Monday of wounds sustained in a gun battle with state, county and local police.

DeBoer, 42, gave police 15 minutes to clear away from the home where he held Lt. Jack Munda hostage. He then raced from his home, shooting. DeBoer was shot in the head and chest. Munda was unharmed.

The gunman was admitted to Freeport Memorial Hospital, where he underwent surgery. He was later transferred to St. Anthony's Hospital in Rockford, where he died.

Kyle Kuhlmeier, the wounded policeman, was in good condition with wounds in the hand, foot and leg.

IN TORONTO, a self-described former mercenary in the Congo held three bank employees and a police sergeant hostage at gunpoint, demanding a C-130 Hercules to fly him to Uganda to meet his "pal" President Idi Amin.

The man, who identified himself as Bob McLagan, 38, of Vancouver, released 11 other hostages unharmed in the first few hours of the stand-off with police at the downtown Bank Canadian National. The gunman was holding employees Luc Loiselle, Pierre Chaisson, Michel Plouffe, and Police Sgt. Bill Donaldson at the point of a 12-gauge shotgun. The department of National Defense said there were Hercules C-130s at the Canadian Forces Base in suburban Downsview, but refused to say if the planes would be used. Police were continuing to negotiate with the gunman.

IN BALTIMORE, a security guard put down his two guns and machete three hours after taking his eight children, his wife, and about 35 others hostage in a city office. The man, identified as Anthony Griffin, released all but a few of the hostages shortly after the takeover of the Department of Social Services. He surrendered at 6 p.m.

Police said "no deals" were made with Griffin.

DOZENS OF CITIZENS had their say on critical energy issues at a town meeting Monday in Chicago. A panel of Federal

Energy Administration representatives listened to comments during the day-long meeting at the Illinois Institute of Technology campus on the city's South Side.

Satellites to windmills touted at energy forum

by LEA TONKIN

Ideas ranging from cosmic energy to satellites in outer space collecting the sun's rays were offered as solutions Monday to energy problems discussed at a Federal Energy Administration town meeting in Chicago.

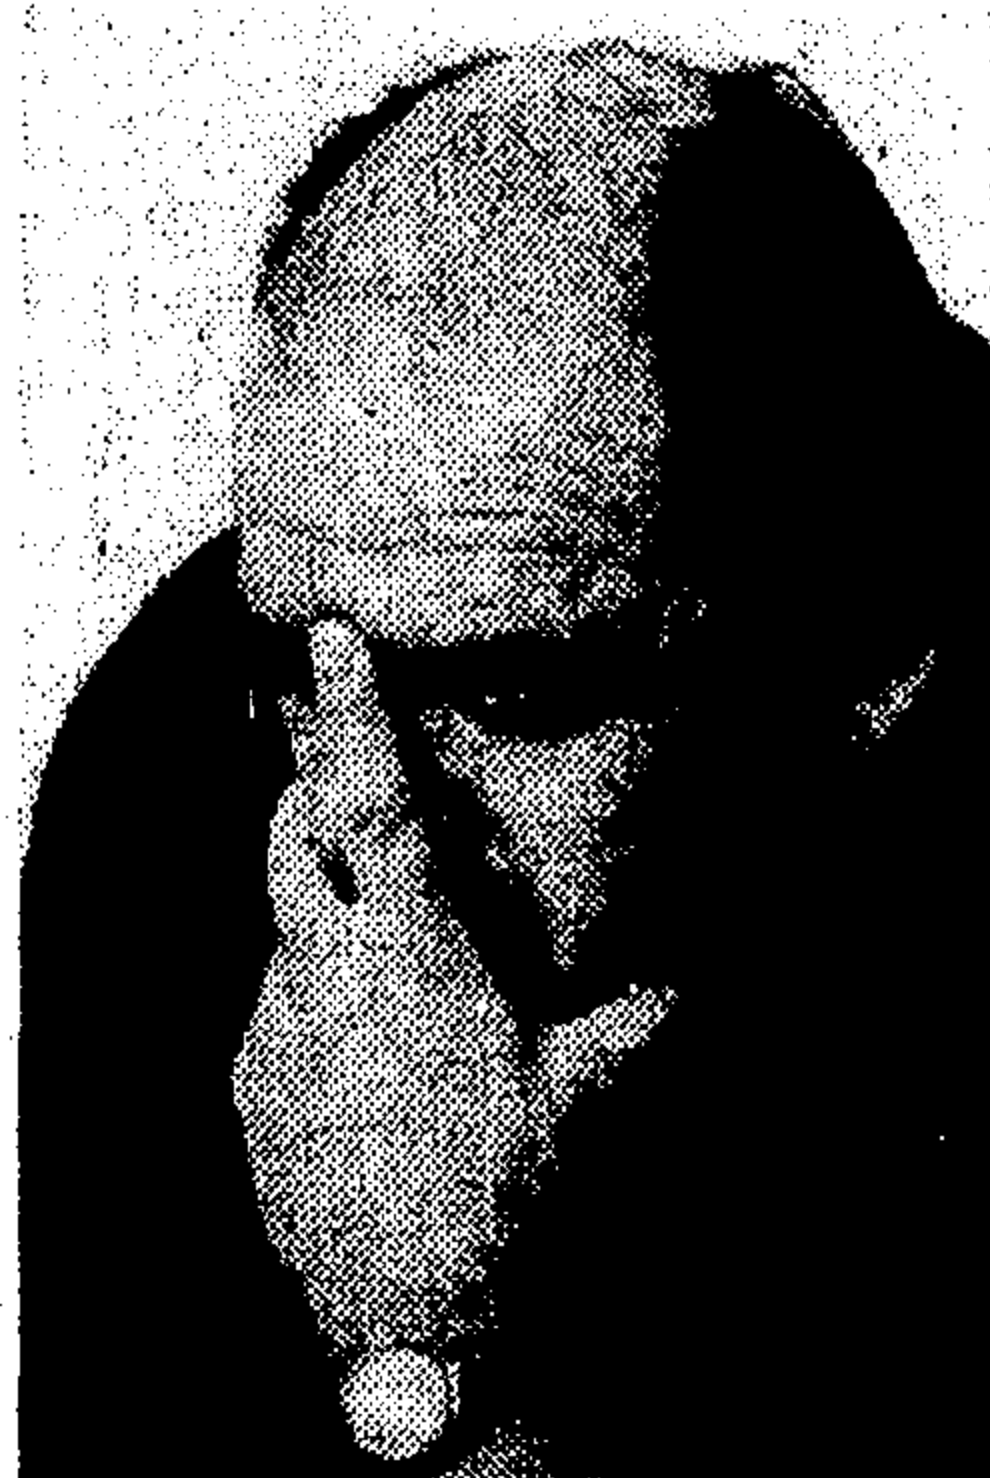

Call for ideas from people who believe they can help solve the nation's energy problems, the agency invited the public to a forum at the Illinois Institute of Technology campus in Chicago. Residents from Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio and Wisconsin were invited to offer their views on energy issues.

Consumers, salesmen, industry executives and environmental activists took the opportunity to sound off about national energy policy.

LEADING OFF the discussion, William Reeve of Palatine called for long-term solutions to United States energy shortage problems and less government regulation of prices and supply. As vice president, secretary and general manager of Chemplex Co., Rolling Meadows, Reeve favors conservation programs and increased development of coal and nuclear energy.

Hefty consumer savings in home heating costs would be possible if the government stressed energy conservation in building materials, said Naperville resident John Orava. He criticized federal housing agencies, which he said seem to be unaware of energy efficient building materials and outdated building codes.

Cosmic energy was on Jerome Fornek's mind when he tried to sell the concept to the government. But "stupid procedures" make it difficult for creative people in the energy development field to make a buck, Fornek told the FEA panel. Cosmic rays are atomic particles from outer space which enter the earth's atmosphere at high speed.

Potential safety problems in automatic furnace dampers should be overcome as one solution to home energy conservation problems, said Victor Algnin, a Chicago resident. Algnin also favors development of satellite solar systems which could capture the sun's rays as an energy resource.

Another self-proclaimed energy conservation specialist, Dave Hale of Hickory Hills offered a demonstration of fans that circulate warm air. The contraption included a fan attached to a long yellow flexible tube.

ENERGY RESEARCHER Ira Charak of Western Springs said the United States needs expansion of energy use to achieve an increased gross national product. Nuclear power is "clean, safe and cheap," he said.

"Massive social upheavals" can be expected if the United States fails to overcome energy problems, said engineer Robert Boyar of LaGrange. Boyar supported the nuclear breeder reactor for energy use.

Windmills and other "appropriate technology" should be considered as alternatives to conventional energy resources, said Roger Heimer, representing the Community Action against Poverty energy program in Indianapolis, Ind. He called for alleviation of energy cost burdens on the poor, and constraints on energy-wasteful buildings.

Results from the town hall meetings in Chicago and nine other United States cities will be forwarded to the White House Office of Energy and Planning, for consideration in President Jimmy Carter's national energy plan to be announced April 20, N. Allen Anderson, regional FEA administrator, Chicago, said.

Town hall meetings also were held in Boston, New York City, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Kansas City, Denver, Dallas, San Francisco and Seattle. Summaries of the Chicago meeting will be available on request from the Chicago regional FEA office, Room A333, 175 W. Jackson, Chicago.

Gas tax, drivers' fees hike urged

State officials Monday were urged to increase the state gas tax 4 cents a gallon, boost license plate fees an average of 58 per cent, nearly double the cost of driver's licenses and place a 1 per cent surcharge on new car purchases.

The recommendations, which could give the state more than $370 million in new revenue is needed to continue the state's road maintenance program, according to the Illinois Transportation Study Commission.

The panel's recommendations will increase the state gas tax from 7.5 cents a gallon to 11.5 cents. License plates for small cars would go from $18 to $30 and large car plates would jump from $30 to $45.

The commission also called for increasing the cost of driver's licenses from $8 to $15 and adding a 1 per cent surcharge to the purchase price of new cars.

THE COMMISSION'S report will be sent to Gov. James R. Thompson and the Illinois General Assembly for action. In the past, the commission's recommendations for tax increases and transportation plans have been adopted by the legislature.

Thompson for months has been talking publicly about an increase in the gas tax and license fees and has admitted his discussion of the subject represents a "trial balloon."

He also has urged the legislature to start talking about increases, but has stopped short of formally proposing them himself.

Fred A. Schoenfeld, executive director of the commission, said the increases are designed to produce only enough money to continue maintenance and resurfacing programs on existing roads during the next 20 years.

The commission also formally recommended a modified supplemental free way system be built and financed through the sale during the next 20 years of $4.4 billion worth of bonds.

The proposal calls for further increases in the gas tax — starting at half cent a gallon and climbing to at least 3 cents — to pay off the bonds.

U.S. troops to leave South Korea

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter told Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda Monday that United States ground troops will be withdrawn from South Korea, Japanese diplomatic sources said.

Carter said the United States still will honor its obligations to defend South Korea, the sources said, and he promised that the withdrawals will be worked out in close consultation with the Japanese and the South Korean governments without undermining security on the Korean peninsula.

The discussion came during the first of two days of talks between Carter and the Japanese leader, who received a warm welcome and a 19-gun salute on his arrival at the White House.

PRESIDENTIAL PRESS Sec. Jody Powell said the Korean situation was discussed between the two leaders, but he gave no details.

No timetable for withdrawal of U. S. forces from South Korea was discussed, the sources said. Fukuda stressed during the 90-minute session,

Japanese sources said, that the security of the Korean peninsula was vital to Japan and East Asia.

"The President also expressed a similar opinion," one source said.

But, he added, "President Carter said, regarding the reduction of American troops in South Korea, that the United States would proceed with it without damaging peace in the Korean peninsula."

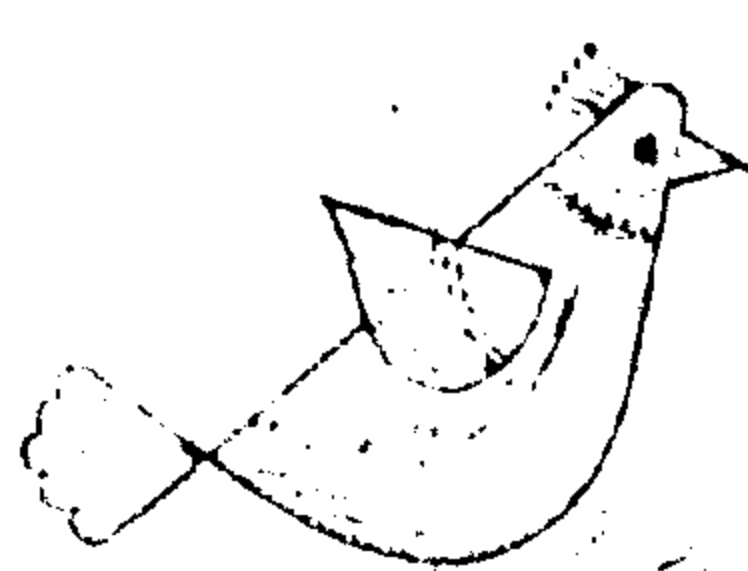

The United States has 40,000 servicemen in South Korea. Although ground troops will be removed, the sources said, about 7,000 Air Force personnel will remain.

Both Fukuda and Carter favored an early resumption of talks between South and North Korea, the sources said, and believed that "it is desirable that unification of South and North Korea be achieved through peaceful means."

CARTER ALSO declared that the United States "will maintain a presence in Asia and observe commitments made in the past," the

Wrong turn in the mail sends Yule card to Poland

TOMMY FRICK, 10, of Hoffman Estates and the Christmas card that ended up in Warsaw, Poland, instead of New Orleans.

For three months, 10-year-old Tom Frick wondered why his friend didn't respond to the Christmas card.

Now he knows. His friend never got it.

It ended up in Poland instead. Tom mailed the card at the Hoffman Estates Post Office Dec. 12, but the story really began earlier than that. It began late last spring when his friend Tommy Traina moved away.

THEY HAD BEEN friends for about five of six years at Lakeview School, Hoffman Estates. They got to know each other well at school even though they didn't play together too much after school. Tom lived at 237 Alcoa Ln. in Hoffman Estates but young Traina lived on the other side of Bode Road.

But Traina did know that Tom likes to collect beer cans, so when his family moved to New Orleans last spring, Tommy Traina promised to send Tom some new cans for his collection.

No beer cans or letters ever came.

Six or seven months passed, and in early December, Tom started making out his Christmas cards. There were just three or four friends on his list. He hadn't forgotten about young Traina, and he decided to try to send one to him.

HE SELECTED THE card, enclosed a recent school photo and included a little note, wishing young Traina a happy Christmas and asking him to send his address so he could write to him.

But Tom didn't know the address,

so he wrote, Tommy Traina, 217 Western, Hoffman Estates, Ill. 60194, and below, he advised, "Please forward." On the back of the envelope, he wrote the return address and attached three Christmas stickers.

He has used the "please forward" procedure a couple of other times, Tom says, and he just assumed it would get to his friend.

"I do that all the time," adds his mother, Linda Frick.

AN OFFICIAL AT THE Hoffman Estates Post Office says the letter should have been forwarded. The only way he can see that it ended up in Poland, he says, is that if it got slipped into the wrong sack somewhere along the line.

March 8, the unopened envelope was wrapped in a clear plastic bag and back in the Frick's mail box. He turned the envelope over and saw the "Warszawa" postmark, which means Warsaw in Polish. At the bottom of the bag was a small note in Polish that the family still hasn't been able to decipher.

"I guess after it went to Poland, and it came back to the United States, people in the United States assumed the stickers were Polish stamps, and that's why it got back," Mrs. Frick says.

She phoned the post office to try to find out what went wrong.

The postal clerk was as amazed as she was that it had gone all the way behind the Iron Curtain. "For 13 cents, it should never have gone overseas," he said.

New parks chief vows open door

by PAUL GORES

New Salt Creek Park Director, John Turausky Monday said he knew he was stepping into a controversy when he accepted the director's job, and he pledged to restore an open administration to the park district.

Turausky, 37, of Northbrook, was appointed director last week after nearly a month of controversy prompted by the park board's one-day dismissal of former director James DeVos. He will begin the job March 28.

"I've been reading the papers," Turausky said. "And the professional grapevine of parks grows and grows so it doesn't take long to find out what has happened in another district."

TURAUSKY SAID HE had a list of questions to ask the commissioners at the time of his interview. He said he was apprehensive about the job "until they (the commissioners) answered the questions that had to be asked."

On Feb. 18, the board gave DeVos a one-day notice to clear out of his office and the locks on the office building were changed. DeVos had submitted his resignation in January, following disputes with the park board about management of the park district and his office hours.

The board's refusal to explain adequately the one-day dismissal sparked protests and complaints about the board. Park Board Pres. Walter Pepper since has said the board was not satisfied with DeVos' handling of administrative duties. People has not gone into the specifics publicly.

Turausky said he is not worried about charges by some residents that the park board had been too dictatorial with DeVos and other employees.

"THERE IS A JOB to be done and I have every confidence that the board has hired me to do that job and will give me the authority to do it," Turausky said.

"That door (his office) is open and it's going to remain open," Turausky said. "I may not have the answer to every question on the tip of my tongue, but I'll be honest and tell you if I don't know. Then I'll find the answer and get back to you. It's part of my job to let the people know what's going on and to find out how they feel about things."

Turausky has spent the past 17½ years with parks and recreation. He was recreation supervisor with the Park Ridge Park District for the last 1½ years and also worked for the Chicago and Northbrook park districts. He will make $15,000 as director of the Salt Creek Rural Park District.

Turausky said one of the important tasks he faces is formulation of a budget.

Stop signs for Quentin-Illinois set

Four-way stop signs will be installed at Quentin Road and Illinois Avenue temporarily until permanent traffic signals are installed.

The signs will be installed by the Cook County Dept. of Highways, which has jurisdiction over the intersection. Permanent traffic signals will be installed as part of the county's project to widen Quentin Road.

Palatine officials have asked the county to install temporary stop signs because they said the intersection is dangerous.

In a letter to the village, Richard H. Goltzman, county superintendent of highways, said the stop signs will be installed as requested but he gave no date for the action.

No date has been set for start of the Quentin Road project.

Village officials said the traffic on Quentin Road and Illinois Avenue merited installation of stop signs at the intersection, especially since many high school students from Fremd High School must cross at the intersection. Fremd is at the southwest corner of the intersection.

Redevelopment law concerns residents

Residents from the North Central Palatine Neighborhood Assn. expressed concern Monday night that the recently adopted downtown redevelopment ordinance will lead to unwanted projects bordering their homes.

The residents spoke before the village planning, building and zoning committee. They were concerned about the proposed boundaries for downtown development, which they said includes several single-family homes.

The proposed boundaries for the area would be Wood Street on the north, Plum Grove Road on the east, Johnson Street on the south and Smith Street on the west.

The residents said they were worried that prospective developers could seek condemnation of property owned by residents if it is needed for their projects.

Village officials said the ordinance does not allow haphazard development but instead provides controls over the village's right to review and approve development before they go up.

The committee delayed action on defining boundaries for the proposed redevelopment area.

Panel OKs muffler repair shop

The committee recommended approval for Cheker Oil Co., 850 E. Northwest Hwy., to install a muffler repair shop at its location. The recommendation will be forwarded to the village board.

Bicycle safety talk at school Thursday

Palatine Police Chief Jerry Bratcher will speak at a Lake School bicycle safety program at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the school auditorium, 925 N. Rohlwing Rd., Palatine.

Winners of the bicycle safety poster contest will be announced and parent-teacher association officers for next year will be elected.

Maybe folks were a little skeptical about taking stock in America 200 years ago.

We were young. At war. With no experience.

And who knew if we'd ever pay back the money?

Well, 200 years have passed. And the U.S.

government has always paid in full. To the penny.

Now that's not a bad record.

In fact, you might say we're now a pretty well-established outfit to do business with.

So join the Payroll Savings Plan and save with today's Bicentennial issue of Series E Savings Bonds. It's easy. It's automatic.

And it's safe. After 200 years, you know we're here to stay.

Expense cuts key election issue: Krause

Curtailing village spending is the key issue in the 1977 Mount Prospect village election, mayoral candidate Carolyn H. Krause said Monday night.

Mrs. Krause, 38, criticized her opponents, Edward B. Rhea Jr. and Michael H. Minton, for supporting what she believes were unnecessary expenditures since their election to the village board in 1975. Mrs. Krause and trustees Minton and Rhea are running as independents.

"There were promises made by Mr. Rhea for district representation, to cut the density in half for a planned unit development and to curb the spiraling tax rate," Mrs. Krause told about 20 residents attending an informal coffee at the Gladstone Commons apartment complex, Algonquin Road near Dempster Street.

"MR. MINTON ALSO made promises to control spending and introduce new ordinances. Nothing has been done as far as efforts being made or ordinances introduced," she said.

Mrs. Krause, the first woman ever to seek election as mayor of Mount Prospect, accused Rhea and Minton of campaigning two years ago against runaway spending and then backing off on their promises once they were elected to the board.

"In the past two years my two opponents criticized other boards for spending," said Mrs. Krause, 204 S. George St. "After they were on, they did the same thing. They've increased water rates, real estate taxes and business licenses."

Mrs. Krause said library operations is one area in which spending could be cut back. She attacked both Minton's and Rhea's voting records in which they authorized a total of more than $250,000 for a computerized circulation system, new furniture and landscaping, all for the new Mount Prospect Public Library, 10 S. Emerson St.

"FROM THE FINEST paneling to butcher block seats . . . I'd love to have that in my home. Then we look at empty shelves. The priorities are all mixed up," Mrs. Krause said.

An advocate for a referendum to raise additional funds for library operations, Mrs. Krause said, "We should go the route of asking the people. That approach would get our priorities back in the right direction."

Mrs. Krause also denied charges that Rhea made against her last week that she, as chairman of the village zoning board of appeals since 1973, has been responsible for the construction of more than 1,000 new multi-family housing units in Mount Prospect.

"He didn't add up the thousands upon thousands I have turned down or the several hundred I approved for senior citizens," she said. "He didn't point out where I had no alternatives, where some property carries apartment zoning so I had no choice but to approve them."

He called for alleviation of energy cost burdens on the poor, and constraints on energy-wasteful buildings.

Results from the town hall meetings in Chicago and nine other United States cities will be forwarded to the White House Office of Energy and Planning, for consideration in President Jimmy Carter's national energy plan to be announced April 20, N. Allen Anderson, regional FEA administrator, Chicago, said.

Town hall meetings also were held in Boston, New York City, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Kansas City, Denver, Dallas, San Francisco and Seattle. Summaries of the Chicago meeting will be available on request from the Chicago regional FEA office, Room A333, 175 W. Jackson, Chicago.

Gas tax, drivers' fees hike urged

State officials Monday were urged to increase the state gas tax 4 cents a gallon, boost license plate fees an average of 58 per cent, nearly double the cost of driver's licenses and place a 1 per cent surcharge on new car purchases.

The recommendations, which could give the state more than $370 million in new revenue is needed to continue the state's road maintenance program, according to the Illinois Transportation Study Commission.

The panel's recommendations will increase the state gas tax from 7.5 cents a gallon to 11.5 cents. License plates for small cars would go from $18 to $30 and large car plates would jump from $30 to $45.

The commission also called for increasing the cost of driver's licenses from $8 to $15 and adding a 1 per cent surcharge to the purchase price of new cars.

THE COMMISSION'S report will be sent to Gov. James R. Thompson and the Illinois General Assembly for action. In the past, the commission's recommendations for tax increases and transportation plans have been adopted by the legislature.

Thompson for months has been talking publicly about an increase in the gas tax and license fees and has admitted his discussion of the subject represents a "trial balloon."

He also has urged the legislature to start talking about increases, but has stopped short of formally proposing them himself.

Fred A. Schoenfeld, executive director of the commission, said the increases are designed to produce only enough money to continue maintenance and resurfacing programs on existing roads during the next 20 years.

The commission also formally recommended a modified supplemental free way system be built and financed through the sale during the next 20 years of $4.4 billion worth of bonds.

The proposal calls for further increases in the gas tax — starting at half cent a gallon and climbing to at least 3 cents — to pay off the bonds.

U.S. troops to leave South Korea

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter told Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda Monday that United States ground troops will be withdrawn from South Korea, Japanese diplomatic sources said.

Carter said the United States still will honor its obligations to defend South Korea, the sources said, and he promised that the withdrawals will be worked out in close consultation with the Japanese and the South Korean governments without undermining security on the Korean peninsula.

The discussion came during the first of two days of talks between Carter and the Japanese leader, who received a warm welcome and a 19-gun salute on his arrival at the White House.

PRESIDENTIAL PRESS Sec. Jody Powell said the Korean situation was discussed between the two leaders, but he gave no details.

No timetable for withdrawal of U. S. forces from South Korea was discussed, the sources said. Fukuda stressed during the 90-minute session,

Japanese sources said, that the security of the Korean peninsula was vital to Japan and East Asia.

"The President also expressed a similar opinion," one source said.

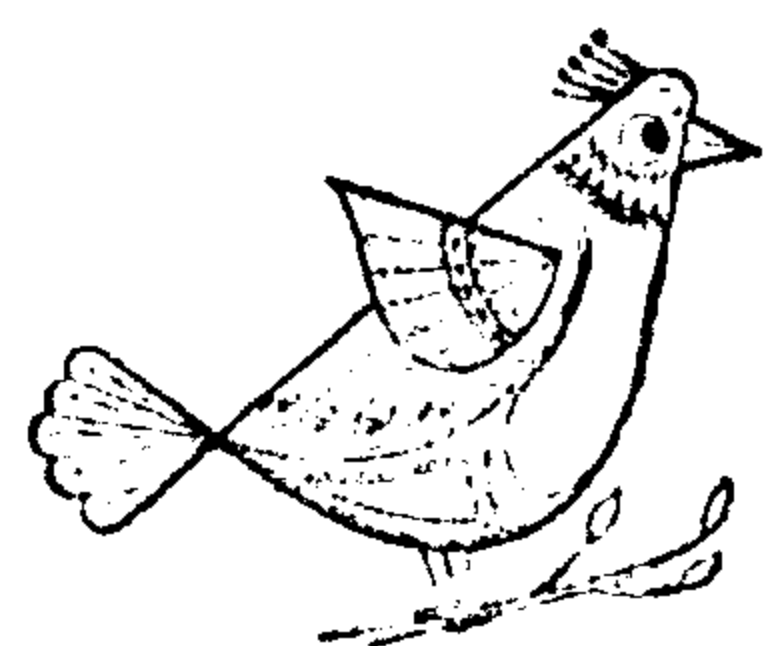

But, he added, "President Carter said, regarding the reduction of American troops in South Korea, that the United States would proceed with it without damaging peace in the Korean peninsula."

The United States has 40,000 servicemen in South Korea. Although ground troops will be removed, the sources said, about 7,000 Air Force personnel will remain.

Both Fukuda and Carter favored an early resumption of talks between South and North Korea, the sources said, and believed that "it is desirable that unification of South and North Korea be achieved through peaceful means."

Involuntary annex for Liebling

Prospect Heights Monday capped a three-month tug-of-war with Wheeling by annexing the 40-acre Liebling property at Willow and Wheeling roads.

Little discussion preceded the vote which received unanimous approval from the city council.

"Is this an involuntary annexation?" a member of the audience asked.

"Very much so," City Atty. Donald Kreger said.

THE ANNEXATION was involuntary because owner Arnold Liebling of Chicago said he wanted to annex to Wheeling.

Liebling built sewer and water lines to hook up with Wheeling utilities after the village annexed the site in 1971.

That annexation was invalidated by an Illinois Appellate Court in September because Wheeling only touched the site at one corner.

THE COURT ruled the property must be contiguous to the village in a voluntary annexation, meaning the village must touch more than just one point.

Wheeling attempted to reannex the property again in January. However, Prospect Heights successfully secured a court injunction to block the action until the Illinois Supreme Court handed down a decision on Wheeling's appeal of the appellate court decision.

The Supreme Court turned down Wheeling's appeal and Cook County

Circuit Court made the injunction permanent. A temporary injunction placed on Prospect Heights was lifted at that time, freeing the city to annex the property.

Wheeling can appeal the permanent injunction, Kreger said.

The property was zoned in Cook County for single-family half-acre lots. The Prospect Heights zoning ordinance now under consideration would retain that zoning.

ILLINOIS STATUTES allow involuntary annexation of property under 60 acres by a city contiguous to it.

The council also considered applying for a federal grant to pay for a planning study to determine the best use of the Liebling property. The council will decide whether to apply for that grant and five others at a special meeting at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, at the Gary Morava Recreation Center, 110 Camp McDonald Road.

Other proposed grant applications would include a $320,000 project to improve roads in the Quincy Park area.

When the owner of a property requests a municipality to annex his land, that constitutes a voluntary annexation.

An involuntary annexation is when the city annexes a site without a formal petition from the owner.

Voluntary annexation requires a municipality to touch more than just a corner of the property. A point of dispute is how much property a municipality must touch with an involuntary annexation. Wheeling's second attempt at annexation was an involuntary annexation request.

PHIA chief criticizes zoning law

The president of the Prospect Heights Improvement Assn. has criticized environmental regulations in the city's proposed zoning ordinance.

Terry Mongoven, PHIA president, was one of a handful of citizens at a public hearing Saturday on the ordinance held by the zoning commission.

The hearing will resume 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Gary Morava Recreation Center, 110 W. Camp McDonald Rd.

"IT SEEMS THAT the zoning administration is going to be functioning... as an environmental control person," Mongoven said. "I don't think that is the real intent of the ordinance."

The ordinance is intended to designate land usage, he said. Environmental agencies and commissions generally regulate matters such as emission of smoke, excessive noise, storage of explosive matter and noxious smells.

If a zoning administrator tried to enforce environmental regulations, he would have no time for zoning matters, Mongoven said.

Enforcement hopefully will be on friendly, rather than technical terms, Fred Darmstadt, acting commission chairman, said.

IF THE ZONING administrator sees black smoke pouring out of a smokestack, he will not immediately call for pollution meters and testing, Darmstadt said.

Instead, he will first go to the offending business and ask them to correct it. In most cases, he said he expects the businesses to look into the problem without any trouble.

If the business refuses to cooperate, then a consultant will be called in to perform the time-consuming testing, Darmstadt said.

"Hopefully, the number of violations which may appear... may not be that many," he said.

THE CITY WILL pay for the consultant used in pollution testing, if the tests prove no violation occurred, he said. Otherwise, the offender will pay.

He added Cook County includes the exact same environmental standards in its zoning laws as set forth in the city's proposed ordinance.

Violators of the proposed regulations would be subject to a fine of from $25 to $500 for each day the offense continues.

The ordinance would limit the amount of flammable fuels stored underground and above ground at businesses, and prohibit odors from drifting across lot lines. It would keep noise and smoke at levels inoffensive to human senses, Darmstadt said.

Copies of the proposed zoning ordinance are available at the Prospect Heights Library, 12 N. Elm St.

Balanced budget backed after Dist. 26 vote defeat

Residents in River Trails Dist. 26 Monday seemed reluctant to discuss the tax hike referendum defeated Saturday, but some had suggestions on what the board of education should do to ensure a balanced budget.

The tax increase proposal, which would have raised the district's education fund tax rate 74 cents per $100 of assessed valuation, was defeated 814 to 782. The current educational tax rate is $1.60 per $100 of assessed valuation.

In a random telephone survey of residents of about 25 homes, everything from holding another tax hike referendum to merging with two neighboring school districts was proposed as ways to balance the budget.

MORE THAN HALF of those surveyed either said they did not vote Saturday or would not reveal how they voted.

"The board needs to cut down some of their administrative expenses," said one woman who voted no. She suggested Dist. 26 merge with Mount Prospect Dist. 57, a district of comparable size south of Dist. 26, to cut costs.

Another resident suggested Dist. 26 consolidate with Wheeling Township Dist. 21 because Dist. 21 has stable enrollment.

"I would love to see us combine with Dist. 21 because it has people of child-bearing age in apartments and townhouses. They have the bodies and we don't," she said.

Joan and Samuel McAllister, 913 Burning Bush Ln., Mount Prospect, voted against the tax hike, Mrs. McAllister said.

SHE SAID DIST. 26 should raise its average class size as a money-saving step because "I don't think kids are worse off with 35 in a class. If the kid is gonna learn, he's gonna learn

Teachers ponder jobless future

Teachers in River Trails Dist. 26 say they are unsure whether they will have jobs next year in the wake of Saturday's defeat of a tax increase referendum.

They also expressed concern about the possible effects on the district if the board of education decides to cut back programs and increase class size from 26 to 35 students.

The board of education has said it will have to raise average class size from 26 students to 35, cut programs not required by state law and close another building to save enough money to offset a projected $400,000 deficit for 1978-79 and $700,000 for 1979-80.

"IF THEY CUT ONE speech teacher and one typing teacher, they eliminate those programs, because there's only one speech teacher and one typing teacher," said Don Kellen, assistant principal at River Trails Junior High School, 1009 Wolf Rd., Mount Prospect.

The programs that do survive the cuts will be "watered down because of the number of students," teachers union Pres. George Chase said.

Chase said he is not sure district residents believed the board intended to make cuts and also were concerned about what the recent property reassessment would do to their taxes.

"I believe what the board said," Chase said. "In two years (of looking at budget figures) I can't find where they were wrong."

ALTHOUGH CONSOLIDATION with neighboring school districts has been mentioned as a way to cut expenses, science teacher Bud Lewis said he doesn't think much money would be saved.

"If you look at the financial position (of nearby districts) they aren't that much better," he said. "You might cut some administrative costs, but you're just adding financial losers together."

Chase said teachers may take a more active role in a second referendum, if the board decides to hold one. Their role this time was to get out the vote, he said.

Teachers were not permitted to discuss the tax proposal in class unless students brought it up, he said.

"We'll probably get more involved next time," Chase said, "in between looking for jobs."

whether there's two in the class or 35."

Betsy Hall, 1409 Althea Dr., Mount Prospect, said the board should hold another tax increase referendum soon. She voted for the increase, she said, and would vote "yes" again.

"If they have to cut, start with gym, music and art teachers for the primary grades," she said.

Several residents, who said they did not vote in the referendum, said they did not receive much information about the proposal.

"I didn't see any signs up anywhere," said Jonelle Davis, 902 Barbary Ln., Mount Prospect. "None of my friends was discussing it. I thought maybe they had changed the date."

2 men held on marijuana counts

Two Northwest suburban men must appear in court Friday to answer charges of selling $1,800 in marijuana and possessing cannabis valued at $36,000.

Police said they arrested Michael

F. Johnson, 25, of 400 Touhy Ave., Elk Grove Township; and Wayne E. Wadulak, 19, of 304 Meier Rd., Mount Prospect, after the men allegedly sold undercover agents $1,800 worth of marijuana at 8:23 p.m. Friday in a parking lot at 1009 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

Det. Robert Quid of the Buffalo Grove police Dept., who initiated the investigation, and Arlington Heights and Cook County Sheriff's police then went to Johnson's trailer, police said.

Police searched the trailer and confiscated 7.7 pounds of marijuana, 7 ounces of hashish, $1,000 cash and marijuana-smoking paraphernalia, police said.

Police charged Johnson with delivery and possession of marijuana and Wadulak with delivery of marijuana. Johnson was freed after he posted $2,000 bail on a $20,000 bond, and Wadulak was freed after posting $500 bail on a $5,000 bond.

Both were ordered to appear Friday in the Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Dist. 21 candidates to appear at forum

Candidates for the Wheeling Township Dist. 21 Board of Education will appear at four candidates' nights before the April 9 election.

Candidates for the two 3-year terms will attend meetings at the following schools:

- Poe School, 2800 N. Highland Ave., Arlington Heights, Tuesday, 8 p.m.
- Cooper Junior High School, 1050

W. Plum Grove Rd., Buffalo Grove, Wednesday, 8 p.m.

• Irving School, 1250 Radcliffe St., Buffalo Grove, March 30, 8 p.m.

• Tarkington School, 310 Scott St., Wheeling, April 5, 8 p.m.

Each candidate will make an introductory statement and answer questions.

Dist. 21 candidates are Xenophon Daniel Kafkas, Linda Kurtzman, Herbert Stein and Stuart Weinstein.
